STUDIES IN · THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA 楞伽經之研究

STUDIES IN THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA

One of the most important texts of Mahayana Buddhism, in which almost all its principal tenets are presented, including the teaching of Zen

b١

DAISETZ TEITARO SUZUKI

ROUTLEDGE & KEGAN PAUL LTD LONDON AND BOSTON First published 1930
by Routledge & Kegan Paul Limited
Broadway House, 68-74 Carter Lane
London ECAV 5EL and 9 Park Street
Boston, Mass. 02108, U S A

Reprinted 1957, 1968, 1972 and 1975

Printed in Great Britain by Butler & Tanner Limited, Frome and London

No part of this book may be reproduced in any form without permission from the publisher, except for the quotation of brief passages in criticism

ISBN 0 7100 6330 X

PREFACE

While preparing a second series of Essays in Zen Buddhism, the author thought it desirable for the reader to know something more about the Lankāvatāra than had been sketched out in the First Series. To do this he had to study the sutra more thoroughly, and as he was doing so, his interest in it grew stronger and wider. Then, he came to the conclusion that his study of the Lankāvatāra might be published independently and even prior to the second series of Zen Essays. The result is this book now before the reader.

The Lankāvatāra is a Mahayana text difficult in more than one way to understand perfectly as to its meaning and also in its proper historical setting. But its importance as giving most of the fundamental tenets of Mahayana Buddhism has urged the author to publish whatever results he has gained so far in his study. They are no doubt short of being quite satisfactory from a strictly scholarly point of view, but the author's earnest wish is to open the way, if he could so hope, for further study and more thoroughgoing investigation of the text. Mahayana Buddhism is just beginning to be known in the West As to the appreciation of its full significance we have to wait patiently for some years yet to come

The first two parts of these Studies were already published in The Eastern Buddhist, but in the present work they have been revised fully and inaccuracies corrected as far as available. The third part is entirely new. As the Studies were not planned out as a whole from the beginning but have grown progressively in the author's mind, some repetitions have become inevitable. The second part dealing with the Lankāvatāra containing the philosophy of Zen Buddhism was written first. As it was being revised after its publication in The Eastern Buddhist, Volume IV, Nos. 3-4, for 1928, the thought suggested itself that the sutra must be studied also textually since there are still three Chinese and one (or two) Tibetan translations. The result was the first part of the present work, which appeared as an independent article in The Eastern Buddhist, Volume V, No. 1, for 1929.

The Lankāvatāra does not belong exclusively to the Zen school of Buddhism, it is also the common property of the Mahayana When it is studied apart from Zen, some of the important conceptions developed in the sutra, which do not necessarily belong to the philosophy of Zen, are to be expounded, however briefly Hence the third part of the present Studies, entitled "Some of the Important Theories Expounded in the Lankāvatāra"

The author has prepared for the benefit principally of his Japanese and Chinese readers a glossary of the Sanskrit technical terms found in the book. This he hopes to be of use in their perusal of Sanskrit Buddhist literature and at the same time illustrative of the methods of the Indian-Chinese translators.

It is the pleasant duty on the part of the author to acknowledge all the help given him in various ways by the following friends. Mr Dwight Goddard of Vermont, USA, who typed the whole manuscript while he was staying in Japan last winter; Professor Hökei Idzumi who gave valuable information whenever the author met with grammatical difficulties in reading the Sanskrit text, Mr Bunkyö Sakurabe who collected facts concerning the Tibetan translations of the Lankāvatāra; Professor Shizusato Sugihira and Mr. Kensei Yokogawa who read the proofs for typographical errors

The author further wishes most sincerely to thank Mrs L Adams Beck for her critical reading of the proof-sheets and for many valuable suggestions. He appreciates the genuine interest she has taken in his attempt to introduce to the West the Mahayana way of viewing human life and the world.

The work of proof-reading has also fallen to his wife who is always ready to help the author in his literary undertakings, and for which he remains ever thankful.

Finally, the author mentions with gratitude the substantial help and encouragement ungrudgingly rendered by his friend, Mr. Yakichi Ataka, of Osaka, without whom this work would probably never have seen the light so soon and in such favourable conditions. Whatever merit there is, according to Mahayana teaching, in the production of such a work as this, may be transferred over to the further growth of his spiritual welfare and also to that of all the author's other friends and fellow-beings.

DAISETZ TEITARO SUZUKI

Kyoto, September 1929

NOTE

The Author has not yet had an opportunity to consult the Tun-huang Manuscript in regard to the study of the Lankāvatāra Sūtra in China There is therefore no reference to this Manuscript in the Studies There are other parts of this work which the Author would wish to improve and where he would like to add the new material he has accumulated during the years which have elapsed since the first appearance of the book Unfortunately, however, he cannot find the time at present to make these alterations and must therefore let the new edition go forward as a reproduction of the old.

D. T. S

June 1957

CONTENTS

BODHIDHARMA by 收袭 (Mu-ch'1) Frontispi	ece age
Preface	٧
ABSTRACTS OF STUDIES	XI
1
AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA	3
п
THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA AND THE TEACH-
ING OF ZEN BUDDHISM	89
I. GENERAL SURVEY OF THE PRINCIPAL IDEAS EX-	-
POUNDED IN THE SUTRA	90
II (A) THE INTELLECTUAL CONTENTS OF THE BUD-
DHIST EXPERIENCE	153
(B) THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE BUDDHIST Ex-PERIENCE
III LIFE AND WORKS OF THE BODHISATTVA	202
\mathbf{m}
SOME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES EX-
POUNDED IN THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA	239
(I) THE DOCTRINE OF MIND-ONLY	241
(II) THE CONCEPTION OF NO-BIRTH
(III) THE TRIPLE BODY OF THE BUDDHA
(IV) THE TATHAGATA	339
(V) OTHER MINOR SUBJECTS	357
A SANSKRIT-CHINESE-ENGLISH GLOSSARY	279
INDEX	459

ABSTRACTS OF STUDIES

1

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA

		Page
Ľ	THE CHINESE AND THE TIBETAN TRANSLATIONS	3-15
	One of the important Mahayana texts, the title explained	9
	The first Chinese translation by Dharmaraksha	4
	The second (Sung) by Gunabhadra, which is the one given by Bodhidharma (建磨) to his first disciple Hui-k'ê (嫠可)	4
	The third (Wei) by Bodhiruci
	The fourth (Tang) by Sikshānanda	7
	Fa-tsang's (法藏) detailed remarks on the different
	Chinese translations	7
	A footnote concerning the way in which the
	Sanskrit texts were converted into Chinese	7
	The Empress Tse-t'ien's (則天武后) preface to the T'ang version, partially translated	10
	The three or five Sanskrit (?) copies utilised	11
	The fourth translation the best of the Chinese texts extant	11
	Two Tibetan versions	12
	Concerning the translator of the Tibetan Lankavatāra, No 1 and its contents	12
	The Tibetan Lankavatara No. 2, translated from
	Gunabhadra's Chinese	14
	A tabular comparison of the two texts. Tibetan and Chinese	14
	Generally one Tibetan translation for one Sanskrit text	15

II	COMPARISON OF THE CONTENTS OF THE THREE CHI-
	NISE AND THE TIBETAN TRANSLATIONS AND ONE	2
		15-20
	Table showing chapter-divisions in the different texts, Chinese, Tibetan, and Sanskrit following
	Facts suggested by the table	16
	Gunabhadra the oldest and simplest, in which the	1
	Ravana chapter, the Dharani, and the "Sagathakam' are missing .	16
	The Lankavatāra is a collection of notes loosely strung.	17
	Bodhiruci has more chapter-divisions, but no system	18
	A practical way of reading the sutra suggested	19
	Questions proposed regarding the history of Mahayana literature	20
	The Ravana chapter is a later addition, so is the
	Meat-eating chapter .	20
	The position and make-up of the "Sagūthakam," and its relation to the main text	21
	The rise of Nägärjuna predicted, and the teaching of the Pure Land	23
	The construction of the Lankavatara analysed	24
ш		25-37
.11	Comparison of extracts from the different translations, Gunabhadra (Sung), Bodhiruci (Wei), Sikshānanda (T'ang), and the Sanskrit text—
	each accompanied by an English translation	26
	Comparison of the opening gathas of Chapter II in Sikshānanda (T'ang) and the Sanskrit, showing how the one differs from the other in the order	- of the verses and also in the sense	34
IV
- •	INNER CONNECTION	37 -44
	The sutra takes a form of dialogue between Buddha and Mahāmati, which takes place on Mount dud and manament, anten course brace on when

CONTENTS	xiii
Lankä	38
thesis of the sutra	38
Buddha's answers also irrelevant	39
The 108 clauses of negation unintelligible as they stand in the text	41
	71
Concerning the existence of the fuller texts ac-	42
cording to Fa-tsang (法蔵)	46
The sutra proper begins after the 108 questions and clauses	43
	43
The two Japanese commentators deserving study	20
V. THE LANKAVATARA AND BODHIDHARMA, FATHER OF ZEN BUDDHISM IN CHINA	4-51
ZEN BUDDHISM IN CHINA	44
Bodhidharma (菩提潔勝) giving the sutra to	¥¥
Hun-k'ê (無可), as stated by Tao-hsuan (道宜), the author of Biographies of the High Priests 44
(唐高僧傳)	44
著傳燈錄) on the meident	45
The Pao-lin Chuan (資林傳)	45
Ma-tsu's (馬祖) relation to the sutra	46
The sutra as an antidote of poison	47
Ta-kuan (達觀) on Bodhidharma's relation to the	π.
Lankāvatāra	48
Ta-kuan's position justifiable to a certain extent	49
History of Orthodox Buddhism (釋門正統) attacks	10
Zen Buddhism of the Sung period	49
Why is the Tien-tai against the Zen?	50
VI THE STUDY OF THE SUTRA AFTER BODHIDHARMA IN	•
CHINA AND JAPAN	51–65
The transmission of the sutra from Hui-k'ê to his disciples, Na (那), Man (滿), and others	51
The life of Fa-ch'ung (法件) in the T'ang Broa-raphies, who was noted for his mastery of the

	Lankāvaiāra .	5
	The transmission of the sutra before him recorded
	ın detail	52
	Ch'ung's "Private Notes"	58
	The historical relation of the sutra to Zen Bud-dham	54
	The sutra also studied by the Yogācāra school of
	Buddhism	54
	The sutra and the Ekayāna .	5
	Fa-ch'ung and Hsuan-chuang (玄奘)	5
	Su Tung-pei's (蘇東坡) remarks on the four-fascıculı Lankāvatāra	56
	Chiang Chih-chi's (蔣之奇) preface to the Sung
	Lankāvatāra partly translated	57
	Facts to be inferred from this preface	59
	One thing misrepresented by Chiang Chih-chi	60
	Shên-hsiu's (神秀) relation to the Lankāvatāra	60
	The Lankavatara compared with the Diamond Sutra (Vagracchedikā) as to the difficulty of understanding it	60
	Why was the Lankavatara superseded by the 61
	Hui-nêng (監館) not so ignorant as ordinarily 62
	Fa-tsang's commentary (楞伽心玄義) on the Lan-68
		63
VII
	SUTRA—An English Translation 65-	85
	The translation chiefly done from the Sanskrit text
	edited by Bunyiu Nanjō	65
	The Buddha on Mount Malaya surrounded by Bodhisattvas declares his intention to teach
	Rāvaņa, king of Lankā and chief of Rākshasas	66
	Rayana with his floral chariot comes out to greet	_
	the Buddha	37

CONTENTS	xv
Bāvana sings a hymn to the Buddha	68
Rāvaṇa makes offerings to the Buddha	69
Tathagatas	70
Rāvana asks Mahāmatı to question the Buddha concerning the truth	71
Miraculous power is exhibited by the Buddha	71
Rāvana reflects on the illusory nature of existence	72 72
Rāvana is enlightened
realisation	73
culous power	75
The Buddha appears transfigured	75
The Buddha laughs loudly	76
His laughter excites curiosity	77
Mahamati feeling pity decides to ask the Buddha about the meaning of his laughter	77
The question is concerned with the dualism of	79
dharma (法) and adharma (非法)	80
discrimination	81
grasp of the empirical consciousness That we transcend the dualism of dharma and adharma when they are seen as images reflected	82
in a mirror The Buddha talks further about Prajñā (智慧), Ekāgra (一錄), and Svapratyātmāryajñānago-	83
Cara (自證聖智之境)	84

П

THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA AND THE TEACHING OF ZEN BUDDHISM
Preliminary Note 89-90)
The sutra as a Zen text.	Ì
Why was its study neglected? . 89)
1124 Miles 200 Miles and M
PART ONE
GENERAL SURVEY OF THE PRINCIPAL IDEAS
EXPOUNDED IN THE SUTRA 90-15	ţ
1 The Breadth of Mahayana Buddhism 90-9	j
Each sutra has its own message 9)
The Saddhar mapundar ika (法革經) and historical
Sākyamuni	L
The Suvarnaprabhāsa (金光明經) on the age of the
Buddha . 99	2
The Sulhāvatīvyūka (極樂莊嚴經) on the saving power of faith	š
The Prajñāpāramstā (殺岩波竊密經) on the conception of emptiness (silnyatā 室) · 9	Ŀ
The Avatamsaka (華麗經) as the consummation of
The Avalum sunu (24 ax ax) to the consumitation of	'n
Buddhist thought and life 96-10	Ĺ
2 The Teaching of the Lankavatara 96-10. A quotation expressive of the principal thesis of the sutra, which consists in the self-realisation of i
absolute truth	3
The quotation paraphrased
The sutra herein closely connected with the teach-	Ĺ
ing of Zen 101-10	ő
X 'I'RE AU-IMPOTIQUEE OF UN TIME! LIGHTER TO THE COLUMN TO THE COLUMN THE COL
The Mahayana ideas developed in a special manner	Ĺ
here . 105	ļ
The immost resultstion emphasized enterphasi-
Not necessarily Bodhicittotpāda (發著提心) but

CONTENTS	xvii
Pratyātmavedyagatīgocara (自證之境界) 4. The Inner Experience and Language 105 The inner perception and the Tathāgatagarbha
(如來藏)	105
Language inadequate to demonstrate the truth (artha)	106
Meaning to be distinguished from words	108
Words necessary as the finger pointing at the moon	109
They are again like lunar reflections	110 tion (vikalpa))114
various forms	110
	⊢121
To perceive things with the eye of wisdom	114
Māyā not in the sense of transiency	115
"Empty" (sūnya) does not mean void but transcending opposites	115
Māyā, magical creations, a painting, hair-net, fire- circle, and other imageries	116
The necessity of effecting a new orientation, that is, of being free from Viparyāsa (顏何) and Bhrānti (选感)	117
a revulsion (parāvriti 轉依)	119
bhūtam	120
value	121
7. What is Meant by Being Unborn (anutpanna)? 122 Things are unborn because they are neither created	2–127
nor uncreated The doctrine of no-birth (anutpāda) and eter-	122
nalism (śāśvata)	123
The ignorant fail to see reality, quoted.	124

xvin LANKAVATARA SUTRA

	Anutpattikadharmakshänti (無生法忍) discussed	125
	Various kinds of Kshanti	126
8	How is Nirvana Explained? . 127	–13 3
	Nirvana the abode of Suchness (tathatā)	127
	The result of revulsion	128
	The Hinayanist view of Nirvana is dualistic.	128
	Nirvana and Samsara are one	129
	Nirvana variously viewed by the philosophers
	(tīrthyakara 外道), quoted,	129
	The Mahayana conception of Nirvana	131
	On Emancipation (vimoksha), Mind (citta), and Discrimination (vikalpa), gathas 69-78 quoted from Chapter III	132
9.		_139
	Buddhatā (你體性) as transcending opposites, as above the four propositions (catushkotika)	133
	How to understand the meaning of the "barren woman's child''	135
	The idea of self-substance (svabhava) rejected	136
	The Essence of Buddhahood is above the category of being and non-being (sadasat), gathas 79-84
	quoted from Chapter III	137
	The doctrine of non-ego (pudgalanairātmya 人無
	(R) does not conflict with the notion of Tathagatagarbha	137
10	The World-transcending Knowledge 139	_142
	Three forms of knowledge (jñāna) distinguished	139
	Three aspects of supreme wisdom (āryajñāna 空智)	140
	Māyopamasamādhī (如幻三昧)	140
	The Bodhisattva practises Prajna in its highest form	141
13	1 The Doctrine of the Triple Body142	_146
	Dharmatābuddha (法性佛), Nishyandabuddha (所 流佛), Vipākabuddha (報佛), and Nirmānabuddha (化俳) · · · ·	142
	In what respect does the Dharmata differ from the

CONTENTS	xix
Nirmāna?	143
Nishyanda	144
Manomayakāya (意生身) and Nirmānabuddha	145
The story of the inner perception told only by the
Mülatathāgata	146
12 The Highest Knowledge and a First Cause 146	–148
A first cause denied by Buddhists	146
The highest knowledge beyond causality	147
Not meant for ordinary minds but for the Tathagatayāna	148
The ultimate truth of Mind-itself (cittamātram
唯心), gāthās 130-133 quoted from Chapter II	148
	-153
In what are the Tathagatas comparable to the sands of the Ganges?	148
Quotations from Chapter IV	149
The comparison not quite adequate, a case of "skilful means'' (upāyakauśalya 善巧方便)	149
The Tathagatas may be trampled like the sands, but their serenity is not disturbed	150
The Dharma-body indestructible like the sands
even by fire	151
Rays of light emitted by the Tathagata immeasurable like the sands	151
The Tathagata not subject to change in quality and in quantity	151
The Tathagata always ready to fulfil his vows
(pranidhāna 哲願)	152
The Tathagata walks along the path of Nirvana as the sands arrange themselves along the stream	152
Cut off the influence of habit-energy (vāsanā
智氣) and we are emancipated	152

PART TWO

(A) THE INTELLECTUAL CONTENTS OF THE BUDDHIST EXPERIENCE

	Philosophical background of the Buddhist experience	153
	The numerical method of analysis .	154
1	The Five Dharmas (pancadharma 五法) . 15	4-157
	The usage of dharma in the Buddhist texts	154
	The five Dharmas as five categories .	155
	(1) Name (nāma 名)	156
	(2) Appearance (nimitia 相)	156
	(3) Discrimination (vikalpa 分别)	156
	(4) Right Knowledge (samyagīāāna 正智)	157
	(5) Suchness (tathatā 如如)	157
2	The Three Forms of Knowledge (trayah svabhā-
		7–163
	The meaning and use of svabhāva (育性) and lakshana (湘)	157
	The Parikalpita (安計性) and the Paratantra (核
	起性) form of knowledge	158
	The Parinishpanna (回成性)	159
	Gäthäs 182-202 quoted from Chapter II, treating of the relation of the three forms of knowledge	160
	The relation of the Five Dharmas to the Three
	Svabhāvas	162
3	The Two Kinds of Knowledge . 163	165
	Samvriti (世俗) and Paramārtha (第一發) .	163
	Samvriti as related to Parikalpita and Paratantra	164
	Two kinds of Buddhi (覺智), Pravicayabuddhi
	(觀察智) and Pratishthāpikabuddhi (建立智).	164
	Four establishments (samaropa 建立)	165
4	The Twofold Non-ātman Theory 166	-169
	The meaning of $aiman$.	166
	The four marks of Mahayana Buddhism	166

	CONTENTS	xx i
	Non-Atman explained No-self-substance and Emptiness The world as free from subjectivity Egolessness of all things (nirāimānah sarvadharmāh 諸法無我)	167 167 168 169
	(B) THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE BUDDHIS EXPERIENCE	r
1	The Doctrine of Mind-only (cittamātra)169 Buddhist psychology has its own field The Yogācāra and the Mādhyamika as related to	-175 169
	the Lankāvatāra	170 171
	from Chapter II	171 171 173
2	Vishaya (境界) and particularisation No objective world but Mind-only	174 175
-	Ālaya (蒙徽)	176 176
	Visiāna (畿)	176 177 177
3,	Manovijñāna (意識) Vāsanā (智氣) The Theory of Mind-only (cittamātra 唯心)179	178 178 –182
	Mind-only means the absolute nature of the Alaya Citta as the whole system of Vijnanas Cittamatram and Vijnaptimatram or Prajnapti-	179 180
	mātram	181
4	gnosna (馬陽)	182 -186
	modes, and ranchon of the system	182

xxii LANKAVATARA SUTRA

	Väsanä in the Alaya and its revulsion .	184
	Aśraya-parāvritti (轉依), "the turning-up of the basis''	184
	The "intellect transcendental"	185
	The "turning" is returning	185
	On "external dust" (āgantu-kleśa, 客塵)	186
5	The Three Modes of the Vijnana 18	6-189
	The Vijnana described after its "marks" (lakshana)	186
	The relation between the activity and the nature of the Vijñāna	187
	The four causes contributing to the working of the
	Vijnāna	188
6	The Functioning of the Eight Vijnānas (八畝) 189	9-195
	The eight Vijñānas grouped under two heads .	189
	The Khyātı (現職) 1s the pure act of perception	190
	The Vastu-prativikalpa (分別事識) is the working of Manas	190
	Manas-and Manovıjñāna (未那識) ınseparable	191
	Mutual relationship of the Vijnanas known as csttakalāpa (心聚), a quotation from Chapter II	192
	The significance of the Alaya in the system, quoted from Chapter VI .	193
7	Tito T mileton of The tito	i –199
	Manas as the discriminating agency	195
	The Alaya compared to the ocean	196
	Manas' position in the Vijnana-system .	197
	The working of the system summarised	198
	The doctrine of momentariness explained in connection with the Vijñāna-system, quoted from	199
_	Chapter VI
8	The Mountains of Traine (BES).	-201
	The four things needed for a Bodhısattva's pre-	200
	paration for self-realisation	201
	Prania as immediate perception (pratyaksha 現堂)	247

CONTENTS

PART THREE

LIFE AND WORKS OF THE BODHISATTVA

1. Self-discipline and Adhishṭhāna (加持)	202-205
The importance of self-discipline	202
The power "added" by the Buddha	202
Two ways of Adhishthana
Quotation regarding addition and sustenance also regarding the earth playing music
Why the Buddhas' protection
2. The Purification of the Heart (cittadrisya	dhārā-vršuddhr)
Concerning the vows
The awakening of the thought of enlightenm	ent in
the Lankāvatāra
The process of purification	206
Purification by degrees (衛)	207
Purnication instantaneous (頓)	208
o The Wul-body (manomayakāya 意成身)	208-214
A body not fied to space-time relations	209
The will-body defined	200
Three kinds of the will-body	วาก
The second form of the will-body specif	ซะแลงห
described	211
Two kinds of death (cyute 死)	211
The will-body and the Nırmanakaya	212
The will-body and the "originally-abiding Dh (本住法)	arma''
	212
The realisation is like an old story	213
"The originally-abiding Dharma" and the	Alaya
universal	213
4. The Bodhssattva and Social Life. The net of social life and social Life.	214-217
OCIGE 1(14: MII*INDIMESTAV
Any need of saving the world? An empty world and a real compassionate he	215
world and a real compassionate he	eart. 215

XXIV LANKAVATARA SUTRA

	The opening verse of the Sung translation	215
	A quotation from the Ashtasāhasrikā-prajnāpāra-mulā-sūtra (八千切般岩波和密經) on the Bodhi-sattva's working hard for suffering beings	215
	A compassionate heart working without effort	. 210
	(anābhogacaryā 鲜功用行)	216
	Variance in the different versions of the Lankava-	210
	tāra, and the T'ang and the Sung text as representing the spirit of Mahayana Buddhism .	217
5		7–221
•	The five orders of beings	217
	mi Garage Comment	218
	The Sravakas (疾則)	218
	The Tathagata	218
	The fourth indeterminate order	219
	The Icchantika order (一闡提適)	219
	Two classes distinguished in this last order, and	210
	Dr Unrai Wogiwara on the etymology of acchantska	219
	The Bodhisattva as one who would never enter into Nirvana	220
	His ten yows	220
6	The Bodhısativa's Vows and His Effortless Works
•		-230
	The Bodhısattva's ınsight and his heart	221
	His ten vows as he enters upon the career of Bodhisattvahood	222
	His life to be free from discrimination	223
	The Bodhisattva up to the seventh stage (bhūmi)
	compared to a great king	224
	The Bodhisattva beyond the eighth stage called Acala (不動), compared to a man awakened from a dream .	224
	The dream illustration in the Lankavatara	225
	The analogy of the sea-faring boat in the Daśabhūmska Sütra	226

CONTENTS	XXV
The Bodhisattva and the Anutpattikadharmakshānti with its descriptive definition	226
Further notes on the Kshānti (足)	227
Some concluding remarks on Prajñā (智) and
Karunā (悲)	229
7. The Ten Vows of Bodhisattva Samantabhadra
(普賢十大順)230	-236
The ten vows forming the concluding chapter of the Gaṇdavyūha Sūtra (華嚴經入法界品)	230
(1) Paying respect to the Buddhas	231
(2) Praising the Buddhas	231
(3) Making offerings to the Buddhas	232
(4) Repenting of sins	233
(5) Feeling sympathetic joy for every good executed	233
(6) Asking the Buddhas to revolve the Dharmawheel	233
(7) Asking the Buddhas not to enter into Nirvana	234
(8) The Bodhisattva's whole-hearted devotion to the Dharma and to the life of a Buddha	234
(9) The Bodhisattva's life with and for all beings	234
(10) The Bodhisattva's merit all turned over to his fellow-beings	000
rema-nemis	236
TTT
Ш
SOME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES
EXPOUNDED IN THE LANKAVATARA
Prehmmary Note Regarding the Subjects to be Treated	239
(I) THE DOCTRINE OF MIND-ONLY (CITTAMAT)
1. One of the Principal Theories in the Sutra241-	-282
The "Mind-only" is the philosophical explanation	- of the inner experience which is the central subject of the sutra	941

XXVI LANKAVATARA SUTRA

	(124) 2- /05 00) 6. OI . TTT
	Gāthās (25-33) quoted from Chapter III	24
	The "Sagathakam," gathus (358-359, 366-370)
	quoted	243
	Shorter passages on the "Mind-only" quoted	244
2	Further Passages Quoted Relative to the Doctrine 24
	The "Mind-only" leads to the ultimate truth which is beyond language and discrimination	244
	The "Mind-only" and Prajna	24
	The "Mind-only" and the Bodhisattva's non-	ØT:
	entrance into Nirvana	245
	The "Mind-only" and the dualistic view based on	441
		040
	discrimination irreconcilable	246
	The "Mind-only" and eternal transmigration .	246
	The "Mind-only" and the Alayavijnana	247
	The "Mind-only" and logical controversies and the spiritual stages	247
	The "Mind-only" and a spiritual rebirth	248
3	The Citta and its Evolution 248	3–253
	Citta used in two senses	248
	Citta defined as the subconscious	249
	Citta and waves and the dancer	249
	Relation of Citta to Manas	250
	Manas acts in two ways	250
	Manas distinguished from Manovijñāna, the
	"Sagūthakam" (869-874) quoted	251
	Citta is more than the empirical mind, but its identification is difficult	252
	Citta itself pure and good and free from turbidity	253
4	T. OPA	_263
•	The lower ego and the higher ego	254
	The "Sagathakam" (757-771), quoted, on Citta,
	Tathāgatagarbha, Ālaya, Ego, and the Skandhas	255
	The existence of the self upheld	256
	This to be distinguished from the Ātman theory	257
	The noted stanza quoted from the Sandhinar-
	The Hotel statica duoted from the community	258

CONTENTS	xxvii
Cetta means "accumulation," ālaya "storage	258
The Tathagatagarbha and the Atman
Gāthās (9-17) on momentariness (kshanska	m 刹
那), quoted from Chapter VI
The Alaya and Tathagatagarbha
Queen Śrīmālā enlightened on the doctrin
Tathāgatagarbha
5. False Discrimination, No-birth, and Causation	264-267
Quotations from Chapter III, wherein the	Buddhist conception of "no-birth and no-de (sarvabhāvā anutpannānuruddhāh) is shov	en to be different from that of the philosophers	, and also what is meant by Nirvana	264
6 Proofs for the "Mund-only"	. 267-276
The analogy of a dream and magical creation
More analogical illustrations	268
Relativity of existence	268
Words and wrong representations	. 269
The "unborn" is above causation	270
Quotation from Chapter II, gathas (86-96)	, on the doctrine of no-cause (ahetu), no-birth (anutpāda), and emptiness (śūnyatā)	271
The logical necessity of transcending dualism	272
The "Mind-only" is based on an intuitive	experience	273
"Not a word uttered"	274
The twofold hidden teaching of the Buddha.	274
Reality eternally abiding and an ancient city	275
7. Some Concluding Remarks	276-282
Synonymous terms and phrases for the ultr	276
Cittamatra different from Vijnaptimatra	277
Mind as existing prior to subject and object .	278
Difference between Vijnantimatra and Virg	417 iona
mātra	DDV INTIA-

XXXIII LANKAVATARA SUTRA

The L chi-decides is not for the Vijfiaptimatra or
Prajimptimetre. out for the Cinamatra	251
(II' THE CONCEPTION OF NO-BIRTH (ANUTPA 253	-
1. The Projectories and the Last-sector253
The Projection of the Contactor	-231
and Acita (FO)	288
Its resching ""elerning"	254
The Makeyana sures not a philosophical system.	255
Both Actitate and Cittametra come from the no-	234
	236 birth view of existence
2. What is rice—by no-birth?	-2-2
	227
of empires ron-duality, and no-substance	255
Quotation on seven kinds of emptiness	233
The meaning of no-birth no-self-substance and	239
no-duality	حود
Teaching in words and inner meaning, the same	291 fact differently expressed
8. The Buddhis: Conception of Immortality232	-2:9
Hebeneti's question regarding immonelity and	292
the Buddha's ensurer quoted
4 No-birth Means Transcending Relativity295	-233
Non-discriminative knowledge and Anatystilka-	คระ
diarrabstārti (生生之)	225
Emptiness or No-birth and causation, gathes (101-	297
114), queted from Chapter III	221
5. No-birth. Transcerdental Trush, and Elernity Un-	201
thinkelle	-€9 ≥ 299
Relative truth and absolute truth	299
No-birth and supreme wisdom	300 301
Concerning the non-existence of the hare's hours	302
"Eternity unthinkable"	303 203
This to be realised by supreme wisdom
6. The Positive Conception in No-birth304	-9U f

CONTENTS	xxix
Further quotation on no-birth, etc	304
Nothing positive in this?
The conception of Suchness as a "mysterious thing" (妙物 vastu)	305
Causal transformations	306
(III) THE TRIPLE BODY OF THE BUDDHA 30	8-338
1 The Doctrine Outlined30	8-311
The Triple Body in the Yogācāra philosophy	308
The Dharmakāya (法身)	308
The Sambhogakāya (受用身)	308
The Nirmāṇakāya (化身)	310
The Nirmāṇakāya (化身)	1-314
The Hua-shên (化身), Ying-shên (應身), and Fashên (法身)	311
A tabular view of the Triple Body	313
3 The Dharmakaya in the Lankavatara 31
Great men are ummortal	314
The Saddharmapundarika on the eternal life of	!
the Buddha	314
The Suvarnaprabhāsa on the same subject
Rūpakāya (色身) and Dharmakāya (法身)	315
No Kāya-theory in the Lankāvatāra	816
Dharmakāya not as one of the Trinity, but as	l synonymous with the Tathagata	316
Tathāgatakāya	317
Dharmakāya identified with Sambhogakāya	317
Dharmakaya inconcervable	317
All Buddhas as Dharmakaya are the same	317
Dharmakāya and Manomayakāya or Nirmāṇakāya	318
Dharmakaya compared to the sands of the Ganges	318
Dharmakāya as Buddhatā	319
4. No Triple Body Theory yet but a Buddha Trunity 31	9-325
Trinity not in terms of Kaya (Body) but of	!
Buddha	319
Dharmatābuddha	320

The trinity of the Buddha	321
Nishyandabuddha and Vıpākabuddha and Pao-fo
(報佛)	322
Nīshyandabuddha and Sambhogakāya	323
Vipākabuddha	324
Tabular view of the Buddha trunity	326
5. The Nishyandabuddha and the Nırmāṇabuddha .325-	-330
The two not clearly differentiated	325
The "Sagāthakam" on Nirmānabuddha quoted	327
The "Sagāthakam" on the relationship of the Buddha trinity	329
6 The Vipākabuddha	-337
The idea of Vipāka and Karma	330
The body of transfiguration	331
Akanishtha Heaven and the original vows	332
The Vipāka and the Nirmāna	332
The Buddha trunity and the principle of individuality	333
The individual in various relations	333
7. The Triple Body in the Awakening of Faith in the	-
Mahāyāna335-	-338
990	0 2 6
(IV) THE TATHAGATA339-	-350
The Tathagata must leave his abode of mner re-	339
811S8(10H	999
A great compassionate heart and supreme wisdom	339
and Prinidnana (84)	340
The meaning of the term tuthuyutu	341
Tatnata and yathahhhulam	341
The varracultation the Lathagaid	ÛZŁ
The Ashtasāhasrikapraznāpāramitā on tathatā	342
(thospess)	345
The Tainagala and constituents of Doumsatty and
The Tathagata as he is and in his relation to	347 sentient beings The gathas (79-85) on the Tathagata quoted from The cathes (79_X5) on the Tathagata Quoted Live

Contents	xxxi
Chapter III	347
Tathagatahood further described as free from two-	348
fold death (cyuti), etc	348
Truth itself and discoursing on it	349
Siddhānta (宗) and deśanā (說)
The gathas (15-19) on this distinction quoted	350
from Chapter III	350
The One Tathagata	351
Mind, Buddha, and sentient beings (sativa) as of 352 one essence
designations	853
Different names of the Tathagata specified	354
Why such a variety of names?—the analogy of	2
lunar reflections in waters	354
The significance of the Pranidhana
The Buddha's power of helping others known as
"adhishthana"	and the second s
V) OTHER MINOR SUBJECTS	57871
The omission of Parināmanā (廻向) in the Lan	•
kāvatāra	. 357
Subjects to be treated here, specified
Ekayāna (一樂)
One principle throughout
Mahāyāna and Ekayāna and Dvayāna
Triyāna, Ekayāna, and Ayāna
The gathas (203-210) on the Vehicle quoted from Chapter II
The way to realise the Ekayana, that is, the vehicl of oneness
The Five Deadly Sins (五無間業)
Rather five spiritual deeds that direct us to the realisation of the ultimate truth
Those who commit the "external" ones (bāhyān)

XXXII LANKAVATARA SUTRA

	never attain the realisation except for the super-added power of the Buddhas	363
	Three kinds of Transformation-Buddhas (foot-
	note)	363
	The skilful means resorted to by the Bodhisattva and the conception of the Transformation-body	364
3	The Six Pāramitās (六波解密) 365	-367
-	Three kinds of Pāramitās described the worldly, the super-worldly, and the super-worldly in the •	366
	highest degree	900
4	The Four Dhyānas (四禪) the gāthās (161-164)
	quoted from Chapter II	367
	The gāthās (176–178) also from Chapter II	378
5	On Meat-eating (食肉)	-371
	The reason for this special chapter in the Lan-
	kāvatāra .	368
	Why animal food to be shunned?	369
	(1) Transmigration idea, (2) Compassion, (3)
	Altered physiognomy, (4) Inspiring terror, (5)
	Spiritual annoyance, (6) Filthy as food, (7)
	-	370
	Personal pollution	871
	The proper food of a Bodhisattva	OIT

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA

1. THE CHINISE AND THE TIBETAN TRANSLATIONS

The Latkävatära Sütra is one of the nine¹ principal Mahayana texts in Nepalese Buddhism; in China and Japan it also occupies an important position in the philosophy of Mahayana Buddhism as containing the doctrines of Mindonly, Tathägata-garbha, and Ālayavijñāna, and again in the literature of Zen Buddhism. The study of the sutra, however, owing to various reasons has not been very popular. The publication of the Sanskrit text in 1923 by the late Dr. Bunyū Nanjō has evidently revived the general interest in it though to a limited extent. The full title of the sutra in Sanskrit reads which, liberally translated, means "A Mahayana sutra called Lankāvatāra containing the noble orthodox teaching of Buddhism." Lankāvatāra literally is "entering into Lankā" while Lankā is one of the islands in the south of India It is popularly identified with Ceylon, but scholars are not quite certain about it "Entering" probably refers to the Buddha's coming over to the island. The sutra is supposed to have been delivered by the Buddha while staying there. The dialogue takes place between him and Mahāmati who is the chief one of the Bodhisattvas assembled there. It is unusual for a Buddhist sutra to be delivered in such an out-of-the-way place as Lankā, a solitary island in the middle of the ocean. Compared, however, with the

॥ आर्यसङ्गेलङ्कावतारी नाम महायानसूत्रम् ॥

The nine are: 1 Ashtasāhasrikā-prajāāpāramitā, 2. Gaņdav-yāha, 3. Dasabhūmīka, 4 Samādhirāja, 5. Lahkāvatāra, 6. Sadāharma-puņdarīla, 7. Tathāgata-guhyaka, 8 Lakta-ustara, and 9. Suvarņa-prabhāsa

Avatamsaka which was given partly in mythical heavens, the Lanka has a more earthy foundation even when it is regarded as preached for the benefit of Ravana, Overlord of the Rakshasas

Altogether four Chinese translations of the Lankavatāra Sūtra were made between about AD 420 and 704, of which we have at present three still in existence The first, in four fasciculi, was by Dharmaraksha, whose title was, "Master of the Law, Teacher of the Tripitaka. of Central India." According to 開元经.1 this was done from the same text which was later used by Gunabhadra, Bodhiruci, and Śikshānanda But this statement is not quite exact "The same text" here undoubtedly allows of a wide latitude of interpretation as we shall know below when a comparative study of the different translations is made. He came to China in 412 and settled in Ku-tsang (姑乾), the capital of the Northern Liang He spent eight years in translating the Mahaparinirvana-Sūtra in forty or thirty-six fasciculi, which he revised three times Though it is not exactly known when the Lankavatara was translated by him, it is likely that the work was taken up after the Parinirvaņa-Sūtra, that is, between 412-433 He was assassinated in 433 when he was forty-nine years old Roughly speaking, the first Chinese translation of the Lankāvatāra was produced about fifteen hundred years ago Unfortunately, this is lost The title was simply, The Lankā-Sūtra (楞伽經).

The second translation, also in four fasciculi, which appeared in 443 bears the title, The Lankāvatāra-Treasurs-Sūtra (海伽河波多麗寶經) and the translator is Gunabhadra, "The Law-teacher of the Tripitaka, of Central India". He came to China by sea in 435 On his way the wind ceased, the ship could not sail on, the supply of fresh water was exhausted, and the sailors did not know what to do

¹ Kar-yuan Lu, Fas IV, 38a (Kökyö Shom edition) This is a catalogue of the Buddhist Tripitaka compiled in the Kar-yaan era (713-741, AD), of the Tang dynasty

The situation, however, was improved by the mystic rites performed by Gunabhadra, for the wind began to blow more favourably and a pouring rain saved them from dying of thirst Among his translations we may mention the Śrīmāla, Angulimāla, Samyuktāgama, etc He died in 468 at the age of seventy-five ¹

The Lankavatara Sutra which is recorded as having been handed by Bodhidharma to his disciple Hui-k'ê was probably this Gunabhadra translation in four fasciculi It is strange that the first translation was lost so early as 700 when the fourth translation was issued. At the time of Tao-hsuan's Catalogue of Buddhist Literature in Great T'ang (大唐內典錄).3 which was completed in 664, mention is made of the first one. In Fas VIII of this Catalogue under the heading, "Those sutras which have been translated under the former dynasties and at present are kept among the Tripitaka collection" (歷代衆經見入藏錄), he refers to the "Lankāvatāra Sūtra in ten fasciculi, kept in one case." which is evidently that by Bodhiruci; and a little further down there is another entry "The Lankavatara in four fasciculi, two sutras in one case." This must be the case for the first and the second translations, as they were both compiled in four fasciculi. In the Kar-yuan Catalogue, however, which was finished in 730, Dharmaraksha's Lankāvatāra is mentioned as lost. The loss must have taken place even earlier as I stated before; for Fa-tsang (法權) who had much to do with the fourth or T'ang translation (done in the years 700-708) makes no reference whatever This was only forty years after the compilato the first tion of Tao-hsuan's Catalogue. It is quite unfortunate that we now have no means of seeing how far the agreements go between the first and the second translations, as they are both in four fasciculi and it is likely that they were made from the same original Fa-tsang¹ criticises the second (or Sung) translation as being not quite good as a translation, for it retains to some extent the original Sanskrit diction which puzzles even the intelligent Chinese reader adequately to understand the text

The Kai-yilan Lu, Fas V, 45b et seq. (the Kökyö Shoin edition).

* 大唐内典教, (Tai-t' ang Nei-tien Lu, a Catalogue of the Buddhist Books Compiled in the T'ang Dynasty), Fas. III, 64a (the Kökyö Shoin edition). This is an earlier compilation than the Kai-yilan Lu, as the preface is dated the first year of Lin-th that is. Ad. 664.

The third one (入榜伽經) in ten fasciculi is by Bodhiruci, "the Law Teacher of the Tripitaka, of Northern India" It was finished in 513, about one hundred years after the Sung translation Fa-tsang's remarks are "Although this translation is fuller than the preceding one, the original meaning is not fully expressed and errors are more apt to creep in" This may be true to a certain extent, but as we now have no original text of this third, or Wei, translation, there is no way of verifying this criticism of Fatsang There are, however, some points in it which are in

He died in 712, one of the greatest scholars in China and a most emment figure in the history of the Avatamsaka school of Bud He was a contemporary of Hsüan-chuang (玄奘), I-tsing (翁 淨), Hui-nêng (井起), Shên-hsiu (神秀), Śikahānanda, Dīvākara, Bodhiruci (all of the T'ang dynasty), etc When Hauan chuang came back from India, Fa-tsang was one of the learned scholars chosen by Haunn chuang to be his assistants or co workers in converting the Sanskrit texts into the Chinese language Fa-tsang, however, disagreed with Hauan-chuang in the interpretation of the texts and withdrew from the translation bureau Later, he worked with Sikshananda in the translation of the Avatamsala Sūtra and the Lankavatāra Sūtra, and illuminating lectures were given by him on the teachings of the Avatamsala for the edification of the Empress Tsê T'ien (頭天), who was one of the great women-rulers of China His 入楞伽心玄義 (Ju lèng chia hain haüan-i) is a abort expository treatise on the Las Lavatara Satra throwing much light on the understanding of the text and its philosophy, and in this he complains of the second translation being difficult even for men of superior intelligence to understand thoroughly, not to say anything about the ignorant and unlearned who are apt to give wrong interpretations to the text. This being really the case, as was confirmed later by Su Tung-per and Ch' rang Chib ch'1, noted Chinese scholars of the Sung dynasty, the understanding of the Lankatatara must have caused a great deal of trouble among scholars So far, however, in China and Japan the four fascicult one has had a far wider circulation than the ten or the seven fasciculi one better agreement with the Nanjo edition than with the others. It may not be quite fair to say that Bodhiruci put in his own words to help the reading of the text; the fact may be, perhaps, that his original was largely mixed with gloss and that he was not discriminating enough to reject it as such. This fact partly shows that the Lankāvatāra Sūtra, being a difficult text to understand, not only textually but doctrinally as well, was already in bad condition from a literary point of view when it was brought into China by these early Indian missionaries

The fourth Chinese translation, entitled the Mahāyāna Lankāvatāra Sūtra (大乘入楞伽經) in seven fasciculi, was produced in 700-704, and the chief translator was Śikshānanda. More details are known of this translation than of all the preceding ones as regards circumstances and persons concerned. The preface by the Empress Tsê-t'ien Wu-hou (則天武后) tells how it came to be translated once more by Śikshānanda and others; and, moreover, Fa-tsang, who was one of the Chinese scholars who were engaged in revising the translation by Śikshānanda, wrote a sort of commentary-introduction in which is given not only an analytical resume of the Lankāvatāra Sūtra, but a full account of the work itself. The following is quoted from the book whose Chinese title is 入楞伽心玄姿。

"With regard to the translation the four fasciculi one was done by Gunabhadra, Master of the Tripitaka, of India, at, Chih-huan Ssh (祗石寺), Tang Yang (丹陽), in the Yuan-chia (玄嘉) period (424-453) of Sung, Pao-yin (實製) the monk took down the master's dictation and Huikuan (慧觀) put it into writing 1 The ten fasciculi one

¹ 被激性整定性类。Chuan-yu literally means "to transmit words," and pr-shou means "to receive with a writing brush." As Gunabhadra who came from India probably could not speak Chinese well enough to make himself fully understood, Pao-yūn acted as a kind of interpreter; or Gunabhadra gave a literal translation of the original, which was done into literary Chinese by Pao-yūn, and this in turn was put into writing by Hui-kuan. When the Indian translators were not complete masters was done toward the end of Wei by Bodhiruci, Master of the Tripitaka, of India, who was engaged in the work at Yung-nêng Ssǔ (永遠寺), Lo-yang (洛陽)¹

"As to the present one, [that is, the seven fasciculi one], Śikshūnanda, Master of the Tripitaka, of Yu-t'ien (子屬), is the translator, who, after finishing the translation of the Avatamsaka at Fo Shou-chi Ssǔ (佛授記書), of the Eastern City, in the first year of Chiu-shih (八祝, A.D 700), was ordered by the Empress Tsĉ-t'ien to take up once more the task of translating the Lankāvatāra Before the work was completed, Śikshūnanda returned to the Capital and was given residence at the Chin-ch'an Ssǔ (清麗寺) The translation was roughly finished here, but before he had time to revise it he was allowed to return to his native land, by

of the Chinese language, there was always a "transmitter" who acted as a "go between " In some cases there were other scholars engaged in the work, whose office it was to see if the original meaning was cor rectly understood, or to put the translation into better classical style, or to see that the translation fully expressed the original ideas. This more or less round about way was mevitable, seeing that the translator had not a complete command of the two languages, Sanskrit and Chinese But it was in this way, too, that the Chinese translators so well produced the sense of the original, and it helped a great deal towards making Buddhism strike root firmly in the native soil From the linguistic point of view, however, there might have been something missed in the Chinese versions which is retained in the Tibetan texts So we read in the life of Hsuan chung as recorded in the Koryuan Catalogue (fas VIII, 78a) that "in the former days the sutras were translated in this way first, the original text was translated literally word by word, and this was turned round to adapt itself to the Chinese style of diction, and finally the words and sentences were rearranged and revised by those especially skilled in writing Thus, while going through so many hands, the original writing suffered much alteration, sometimes something added, sometimes something taken away But now in the case of Hsuan chuang everything was managed single handed, as words came out of his mouth they were at once written down and made a perfectly readable translation " Laterary accuracy was thus gained, but the strange fact is that some of these older translations are still in far better circulation than the newer ones,

According to the Kai-yuan Catalogue (fas VIII, 56a), Sang lang (份別) and Tao-chan (記述) put the translation into writing

Imperial order. In the second year of Chang-an (長安, 702), Mi-t'o-shan (强度山), [a Master of] the Tripitaka, came from Tu-huo-lo (吐火羅), who, before coming to China, had spent twenty-five years in India, thoroughly mastering the Tripitaka, and he was especially learned in the Lankāvatāra. By Imperial order he was requested to revise Sikshānanda's translation, aided by such monk-translators as Fu-li (復證), Fa-tsang (法裁), etc Fu-li was engaged in giving a final touch to the revised Chinese version, and an Imperial preface to the sutra was written, in which its merits were extolled.

"As to the four fasciculi translation, the rendering is not perfect, the wording is after the Western grammar (? 語順西書), which makes even men of superior intelligence confused, not knowing how to read it, while the ignorant and unlearned are apt to give wrong interpretations

"The ten fasciculi one is somewhat fuller in paragraphs and chapters [than the preceding one], but the sacred sense is not adequately expressed. When words are added and sentences are mixed in, the meaning grows murky, frequently causing errors, and the result is that the truth, bright and clear, becomes obstructed in its course on account of the local dialect.

"The Empress regretting this inadequacy ordered another translation to be made. The present one was made by comparing in detail five Sanskrit copies, and after examining the two Chinese translations. What was in accordance with [the true sense] was adopted, while what was not properly done was corrected. Many years of labour have thus ended in producing this splendid work, in which it is expected that the [original] sense is accurately repre-

٠

!

This is the translation of 方言, fang-yen, but what it really means is hard to decide; for the ten fasciculi version of the Lankawatara was not surely written in any other language than the Chinese just like the other translations May it, however, mean that Bodhruci's original was well mixed up with gloss written in the local dialect of his native Northern India?

sented and scholars may thus be saved from committing further errors "

The preface by the Empress Tse-t'ien, which is usually found attached to the T'ang edition, generally agrees with the account given by Fa-tsang, but there is one point that is not quite clear and seems to disagree with Fa-isang Among other things we have the following in the preface which concerns the translation itself. "Originally this sutra was brought here from the Western country (西周). in the era of Yuan-chia Gunabhadra translated it, but it had not a wide circulation Bodhiruci's version came out in the era of Yen-chang, but it misses the original meaning in many respects. Full of reverential thoughts about the transmission [of the Good Law], I earnestly wished for its prosperous condition. In the first year of Chin-shih, which corresponds in the cyclical commutation to the year of Lingtsu, and in the sixth month of the year, during the summer season, I went to Chi-feng (狂哭) to escape the heat and enjoy the cool air by the river Ying-shui (Mik), when at the San Yang palace another translation was produced The essentials of the three copies were inquired into and the perfect teaching was compiled into seven fasciculi Very Reverend Sikshananda of Yu-t'ien who is a learned monk of the Tripitaka, and Fu-h, a priest of Tai-fu-hsien Ssu (大冠先幸) and others [partook in the work], they have all the reputation equal to that of Tao-an (AK) and Hui-yuan (314), and virtues like those of Ma-t'eng (19 勝) and Fa-lan (法型), they are again all worthy to succeed in the steps of Nagarjuna, and have deeply delved into the secrets of Aśvaghosha, they are equally great in the fragrance of their moral conduct and in the flowers of their enlightened minds; the newel of their intelligence and the moon of their spiritual essence are both perfectly full therefore, they are capable of thoroughly understanding the mystery [of Buddhism] and manufesting the deepest significance of it The final copying [of the translation] was completed on the fifteenth day of the first month of the fourth year of Chang-an "

In this flowery composition by the Empress Tsê-t'ien, the phrase "討三本之要詮, to enquire into the essentials of (the) three books (or copies?)." is somewhat ambiguous. Does "san vên" refer to the three preceding translations, or to three Sanskrit copies which they utilised? As the first translation was already lost at that time, the "san pên" must mean three original Sanskrit copies which they then had at hand If so, the number does not agree with that mentioned by Fa-tsang as already quoted, for he says distinctly five comes instead of three. Could the character "three" be an error of the scribes? Fa-tsang who was a great scholar and an actual participant in the production of the seven fasciculi Chinese Lankavatara translation, has a better claim for authority, if choice is to be made between the literary remains of the time concerning the original texts, ete

However this might have been, it is clear that the seven fasciculi translation is apparently the best of all the Chinese translations of this important Mahayana sutra, seeing that it was produced by the joint labour of competent scholars both Indian and Chinese But, strangely, almost all the commentaries written seem to be based on the four fasciculi one by Gunabhadra, which is regarded as Bodhidharma's copy handed over to his disciple, Hui-k'ê

To sum up the first Chinese translation of the Lankāvatāra Sūtia was completed between a d. 420 and 430, a second one appeared ten or twenty years later and each was made into four fasciculi. It took over a hundred years for the third in ten fasciculi to appear, while over two hundred years elapsed before the fourth in seven fasciculi was published, which means that the latest one came out over three hundred years after the first

² One reason at least for the popularity of Gunabhadra is that it is the shortest of all the translations,

There are two Tibetan translations of the Lankavatarasatia preserved in the Kanjur

2 परिवास राजर गार विवास राज्य है से स्ट्रिंगस

ধ্যে কুম প্রমান কর্ দ্রী বাষ্ট্র মে বিষয় পর বিষয় । বি প্রিয়া প্রমান করে প্রত্যুক্ত Rin-po-chehi mDo-las Sans-rgyas Thams-cad-kyi gSun-gi Sñinpo Shev-bya-bahi Lehu) The Peking edition, SD. V, Case 5 (nu), Folios 208–313, the Narthang, SD, V, Case 5 (ca), Folios 298–456; the Derge SD., V, Case 5 (ca), Folios 192a–284a

The Lankavatara No 1 consists of nine volumes (ARI) and is divided into seven chapters (ARI) while the last one bears no special title. The Peking edition makes no mention of the translator, but the Narthang and the Derge are supplied with the following colophon "This is the Blessed One's teaching, translated from the Chinese book (ARI) by ENTA (Chos-grub), a man from RIV (hGos), and revised by himself" The question here is whether $\tilde{\mathcal{J}}$ (rGya) is to be rendered as China or as India,

The following section evelusively dealing with the Tibetan translations of the Lankavatara has been prepared by Mr. Bunkyö Sakurabe, of Otani Daigaku, Kyoto for it means both, and when it stands by itself, generally The translator whose name is & III (Chos-grub). 洪成 Fa-chang in Chinese, appears quite frequently in the Tibetan history of Buddhism as the one who translated the Tibetan into Chinese and the Chinese into Tibetan, and therefore there is no doubt that the colophon above referred to means that the Lankavatara is the translation by Chosgrub from the Chinese version But the fact that this translation agrees so well with the Sanskrit original edited by Dr. Bunyū Nanjō and the fact that the Peking edition says nothing about Chos-grub or about the Chinese version, prove against the colophon found in the Narthang and the Derge. The latter, therefore, must have crept into the text for some unknown reason, probably by mistake on the part of the scribes It is thus impossible to ascertain the translator and the date of the Tibetan Lankavatara No 1.

As to the contents it agrees most with the Sanskrit text and in a lesser degrees with Bodhiruci (Wei) and Śikshānanda (Tang).

¹ Concerning this translation from the Chinese and the translator, Chos-grub, see Pelhot's ''Notes à propos d'un Catalogue du Kanjur'' in the Journal Asiatique, July-August, 1914, pp 128—129 and pp 142—144, and also Mr Juntaro Ishihama's article on 法战 (Fa-chang) and Prof Toru Haneda's remarks on the article, both of which were published in 支那學 (Chinese Studies), Vol. III, No. 5, and also Prof. Haneda's Notes in The Chinese MSS Excavated at Tun-huang, Vol. I.

above as a great translator of the Buddhist texts in the Kanjur, and among the Chinese Buddhist sutras excavated at Tun-huang there are about ten works bearing his name as translator. He was a great Tibetan scholar flourishing in the first part of the ninth century and did most of his work at Hsiu-ta Ssū in Kan-chou (甘州·修多寺) and Yung-t'ang Ssū in Sha-chou (沙州·永唐寺)

The colophon regarding Wen-hui's commentary with which Chos-grub is said to have collated his translation is not quite clear. While there is no doubt that the present text is a translation of Gunabhadra's (Sung) four fas Chinese Lankāvatāra as we can testify by comparing the two, one variation at least we find in the Tibetan is the insertion of a passage after the gāthā on folio 213a, line 4. This passage does not appear in any of the texts Chinese, Tibetan, and Sanskrit, except Šikshānanda's, proving that the translator of the Tibetan Lankāvatāra No 2 had this Chinese version with him

The following is a tabular view of the corresponding pages between the Tibetan and the Gunabhadra text

Tibetan Lankāvatāra No 2, Peking edition			Gunabhadra's (Sung) Chinese Laul ävatära, Taisho edition of Tripitaka
Bampo	Folio	Lane	Fas Page Column Lo
I	208b	3	I	480	a
11	221b	3		485	8.	26
\mathbf{m}	234b	6	п	489	a	 -
IV	247b	2	ļ	493	a	5
V	262b	6	\mathbf{m}	497	c c
VI	274b	6	}	501	c	24
VII	285b	8	IV	505	ъ
VIII	298Ъ	8	}	509	6	25
	313a	8	:	514	Ъ

Generally speaking, there is just one Tibetan translation for each one of the Buddhist texts making up the Tibetan Trinitaka, and in this respect the latter differentiates itself from the Chinese; for in the Chinese Tripitaka there are frequently more than one translation for the same text. That there are two translations of the Lankavatara, one from the Sanskrit and the other from the Chinese, is an exceptional case. This can also be said of the Suvarnaprabhāsasūtra, which has also two translations, the one from the Sanskrit and the other from the Chinese of I-tsing cidentally, mention may be made of the statement in the Chili-yuan Lu (至元钱), the Buddhist Catalogue of the Chih-yuan Era (1264-1294), according to which the three Chinese translations of the Lankavatara are said from the same text (同本) and to correspond to the Tibetan text (跟 基本間); this is not exact, but there is no way here to find out whether this "Tibetan text" (森本) is in the singular or the plural

II COMPARISON OF THE CONTENTS OF THE THREE CHINESE AND ONE TIBETAN TRANSLATIONS AND ONE SANSKRIT TEXT

A detailed comparison of the three extant Chinese and One Tibetan translations and the Sanskrit text of the Lankāvatāra Sūtra has not been attempted yet, except as to chapter-divisions and other general aspects. Before I present my own views concerning the result of such comparison, a tabular view of the contents as regards chapter-divisions of the five texts will be given on the following page

This table shows at once (1) that the Gunabhadra version is very much simpler and shorter than all the others;

Of the three existing Chinese translations, Gunabhadra's is conveniently called the Sung version, Bodhiruci's the Wei, and Sikshananda's the Trang Or, according to the number of fasciculi into which each version is divided, the Sung is often called simply the Four Fasciculi, the Wei the Ten Fasciculi, and the Trang the Seven Fasciculi. In this chapter the translators' names will be used to designate the different versions.

(2) That Śikshānanda and the Tibetan¹ agree with the Sanskrit as regards chapter divisions, (3) That Bodhiruci has more chapter headings, i.e., is cut into shorter sections, (4) That in Guṇabhadra, the first and the last two chapters are missing altogether, (5) That Gunabhadra has practically no chapter-divisions whatever, and that while "Sarvabuddhapravacanahridaya" has the character "pin" (品) suffixed which is the usual Chinese term for the Sanskrit "parvarta" (division), this title is almost like a sub-title to the Lankāvatāra itself, as if it were another name for the sutra

What do these plain facts indicate? The first logical inference is that Gunabhadra being the oldest translation represents a more primitive Lankavatara than the others Possibly the later texts had these three extra chapters added during the one hundred years that elapsed between Gunabhadra and Bodhiruci That they were mechanically added is shown by their having no organic connection with the older parts As they have nothing new to propose, we should not have missed them, if they were not found in the text The first chapter where Ravana, the Lord of Lanka, asks the Buddha to deliver a discourse on his inner perception of truth, may superficially appear to be a sort of introduction needed for the development of the sutra; but there is no doubt that it was added later to supply this need, though really there was no such need from the beginning Rāvana chapter was prefixed when there was a need on the part of the later Mahayanists to get the sutra connected with the story of Ravana and Ramacandra as told in the Ramayana when the latter came to assume a definite form as an epic, which, according to scholars, took place probably in the third or the fourth century of the Christian era the Gunabhadra text stands, the interpolation of the Ravana

That the Tibetan lacks a special title for the seventh parivarta as distinguished from the one on meat-eating into which apparently the former is merged is probably due to mere oversight on the part of the scribe

Toble Shouma Chapter-duisions in the Different Texts of the Lankavatara

SAN~KRIT, Fa wis	ा रान्धाभिष्या (स्थानकाशिक क्षेत्रका	() ()	धृम्ह्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्य्			. अनियता
TIBP TAN (d de ume et un) m a de um et	1 दिवेंद्र दिवृष्णिकाण्डिका बार्केय चन्द्रम्बन्ध (माराणाणीकारकाणा)	. X8.8887373887	(* irrida imacimucaya)			, सेन्द्रम् द (Antrola)
SIKSHANDA (T' mg) (D 700-704, In 7 for	1 操液析 f 動品 III (Recordables shint)	2. 集一切认品	(Pertulparan			· 集论品 (Amts ifA)
ROPHERTY E (Mer) v B 717 m 10 fre	1 H G M	2 間 条 B: (Priven)	· 我一切佛法品	4 (Ruddfm.1117)	· 流血和Pe品	n 年表明 (Ninstat)	· 法才品 (Dillimitara)	·集份品 (Antruth)
GUVANIKADRA (Sung) vp 443, m 4 f.19	(k-inting)

1. 现 部 1. (Albritant) (Albritant) (Albritant)	- 10条版が即 (Surf incident) 10 加米治無冷語 12 加米治無冷語 12 日南子中子中 Drintys 10 加米治無冷語 12 日本治 東治 12 日本治 1	11 条 色 品 (Buddhar1)	12 共孫門品	13 指到對路 (Kahuuk 1) (Ksh unkr) ((cungJundiya. (cungJundiya. luk 1)	14 巻 夢 品 (Kshankt)	13 化 品 7 数 化 品 (tatic mussing) (Nairmalaukt)	16 遊食均品 8 斯食肉品 7 (中於13.4 (Minneal)hat (Minn	17 吃糖尼品 9 吃業尼品 (trile massing) (Dhirrai)	10 保留品 (title missing)
(Abhy my t)	भ , त्रष्यागतमित्यासित्य ८.च (T.ith/gritanity finitza)		, ह्यांगान	(Kslunka)		7 नेम्रियन (NarmJaaka)	8 मॉसभद्ध्या (Mansaddaksdraa)	و (نامالالا)	10 "स्नाष्टक्तम्"

incident has no special help to offer in the understanding of the sutra The chapter of Dharani is a very short one, occupying about three pages of the Nanjo edition. This was also added when Dharani began to enter into the body of Mahayana literature, which took place much later in the history of Mahayana Buddhism in India That the "Sagāthakam" was also a later attachment is easily shown from the examination of its contents, but for this I will devote a special paragraph later The Sanskrit text and Sikshananda are in full agreement as to chapter-divisions, which undoubtedly points to one original, but a more detailed exammation will reveal that the Sanskrit is more frequently A safe conclusion may be that m accord with Bodhiruci the texts were all different; while Bodhiruci belongs to a later redaction and is to a great extent mixed with notes and glosses, which fact makes it roughly 14 per cent. larger than Sikshananda

As I noted elsewhere1 the whole Lankavatara is just a collection of notes unsystematically strung together, and, frankly speaking, it is a useless task to attempt to divide them into sections, or chapters (parwarta), under some specific titles Some commentators have tried to create a system in the Lankāvatāra by making each paragraph somewhat connected in meaning with the preceding as well as the succeeding one, but one can at once detect that there is something quite constrained or far-fetched about the attempt. If this, however, is to be done successfully, the whole arrangement as it stands of the paragraphs must be radically altered, and this redaction is possible only by picking up and gathering together cognate passages which are found promiscuously scattered throughout the text, when for the first time a kind of system would be brought into the text As the present form stands, passages of various connotations are juxtaposed, and a heading indicating one of the ideas contained in them is given to the whole section, thus artificially separating it from the rest Gunabhadra has done the wisest thing by simply designating the entire sutra as "The Gist of the Buddha's Teaching" (buddhapravacanahridayam).

¹ Essays in Zen Buddhism, Vol. I, p. 75.

The chapter-divisions in Bodhiruci are sometimes more or less rational, while we find four or five sub-divisions made into one chapter in Sikshananda as well as in the Sanskrit In this case, one Bodhiruci section expounds generally one main idea in prose which is abridged at the end in metric form. To be exact, for example, the chapter entitled "Anityata" (Impermanency), which makes up the third chapter both in Sikshananda and in the Sanskrit text. is sub-divided in Bodhiruci into five sections or chapters first sub-divided chapter on "Buddhacitta" (Buddha-mind) treats of fifteen different subjects, none of which make any direct reference to "Buddhacitta" This title, therefore, does not at all indicate the contents of the chapter except m a most comprehensive way. The fifteen subjects treated in this Bodhiruci chapter on "Buddhacitta" are as follows (1) The Will-body (manomayakāya): (2) the five deadly sins; (3) Buddhatā; (4) the sameness of all the Buddhas; (5) that not a word was uttered for preaching by the Buddha during his long life. (6) being and non-being; (7) the experience-fact and preaching about it, (8) false discriminations. (9) language and meaning. (10) the three kinds of wisdom. (11) the nine changes taught by the philosophers; (12) the nine fetters and the true understanding, (13) the relation between false discriminations and existence; (14) that the world is a mere name; and (15) suchness and preaching about it 1 Each subject treated here is expounded in prose as well as in verse From this the reader can see how diversified are the topics treated and yet there is something more or less common running underneath them Of the rest of the five sub-chapters in Bodhiruci the one on "Dharmakāya" can be further divided This is practically a repetition of (7).

into two sections, each of which is composed of prose and verse. Except these two sub-chapters on "Buddhacitta" and "Dharmakāya," all the chapters in Bodhiruci consist regularly of prose and verse parts

The sixth chapter in Śikshānanda and the Sanskrit on "Momentarmess" (kshānaka), "Nirvana," etc., is divided in Bodhiruci into four sub-chapters "Buddhatā," "Pañcadharma," "Gangānanda," and "Kshanika." Each of these consists normally of two sections, one in prose and the other in verse, showing that one topic of thought occupies one sub-chapter. In the Tibetan Lankāvatāra No. 1, which generally agrees with the Sanskrit, the chapter corresponding to "Nairmānika" has no title of its own Taking all in all, the chapter-divisions of the Lankāvatāra in whatever version are, to say the least, arbitrary and of later elaboration.

A good practical way of reading the sutra without displacing the contents from their original setting will be to isolate in most cases one prose part with its metric repetition from another such part: and this will naturally cut up the text into many short independent sections.1 There are some prose paragraphs without any corresponding gatha-section, for instance, in the earlier part of Gunabhadra and in the second chapter of the other versions. Gunabhadra, when thus treated, will yield a little over fifty separate, individual chapters The impression one gets after perusing the sutra carefully is that such independent statements dealing with the principal ideas of Mahayana Buddhism at the time when the sutra was compiled, were notes taken down by the author without any intention of arranging them in order. As was the case with the Pali Nikāyas, each of these independent paragraphs was perhaps a complete sutra in itself. Later, perhaps when there was a need for editing them under a Kumārajīva divides his Chinese translation of the Diamond Sutra into thirty-two sections, each of which consists of an irregular number of lines, sometimes of two or three lines only. This is quite a rational way of reading the sutra. Perhaps Kokwan Shiren followed Kumārajīva in his treatment of the Lankāvatāra.

title, they came to be known as the Lankāvatāra, or the Buddhapravacanahridaya So long as we do not know how the Mahayana sutras were produced, all that we can say about their compilation has the nature of conjecture

Were the sutras compiled one after another in time succession? Did one presuppose the existence of another, so that we can definitely trace the development of ideas backed by such documents? Or did they develop in different localities each one without knowing another? Is it possible as a matter of historical fact to arrange the Mahayana sutras in time sequence? Does logical development always coincide with historical events? That is to say, are fact and syllogism one? Does the one always and by nature precede, or follow the other? Until these questions are historically solved there will be many problems unsolved in connection with the make-up of the Lankavatara Sutra

That the first introductory chapter in which Ravana invites the Buddha to Lanka to discourse on the truth inwardly realised by him, is a later addition, is also shown in the relation between the prose part and the verse this chapter, there is no such relation whatever between the two portions as is to be found in other parts of the sutra, that is, there is here no verse part that corresponds to or repeats the sense of the prose the whole chapter is one complete piece, there is nothing fragmentary about it, it is altogether different in tone and style from the other parts of the sutra, the way the theme is developed and the style of the writing are quite distinct In this respect, the chapter on meat-eating resembles this introductory one, although it has the verse part in correspondence with the prose The meat-eating chapter may be a later addition, also, in spite of its being found in Gunabhadra It does not seem to fit in perfectly with the main part of the sutra author of the Lankavatara just put it in at the end as a kind of appendix, not standing in any organic relationship with the sutra proper, where highly metaphysical subjects are treated? And later did it accidentally get incorporated into the body of the sutra as forming a part of it?

Now we come to consider the last chapter entitled in the Sanskrit edition, "Sagāthakam," which occupies a special position in the structure of the Lankāvatāra. As the title indicates, it is composed entirely of gāthās. In the Sanskrit there are 884 couplets taking up about one fourth of the whole text. Of these over 200 are found in the main text itself; therefore, about 680 gāthās are newly-added ones. In Sikshānanda these repetitions are systematically excluded from its gāthā chapter, while in Bodhiruci everything is thrown in and with something more. There are 890 quatrams in Bodhiruci and 656 in Sikshānanda, showing the relative amount of stanzas in each, as four Chinese lines are generally equivalent to one Sanskrit stanza

As for the contents and their arrangement there is utter chaos in the "Sagāthakam" No doubt they chiefly concern the same themes as treated in the main text, but there are some original theses, and it is often hard to see why and how they came to be thrown in here. To read the "Sagāthakam" properly, therefore, it must be cut up into so many small portions, somtimes taking just one solitary sloka as expressing a complete idea, i.e., as a sort of aphorism. When this cutting-up process is brought to an end, we see that the "Sagāthakam," which appears on the surface as one solid chain of gāthās, is nothing but a heap of rubbish and gems.

How did this conglomeration come to be affixed to the Lankāvatāra? Why do we find so many gāthās taken from the sutra proper and mixed up with the rest? And the way they are mixed is most strange, seeing that while some are taken in bodily just as they are found in the sutra itself, others are broken up and interspersed fantastically among the rest. Was this done intentionally? Or did it happen just so? Does the "Sagāthakam" suggest an earlier origin than the sutra, in which the gāthā part was later elaborated in the prose in the way of commentary? But there is some reason to suppose that the "Sagāthakam" as a whole and in detail is later than the sutra proper, partly because it contains some historical matter which has no place in it. but chiefly because the thought expressed here seems to be more definite and developed than that in the body of the sutra. Taking all in all, the relation between the "Sagāthakam" and the rest of the sutra is a mystery because we have as yet reached no sure ground in the historical study of Mahayana literature in India This much we may say that the "Sagathakam" can easily be made into an independent text expounding the principal truths of the Mahayana philosophy. It reminds one of a notebook in which a student of the Mahayana took down some of the more important ideas as he learned them orally from his master, and in which at the same time he also put some other matter for his own benefit, though not necessarily in close relationship with the main contents of the notebook In this respect the "Sagathakam" shares the characteristics of the sutra as It may be noticed that Sikshananda calls this part of the text the "Chapter of Gathas" and Bodhiruci simply "General Chapter" (Sāmānya? 終品), while the Sanskrit edition is prefaced, "Listen to the jewel-made Gathas preached in the Lankavatara-Sutra, and free from the net of the [erroneous] views, [and containing] the wonderful Mahayana teaching." and concludes with this

The number includes occasional triplets.

॥ इत्यार्थसङ्गेलहावतारी नाम महायानसर्व सगायकं सनासमिति ॥

This may be rendered into English "Thus is completed the Mahayana Sutra, the noble orthodox Dharma, called Lankāvatāra, together with the gāthās" According to the postscript thus translated, the gāthā section does not seem to have any special title for itself. For if sagāthakam means "that which is together with the gāthā," the designation must be regarded as applying to the whole sutra of Lankāvatāra and not to this last section exclusively made up with gāthās What helps this interpretation is the Tibetan postscript which reads:

येदे-सर्दे हि-श्चेद-स-हिन्य-ह्यू ॥ द्येद-सर्दे हि-श्चेद-स-हिन्य-ह्यू ॥

This generally coincides with the Sanskrit except the one most important phrase, $\frac{2}{3}\frac{2}{3}\], which may be Sanskritised yathālabdham. This means "as far as obtainable" or "as is available," which in the present case points to the possible existence of more gāthās or text belonging to the Lankāvatāra proper, showing at the same time the incompleteness of the sutra as we have it now "Yathālabdham" is also found at the end of the Āryamanījuśrīmūlakalpa ("Trivandrum Sanskrit Series," LXXXIV, 1925, Trivandrum), which is one of the sutras having no usual sutra-ending, and also at the end of the Gandavyūha, which to all appearance is a complete sutra.

Incidentally, reference may be made to certain lines in the "Sagāthakam," which are often quoted by followers of Shin Buddhism as teaching Amitābha's Land of Bliss and also predicting the rise of Nāgārjuna. The lines are

"The matured (vaipākīka) Buddhas, and manifested (nairmānīka) Buddhas, and beings, and Bodhisattvas, and [their] lands—they are in the ten quarters (140).

"The flowing (nisyanda) Buddhas, the reality (dharma) Buddhas, the transformed (nirmāṇa) Buddhas, and the manifested ones (nairmāṇika)—they all issue from Amitābha's Land of Happiness (141)."

Further. "'My vehicle of self-realisation is beyond the attainment of the philosophers' [Asked Mahāmati,] 'Pray tell me, after the Teacher passes, who would keep this up?'

"After the time when Sugata is passed away and no more, O Mahāmati, know that there will be one who can hold up the eye [of the Dharma].

"'In the southern part of this country called Vedali there will be a Bhikshu of great and excellent reputation known as Nāgāhvaya, who will destroy the one-sided view of being and non-being.

"'He will, while in the world, make manifest the unsurpassable Mahayana, and attaining the Stage of Joy, pass to the Land of Happiness'" (163-166)

In the Sanskrit text we have, instead of Nāgārjuna, Nāgāhvaya, and of course we do not know whether they are one person, or whether there is a mistake on the part of the scribe. From these passages alone it is difficult to infer anything historical concerning the age of the Lankāvatāra as a whole, and also its possible relation to the doctrine of Amitābha's Land of Bliss (sukkāvatī).

In short, the Lankāvatāra-sūtra may be divided as regards its textual construction into the following six specifically definable parts.

- 1 The Ravana chapter;
- 2 The section devoted to the enumeration of the socalled 108 questions and 108 terms,
- 3 The prose section in which no verses are found;
- 4. The prose-and-verse section, which may be subdivided.
 - The part devoted to a discourse carried on principally in verse, for instance, paragraphs on the system of Vijñānas;
 - The part containing ideas fully developed both in prose and verse, for example, meat-eating chapter;
 - c The part containing ideas fully discussed in prose and supposedly recapitulated in verse, as in the greater parts of the text;
- 5 The Dhāraņi section,
- 6. The "Sagathakam."

III. Examples of the Textual Differences

This is not the place to dwell extensively on the textual differences between the various versions of the Lankavatara. for to do so would involve many questions which properly do not fall into an introductory part such as we intend this section to be. No doubt a detailed comparison of the different translations with the Sanskrit text, as well as with each other, will be instructive from the point of view of text-criticism and also from that of the history of Chinese Buddhist literature as translations But as the writer wants to limit his attention chiefly to the inner significance of the sutra as an exposition of Zen Buddhism. and also as a most valuable text of the Mahayana, let us be content with the following extracts from the three Chinese translations and the Sanskrit text. A comparison of these extracts,1 which may be considered as characteristic of each text, though they have been selected somewhat at random. will throw much light on the nature of the respective litera-I have tried to give a literal English translation of the Chinese as far as it could be made readable

¹ Sung—the Kökyō Shoin Edition of 1885, 貴大, 二十六丁 a; Wei—六十三丁 a; Tang—百八丁 b; Sanskrit Nanjo edition, pp. 228–229.

SUNG (GUNABHADBA)

- 1 Further, O Mahumati, the five entegories (dharma) are Appearance, Name, Discrimination, Suchness, and Right Knowledge
- 2 O Mahlmati, Appearance is such as is manifested in places, forms, colours, figures, etc.—this is called Appear tince
- As when having such and such appearances, [things] are called a jar, etc, and by no other designation,—this is known as Name
- 4 Mind and what belongs to mind, whereby virious names are set up and all kinds of appearances are brought out into view, such as a jar, etc.,—this is called Discrimination.
- J That Name, that Appearance—they are ultimately unattainable; [when] there is no intelligence from beginning to end, [when] there is no mutual conditioning in all things, and [when] Discrimination which is not real is put away,—this is known as Suchness

WEI (BODHIRUCI)

- Further, O Mahamati, the five categories are Appearance, Name, Discrimination, Suchness, and Right Knowledge
- 2 O Mahimati, what is Appearance? Appearance is what is seen in colours, forms, figures, which are distinctive and not alike,—this is called Appearance
- O Mahamati, depending upon this appearing of things, there arises Discrimination, saying that "this is a jar", "this is a horse, a cow, a sheep, etc.," that "this is such and such", "this is no other thing"—this, O Mahamati, is called Name
- 4 O Mahümatı, depending upon these objects thus named, their characteristics are dis tinguished and made manifest, whereby such various names are set up as cow, sheep, horse, etc. This is called the Discriminating of mind and objects belonging to mind.
- 5 O Mahamati, when one surveys names and appearances even down to atoms, one never sees a single reality, all things are unreal, for they are due to the Discrimination stirred up in one's deceiving mind

¹ For Vilalpa, Sung has 姿想, and not 分别 as in Wei and T'ang

T'ANG (ŚIKSHĀNANDA)

- Further, O Mahamatı, the five categories (dharma) are: Appearance, Name, Discrimination, Suchness, and Bight Knowledge.
- 2 Of these, by Appearance is meant that which we see, each differs in colour, form, figure, etc. This is known as Appearance
- 3 Depending on these Appearances, names such as lars, etc, are set up, saying, "this is such and such," "this is no other,"—this is known as Name.
- By mind and what belongs to mind, various Names are set up, all kinds of Appearances are brought out into view, this is known as Discrimination
- 5 That Name, that Appearance [—they are all] ultimately non-existent they are only due to the Discrimination by a perturbed mind of [things] mutually [related]. When one thus surveys the world until the disappearance of intelligence takes place, one has what is known as Suchness

SANSKRIT

- Further, O Mahāmati, the five categories (dharma) are: Appearance (mimita), Name (nāma), Discrimination (vikalpa), Suchness (tathatā), and Right Knowledge (samyagjādna).
- 2 Then, O Mahlmati, by Appearance is meant that which is known as form, shape, distinctive figure, image, mark, etc. They are seen as Appearances.
- 3 From these Appearances, ideas are formed such as a par, etc, saying, 'This is it,' 'This is no other,'—this is Name
- 4 O Mahāmati, what is known as mind or as belonging to mind, whereby a Name is pronounced as indicating Appearance, or objects of like nature [are recognised]—that is Discrimination.
- 5 That Names and Appearances are ultimately unattainable [as realities] when intelligence is put away, and that these things are not recognised and discriminated in their aspect of mutuality,—this is Suchness.

Buddh: in this case is to be understood as "vikalpa-lakshana-grahabhinivesa-pratishthapika" as is distinguished on p 122.

SUNG (continued)

- Beality, exactness, ultimate end, self-nature, the unattainable,—these are the characteristics of Suchness
- 7 This is what I and other Buddhas have conformed to and entered into; we universally, for the sake of sentient beings, preach this according to the truth; [by us] this is set up and brought out into their view.
- 8 When one conformably enters into right realisation which is neither discontinued nor permanent, no Discrimination arises, and one is in conformity with the noble path of self-realisation, which is not the state attained by all the philosophers, Śrāvakas, and Pratyckabuddhas,—this is known as Right Knowledge
- 9 O Mahāmati, these are called the five Dharmas (categories); the threefold Svabhāva, eight Vijāānas, twofold Nairātmya, and all the Buddha-teachings are included therein
- 10 Therefore, O Mahlmati, you should discipline yourself in your own way and also teach others, but do not follow others

- WEI (continued)
- 6 O Mahimati, what is known as Suchness is non emptiness, exactness, ultimate end, selfnature, self-substance, right seeing,—these are the characteristics of Suchness
- 7 By myself and the Bodhusttvas and [other] Buddhas who are Tathagatas, Arhats, and All knowing Ones, it is said that though names differ the sense is one
- 8 O Mahamata, these are in conformity with Right Knowledge, neither discontinums nor permanent and without Discrimination, and where Discrimination does not prevail one is conformed to the superior wisdom that is realused within one's immost This is different from self the false views entertained by all philosophers, Sravakas, Pratyckabuddhas, and from the meorrect views held by the partisans
- 9 O Mahimati, in the five Dharmas (categories), the three Dharmalakahanas, the eight Vijfiānas, the two Nairātmyas, all the Buddha-teachings are included in the five Dharmas.²
- 10 Mahlmati, you and other Bodhisattva-mahäsattvas should discipline yourselves in order to seek this excellent knowledge O Mahlmati, you know the five Dharmas when you

Strangely, this is repeated.

T'ANG (continued)

- O Mahimate, reality, exactness, ultimate end, source, self-nature, the [un-]attainable,—these are the charactensities of Snahness.
- 7 This has been conformed to and realised by myself and all [other] Buddhas and is disclosed as it really is and 'preached by us
- If one in conformity with this has an insight [into the nature of it] as neither discontinuous nor permanent, no Discrimination is stirred, and one enters upon a state of self-realisation which goes beyond the realm obtained by the philosophers and the two ranas. This is known as Right Knowledge.
- O Mahimati, in these five Dharmas (categories), the three Svabhavas, the eight Vijālnas, and the two Nairātmyas, all the Buddha-teachungs are wholly included
- 10 Mahimati, with these categories you should by your own wisdom be skilfully conversant and also make others conversant therewith Becoming conversant therewith, the mind is confirmed and is not led away by another.

SANSKRIT (continued)

- 6 Suchness may be characterised as truth, reality, exact knowledge, limit, source, self-substance, the unattainable.
- This has been realised by myself and other Tathagatas, truthfully pointed out, recognised, made public and widely shown
- 8 When one, realising this, rightfully understands it, neither as discontinuous nor permanent, he becomes free from Discrimination, conforming himself to the superior wisdom in his immost consciousness, which is a state other than that attained by the philosophers and is not the attainment of the Sravakas and Pratyekabuddhas This is Bight Knowledge.
- 9 O Mahāmati, these are the five Dharmas (categories), and in these are included the three Svabhāvas, the eight Vijūānas, the two Nairātymas, and all the Buddha-teachings
- 10 Then, O Mahāmati, reflect well in this by yourself and let others do [the same], and do not allow yourself to be led by another.

SUNG (continued)

11 Then, wishing to reiterate this sense the World honoured One preached the following gathas.

The five Dharmas, the three Svabhavas, And the eight Vijalnas,

The twofold Narratmya,—
They include all the Maha
yana

Name, Appearance, Descrimi-

[These belong to] the twofold aspect of Svabhava;

Right Knowledge and Suchness,—
They constitute the Perfection ispect

SUNG TEXT IN THE OPIGINAL CHINESE

- 1. 位夫大獎 五法名 相 名 安包 如 如 正智.
- 2 大悲 柘香 若啟所 形相 色像等 現 是名岱相
- 3. 若技术如是相 名亞無事 即此非 此 是改成名。
- 4. 施設表名 模示結相 病等心心法 足名妄想
- 5 役名後相 畢竟不可作 始於極稅 於內法無疑律 庭不實宴包 是名 如如

WEI (continued)

are not led by other teachings

Then the Blessed One repeated this in the gathlis

The five Dharmas, the Svabharas

And the eight Vijfiānas,
The twofold Nairūtmya—
They include all the Mahayana

Name, Appearance, and Diserimination—

These three Dharmas are aspects of the Svabhāva, Right Knowledge and Such-ness—

These are aspects of the First Principle

WEI TEXT IN THE ORIGINAL CHINESE

- 1 使失大楚 五法 相 名 分別 鼠如 工智、
- 2 大學 何名名為相 相者 色 形相 默似 建不如 是名為相
- 3 大慰 依依法相 起分別相 氏是氧 此是牛 バ 羊等 此法如是 如是 不異 大學是名為名
- 4 大华佐於依法立名了別示項核相 是故立後 拉径名字 牛羊馬等是 名分別心心及法
- 5 人誌 都算名相乃至微症 常不見 一法相 對法不實 以虚妄心虽分 別故

T'ANG (continued)

SANSKRIT (contanued)

11 Then the Blessed One repeated this in the gathas.

> The five Dharmas, the three Svabhāvas, And the eight Vijāānas.

The twofold Narratmya,—
[They] wholly include the Mahayana

Name, Appearance, and Discrimination,

Are included in the two Svabhavas,

Right Knowledge and Suchness,--

They are Perfect Knowledge (paramshpannalalshana).

T' ANG TEXT IN THE ORIGINAL CHINESE

- 1 復永 大梦 五法者 所謂相名 分期 如如 正智。
- 此中相省 所謂見色等形狀各期 是名為相
- 8 依彼諮相立無等名 此如是 此不 異 是名任名
- 4 施設未名 顯示點相 心心所法 是 名分別。
- 5 彼名彼相學完經有但是妄心展轉分別 如是觀察乃至是被 是名如如。

11 So this is said

The five Dharmas and the Svabhāvas,

And the eight Vijālnas, The two Nairātmyas,—

They comprise the whole Mahayana

Name, Appearance, Discrimmation —

These are two aspects of Svabhava,

Right Knowledge and Suchness —

These are aspects of Perfect Knowledge (parinish panna).

THE ORIGINAL TEXT IN SANSKRIT

- punaraparam mahamate puncadharmo nimittam nama vikalpas tathata samyagjainam ci
- 2 tatra mahāmate numittam yat samsthlnākriti - viseshākāra rūpādi-lakshanam drisyate tan numittam
- 3 yat tasmın nimitte ghatādi samjālkritakam evam idam nānyatheti tan nāma
- yena tan nāma samudīrayati nimittābinvyaūjakam samadharmeti vā sa mahāmate citta-caitta-samsabdito vikalpah
- 5 yan nāma-nimittayor-atyantānupalabdhitā buddhi-pralayād anyonyānanubhūtāparikalpitayād eshām dharmānām tathateti.

SUNG (continued) 6 真實 決定 究竟 自性 不可得 被 是如相 7 我及豬佛 廢順入處 普爲染生 如 實演說 施數顯示於後

- 8 院入正是 不斷不常 妄也不起 随 順自從臺越 一切外道 厚間 綠堡 所不得相 是名正智
- 9 大卦是名五法 三種自性 八〇 二 福年我 一切佛法悉入其中
- 10 是故大辞 當自方便學 亦敬他人 勿陷於他

11 解時世容欲重宣此義 而說得而官

五法三自性 及與八種獻

二種与有我 悉議摩訶衍 名相處妄想 自性二種相 正智及如如 是則然成相

WEI (continued)

- 6 大勢 育真加者 名爲不顧 決定 學克盎 自性 自證 正見 真如相
- 7 我 及點答應 及點佛如來 應正邁 知 觀名異義—
- 8 大勢 加是等随順 正智 不斷不常 細分則 分別不行處 隨顧自身內 證潔智 薩路一切外道 磨聞 肆支 像等徑見 明潔不正智中
- 9 大舒 於五法 三法相 八種職 二 種無我 一切佛法皆入五法中
- 10 大蒜 汝及路客廠 原和医 公求勝智 医齿管型 大蒜 汝知五法 不 随他数故
- 11 補時世事主責傷首 五法自體相 及與八種議 二種等我法 採取賠大乘

名相及分别 三法自體相 定智及真如 是第一套相

T'ANG (continued)

- 6 大蒜 武實 決定 宪范 根本 自性 (不)可得 是如如相
- 我及諸佛 随原證入 如其實相開 示演觀.
- 若能於此路原悟解 離斯戲常 不 生分別 入自證底 出於外遺二乘 境界 是名正智。
- 19. 大蒜 此五種法 三性 八譜 及二 無我 一切佛法哲皆孫畫
- 20. 大肆 於此法中 按應以自智善巧 通達 亦勸他人令其通達 通達此 已 心則決定 不廢他性
- 初時世界函說項首 五法三自法。及與八種誌。 二種經費法 普提於大乘。

名相及分別 二種自性操. 正智與如如。 名則顯成相。

SANSKRIT (continued)

- 6 tattvam bhūtam niscayo nishthū prakritih svabhāvo 'aupalabdhih tat tathūlakshanam
- msylnyaisca tathlgatair anugamya yathävad desitam prajüaptam viviitam uttlinikritam.
- 8 yatrinugamya samyagavabodhinucchedāśāiśvatato vikalpasyāpravvittih svapratyātmiryajñānānukūlam tirthakura-paksha-parapaksha-śrāvaka-pratyekabuddhāgathlakshanam tat samyagjñānam.
- ete ca mahāmate pañcadharmāh, eteshveva trayah svabhāvā ashtau ca vajñānām dve ca naurātmye sarvabuddhadharmās cantargatāh.
- atra te mahāmate svamatikaušalam karanīyam anyaiš ca kārayitavyam na parapraneyena bhavitavyam
- 11. tatredam neynte:
 pańcadharmāh svabhāvaśca
 vijnānānyashta eva ca, dve nairātmye bhavet kritsno mahāyāna-parigrahah ndma-nuntta-samkalpāh svabhāva-dvaya-lakshanam, samyagjiānam tathātvam ca
 parinishnanna-lakshanam.

A comparison of these four texts will give us some insight into the nature of each version, the variations are not necessarily due to the translators' individualism, they must have existed already in the original texts. Let me give another parallelism, this time one in verse are from Chapter II, the opening gathas of Mahamati comparison will be only between the T'ang and the Sanskrit. as the Wei more or less agrees with the Sanskrit, while the Sung agrees with the T'ang, though the Sung as well as the Wei lack two verses corresponding to (4) and (5) of the Sanskrit The most significant disagreement between T'ang and Sanskrit concerns "the awakening of a great compassionate heart " According to the Mahayanists, a heart is to be awakened in one that is above all forms of attachment and yet that feels suffering in the world as its In Sung and T'ang this idea is emphatically presented, whereas in Wei and Sanskrit it is missing this, can we not infer that there were at least two quite different texts of the Lankavatara from the early days of its existence as far as these gathas are concerned? I do not know how the present Sanskrit text could be made to read like Sung and T'ang The philosophy of the Lankavatara asserts the emptiness or the not-being-born of existence, and it is quite right to say that the world is like a dream or transcends birth-and-death, but we must remember that this position is not one of absolute nihilism. because the sutra teaches the reality of Prania itself or the truth of the "Mindonly" (cittamātra) So far the Sanskrit gāthās here reproduced accord well with the principal ideas of the Lankavatāra, but there is another element in the Mahayana, which is love or compassion, and when the world is surveyed from this viewpoint, it is filled with sufferings, sorrows, and undesirable These are also in a way dreamy happenings, but compassion sees them in another light and strives to eradicate them by all sorts of "skilful means" For this reason, Sung and T'ang are preferable here to Wei and Sanskrit

T'ANG'

The world transcends birth and death, it is like the flower in the air, [transcendental] wisdom cannot be qualified as being or non-being, and heart is awakened.

vet a great compassionate

- 2 All things are like the mirage, they are beyond the reach of mind and understanding, [transcendental] wisdom cannot be qualified as being or non-being, and yet a great compassionate heart is awakened.
- 3 The world is always like a dream It is beyond minism and eternalism. [Transcendental] wisdom cannot be qualified as being or non-being, and yet a great compassionate heart is awakened
- 4. The was know that there is no self-substance in a person, nor in an object, and that both passions and their objectives are always pure [in their nature] and have no individual marks; and yet a great compassionate heart is awakened in them.
- 5 The Buddha does not abide in Nirvana, nor does Nirvana in the Buddha; it goes beyond

SANSKRIT^a

- When thou reviewest the world with thy wisdom and compassion, it is to thee like the ethereal flower, and of which we cannot say whether it is created or vanishing, as [the categories of] being and non-being are inapplicable to it.
- 2 When thou reviewest all things with thy wisdom and compassion, they are like visions, they are beyond the reach of mind and conscionsness, as [the categories of] being and non-being are inapplicable to them.
- 3. When thou reviewest the world with thy wisdom and compassion, it is eternally like a dream, of which we cannot say whether it is permanent or it is subject to destruction, as [the categories of] being and non-being are inapplicable to it
- The Dharmakaya whose selfnature is a vision and a dream, what is there to praise? Real existence is where rises no thought of existence and non-existence
- He whose appearance is beyond the senses and senseobjects and is not to be seen

² This partly appears in the section entitled "The Lankavatara and the Teaching of Zen Buddhism." See p 214, et seq. The translation is from the Sung, but it mostly agrees with the Tang as is observable here.

The verses are quoted in my Resays in Zen Buddhism, pp. 76-77.

T'ANG (continued)

and the enlight- by them or

- enlightenment and the enlightened, also being and nonbeing
- 6 The Dharmaklyn is like a vision, like a dream, and how could it be praised? When one realises that it has no substance, it is birth less, this is called praising the Buddha
- 7. The Buddha has no marks belonging to the senses and sense-objects. Not to see is to see the Buddha How could there be praising and blaming in the Munif
- 8 When one sees the Muni so tranqual and detached from birth [-and death], this one not only in this life but after is free from attachments has nothing to grasp
- 1 世間競生技 公如查空草 智不得有無 而與大企心
- 2 一切法如幻 这般於心. 物不得有每 而與大此心
- 3 世間知知多 这些於斯常 智不得有無 而與大應心
- 4. 知人法每我 烦悯及谓烟 常清净与相 而奥大寇心
- 5 佛不住逗戲 逗髮不住佛 这般是所是 若有若非有

by them or in them, how could praise or blame be predicated of him, O Muni?

SANSKRIT (continued)

- 6 With thy wisdom and compassion, thou comprehendest the egoless nature of things and persons and art eternally clean of the evil passions and of the hindrance of knowledge because they both are without signs [of individuality]
- Thou dost not vanish in Nirvana, nor does Nirvana abide in thee, for it transcends the dualism of the enlightened and collightenment as well as the alternatives of being and non-being
- S Those who see the Mum so serone and beyond birth, are detached from cravings and remain stainless in this life and after
- utpāda-bhanga-rahito lolah hhapushpa samnibhah, sadasan-nopalabdhas te prajňayā kripayā ca te.
- 2 māyopamāh sarvadharmāh eritavijūāna varjitāh, sadasan-nopelabdhas to prajūsjā kripavā ca te
- 3 siśvatoceheda-varjataś ca łokah sripnopamah sadā, sadasan-nopalabdhas te prajūavā kripavā ca te.
- 4 māyī srapna srabhārasya dharmakāyasya kah stavāḥ, bhārānām nihsrabhārānām yo 'nutpādah sa sambhavah
- 5 indriyārtha-visamyultum adriāyam yasya darsanam, praśamsā yadi vā mindā tasyo-

T' ANG	(continued)	SANSKRIT (continued)
知無性無 7. 佛無根您 云何於辛	多 云何可稱數 生 乃名稱數佛 相 不見名見佛 尼 而能有數數	cyeta katham mune 6 dharma-pudgala-nantimyam kleśa-jäcyam ca to sadā, visuddhamānimittena prajūa- yā kripayā ca to 7. na nirvāsi nirvāne na nirvā- nam tvayi samsthitam, bud- dha-boddhavya-rahitam sad- asat-paksha-varjitam 8 ye pasyanti munim šāntam
	尼 家 新 這 雅 生 世 雅 著 年 所 取	evam utpath-varystam, te bhonts niropādāsā shāmutra niraūjanāh

IV. A FURTHER EXAMINATION OF THE SUTRA AS TO ITS INNER CONNECTIONS

Having finished what I wished to remark, though sketchily, about those chapters which are wanting in Gunabhadra, and which, therefore, can logically be judged as later additions, I proceed to make some general statements about the sutra as to its form and contents and their inner connections

The text takes throughout a form of dialogue between the Buddha and the Bodhisattva Mahāmati No other Bodhisattvas or Arhats appear on the scene, though the dialogue is supposed to take place in an assembly of the Bhikshus and Bodhisattvas as in other sutras Gunabhadra fixes the scene of the sutra at the summit of Mt Lankā in the Southern Sea, but in it there is no mention whatever of Rāyana, who,

This series of glthlis reappears in the "Sagāthakam," gg 1-6, except the glthlis 4 and 5 which are missing in the "Sagāthakam"; and the order in the latter runs thus 1, 3, 2, 6, 7, 8 The variations are: "visuddham-animittena "for "visuddham-animittena "for "visuddham-animittena "for "na mirvāna mirvāne na mirvānam ..." for "na mirvāna mirvānena mirvānam ..." for "te bhonti mirupldana ..." (8).

in Bodhiruci and Śikshānanda, plays an important rôle, though in the first chapter only, as the initiator of the discourses that follow

Mahāmatı opens the dialogue by praising the virtues of the Buddha, whose wisdom sees that the world is a shadow but whose love embraces all suffering beings, Mahāmati then proceeds to ask the World-honoured One about one hundred and eight subjects (ashtottaram praśnaśatam) The Buddha answers "Let sons of the Victorious One ask me, and, O Mahāmati, you too ask, and I will talk to you about my mner realisation (pratyātmagatigocara)"

Now we ask, "What is the relation between the Buddha's inner realisation and Mahāmati's 108 questions, about which he wishes to be enlightened? Are all these subjects concerned with the realisation itself?" There must be some connection between the Buddha's replies and Mahāmati's questions. If not, they are certainly talking about things of no concern to each other

Let us see, however, what questions issue from the lips of Mahamatı now and what are the subjects he is interested The questions are set forth in gathas 12-59 inclusive, in Chapter II of the Sanskrit text But what a conglomeration! Some of them are, indeed, quite to the point as they refer, for instance, to the origin of intellection (tarka) and mental confusion (bhrants), and to their purification, emancipation, Dhyana. Ālaya-vijnāna. Manovijnāna. Cittamātra, Non-ego, relative truth, phenomenality of existence, truth of suchness, the supreme wisdom (āryajñāna), Buddha of Transformation, Buddha of Recompense, absolute Buddhahood, enlightenment, etc But at the same time there are questions concerning medicine, certain mythical gardens, mountains, woods, the capturing of elephants, horses, deer, the gathering of clouds in the sky, rules of prosody, the six seasons of the year, racial origins, etc These do not seem to be properly asked of the Buddha, who is not a college professor, or rather a primary school teacher, but the master of spiritual enlightenment. Why are the contents of the 108 questions of such a mixed character?

Junaputra, that 18, Bodhisattva

What is more astounding are the answers—that is, answers that are supposed to enlighten the questioner—given by the Buddha. The gāthās 61-96 (inclusive) are the words of the Buddha, who is the wisest man in the world and who is willing to disclose all the secrets of the Mahayana teaching that have been taught by all the Buddhas. He states in the beginning.

"Birth, no-birth, Nirvana, emptiness-aspect, transformation,—[all these are] without self-nature (asvabhāvatva); the Buddhas born of Pāramītā;

"Śrāvakas, sons of the Victorious One, philosophers, formless deeds (arūpyacāriṇa); Mt. Sumeru, the great ocean, mountains, isles, lands, earths:

"Stars, the sun, the moon; philosophers, deities, and also Asura; emancipation, Self-control, the Psychic Faculties, the Powers, Dhyānas, Samādhis,

"Nirodha and the miracles, the Bodhyangas, and even the Paths; Dhyānas and Apramānas, Skandhas, and going and coming;

"Samāpatti and Nirodhas —they are mental disturbances, only words. The mind, will, intelligence, non-ego, the five Dharmas—[so are they too] "1"

So far, the answer, whatever be its exact purport, is more or less cogent to the main ideas of the Lankavatāra; but what follows is strange not only from the doctrinal point of view but from literary construction. They are often not answers but questions, some of which are mere repetitions of the questions themselves. For instance, the Buddha is made to answer the 108 questions in this way:

² How far this is a correct rendering of the gathas (62-66, pp. 29-30) is rather difficult to say; for the original merely enumerates all these items, sometimes repeating, and the grammatical relation between them is not to be definitely settled.

"How are the elephant, horse, and deer caught? You tell me How is the conclusion (siddhānta) drawn from the combination of cause (hetu) and illustration (drishtanta)? (69).

"What is meant by doing and being done? by various forms of mental confusion and the truth? They are both of "Mind-only" and are not visible, that is, not objective (drisya) There is no gradation of the stages (70)

"What is the turning of the imageless?" Tell me, what about books, the medical sciences, artistic skill, the arts? (71)."

A glance is sufficient to see what kind of an answer this is Questions and answers are curiously mixed up, and trifles and grave matters, too The gathas go on more or less like this until the Buddha concludes thus

"O Son, thou askest me suchlike and many other questions Each is in agreement with the [right] form, having nothing to do with erroneous views I will tell thee now what the perfect doctrine is Listen to me! According to the teaching of the Buddhas I will make a declaration in complete sentences of 108 clauses (padam) O Son, listen thou to me (97–98)"

With what [right] form are the questions proposed by Mahāmati supposed to be in conformation? From what erroneous views are they to be regarded as free? Whatever we may say about them, one thing is sure that all these questions and answers are incoherently strung together, and we fail to find any logical interpretation to the whole body of the gāthās making up the first part of the Lankāvatāra Sātra

Is some historical background needed to get a clue to the solution? Another source of confusion is discovered when we go on with Buddha's so-called 108 clauses, which are enumerated soon after. Evidently these clauses have nothing to do with the questions, although the number, which seems to be a favourite one, at least with the Buddhists, is substantially the same. The 108 clauses preached by the Buddhas of the past are a string of negations, negating any notion that happened to come into the mind at the moment, apparently with no system, with no special philosophy in them. These negations are another example of the irrationality of the Lankävatära.

Here is inserted the word "one hundred (satam)" in all the texts except Sikshänanda. The insertion makes the confusion worse confounded.

"At that time Mahāmatı, the Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva, said to Buddha, 'O thou Blessed One, what are these one hundred and eight clauses?'

"The Buddha said: 'What is termed as birth, is not birth; what is termed as eternal, is not eternal; what is termed as form, is not form; what is termed as abiding, is not abiding.....'"

The negations go on like this concerning varieties of things not only religious and philosophical but of common experience. They comprise such terms as self-nature, mind, emptiness, cause and condition, passions, purity, master and disciple, racial distinctions, being and non-being, inner realisation, contentment with existence, water, number, clouds, wind, earth, Nirvana, dreams, mirage, heaven, food and drmk, the Paramitas, the heavenly bodies, medical science, industrial arts, Dhyānas, hermits, royalty, sex, taste, doing, measuring, seasons of the year, plants and vines, letters, etc. The number of terms, according to our calculation, seems to be a trifle less than 108, but this does not matter very much. What does matter is the subject-matter and the ultimate significance of the negations. Are all these negations from the point of view of absolute Sunyata philosophy? Why are the denials merely enumerated and no explanations given? Is it meant that these subjects are what engaged the attention of all the Buddhas of the past? But for what? Are they all important notions for the emancipation of sentient beings! Are they the subjects to be treated in the body of the Lankāvatāra? If so, how is it that the eight Vijāānas, which occupy a position of chief interest in the sutra, are not at all mentioned here? In short, the presence of these so-called 108 questions (praśna) forming the first section of the Lankāvatāra proper, can safely be cut off as not essentially belonging to the teachings

A similar problem must have been in the mind of Fatsang (法藏), one of the helpers in the translation of Śikshānanda and a commentator of great importance, when he wrote the following in his 支義 (hsuan-s)

"According to what I understand, the Lankavatara exists in three forms the largest contains 100,00 ślokas, which, as is mentioned in the Kashuang Catalogue of the Tripitaka, is preserved in the mountains of Nan-chê-chu-p'an (古连俱 婺國), of Yu-t'ien (丰間), not only of the Lankavatara but of ten other sutras, the largest of which consists of 100,000 ślokas each The second large edition of the Lankavatara has 36,000 ślokas of this mention is made in all the Sanskrit texts whose translations we have here In this edition a chapter is devoted to answering in detail all the 108 questions and Mi-t'o-shan (確陀山), Master of the Tripitaka from T'uhuo-lo (叶水羅), is said to have personally studied the text while in India It is also said that in the Western countries there is at present a commentary written by the Bodhisattva Nāgārjuna on this 36,000 sloka text of the Lankavatāra The smallest, the third text, contains only a little over 1,000 ślokas, and is known as the Lankahridya, which translated means, 'the substance of the Lanka' The present text 18 Formerly, it was designated as 乾栗太心 (ch'ien-li-t'ar The Lanka in four fasciculi is the one in or hridaya-hsin) which further abridgement was effected "

The existence of the three kinds of the Lankāvatāra text may be mythical as is the case with other sutras, of which a tradition of similar nature is stated, but it is probable that the Lankāvatāra which we have at present in the three Chinese translations and in the Nanjō Sanskrit edition is an abridgement of a larger and fuller text, that is, selections made from it by a Mahayana scholar who took them down in his notebook for his own use; and that in the larger text not only the 108 questions (praśna) but the 108 clauses (pada) are systematically answered and expained. In any event, something more than the present text of the Lańkāvatāra is needed to understand it thoroughly and harmoniously.

The Lankavatara proper may be said to begin after the these "Onestions" and "Clauses", each 108 in number: what follows here concerns the system of Vijnanas and their functions But this paragraph does not last long, and after making some sketchy and not quite intelligible statements about the Vijnana, it slides off into other subjects, such as seven kinds of self-nature or category (bhavasvabhava). seven kinds of truth (paramārtha), manifestations of selfmind, the problem of becoming, the world-conception and the religious life of certain Sramanas, who are evidently Buddhists, etc. When these subjects have received barely an outline treatment, the text returns to the Vijnana, and after that a variety of subjects is discussed as is to be seen later when an index of the contents of the whole sutra will be given. but always in reference to the attainment of the inner re-Though the sutra makes frequent detours away from the main subject, which is inevitable from the nature of the textual construction, it revolves around the truth that the whole system of Mahayana philosophy is based on such notions as Šūnyatā (emptiness), Anutpāda (being unborn), Anabhoga (being effortless), Cittamatra (mind-only), etc., and that all these notions cannot be grasped and taken into one's life in their true perspective unless a spiritual insight is gained, when there issues transcendental knowledge and supreme enlightenment.

We can thus almost say that there are as many subjects treated in the Lankāvatāra as it can be cut up into so many separate paragraphs, each paragraph consisting sometimes of a prose part and its corresponding verse, but sometimes in long or short prose part only, not accompanied by verse. The same subjects are sometimes repeated more or less fully. The Japanese commentator Kokwan Shiren (虎関節鍊), who is also the author of a history of Japanese Buddhism known as the Genko Shakusho in thirty fasciculi (元亨釋書三十卷), divides the Gunabhadra version of four fasciculi into eighty-six sections including the last chapter on "Meat Eating." This is the most rational way of reading the sutra, as in each of his sections only one subject is treated

There is another thing which we must not let escape attention here. It is the refutation of the philosophies of other schools which were flourishing then in India. The Lokayata, Sānkhya, Vaiseshika, and other schools are cursorily reviewed as not in agreement with the Buddhist teaching, or as not to be confused with it

V. THE LANKAVATARA AND BODHIDHARMA, THE FATHER OF ZEN BUDDHISM IN CHINA

That the Lankāvatāra Sūtra is closely connected with the history and teaching of Zen Buddhism in China has already been noted in the first volume of my Essays in Zen Buddhism, and I wish to present here a more detailed historical account of this relationship According to Taohistorical account of the High Priests (道宣, 唐高僧傳), Bodhidharma (菩提達摩) handed his copy of the Lankāvatāra in four fasciculi to his first disciple, Hui-k'ê (聲可), saying, "As I observe, there are no other sutras in China but this, you take it for your guidance and you will naturally save the world" By the non-existence of "other sutras," Bodhidharma evidently meant that there were at that time no sutras other than the Lankāvatāra in China; which would serve as a guide-book for the followers of Zen Buddhism. This idea will grow clearer as we come to Taoyuan's Records of the Transmission of the Lamp (道原, 传登錄) in which the author states:

¹ The commentary called the Butsugoshin Ron (常語心意) in eighteen fasciculi was completed in 1325. He was a most learned Zen scholar and died in 1346 when he was sixty-nine years old.

"The Master further said. 'I have the Lankavatara in four fasciculi, which is handed over to you, and in this is disclosed the essential teachings of the Tathagata concerning his mental ground. It will lead all sentient beings to spiritual opening and enlightenment. Since I came to this country. I was poisoned about five times and each time I took out this sutra and tried its miraculous power by putting it on a stone, which was split into pieces. I have come from Southern India to this Eastern land and have observed that in this country of China the people are predisposed to Mahayana Buddhism. That I have travelled far over seas and deserts is due to my desire to find proper persons to whom my doctrine may be transmitted. While there was as yet no good opportunity for this. I remained silent as if I were one who could not speak. Now that I have you, [this sutra] is given to you, and my wish is at last fulfilled.""

According to this, it might seem that it was Bodhidharma himself who brought the Latkāvatāra to China; but Tachsian and other records contradict it, and thus we have the following note under the above statement in the Transmission of the Lamp, though the writer of the note is not known. "The following is taken from the report of the Pao-lin Chuan (資林侯): Hsuan, the Vinaya Master, who is the author of the Biographies of the High Priests, says under the 'Life of K'ê, the Great Teacher', that in the beginning Bodhidharma took out the Lankāvatāra and handing it to K'ê said, 'As I observe that there are no other sutras in China but this, you take it for your guidance; and you will naturally save the world.' If this statement is correct, it means that it was before the second Patriarch attained to the realisation of the truth that Bodhidharma handed the Lankāvatāra to him, telling him to go over it But, according to the Transmission of the Lamp, the sutra was evidently given to K'ê after the Law was entrusted to the hands of Hui-k'ê. together with the robe Bodhidharma's further remark that he had the Lankavatara in four fasciculi which he would now give to Hui-k'ê, is probably quite correct However, the remark that he had the sutra with him, sounds as if there never had been any Lankavatara before his coming to China [This may not be quite exact] remark made later by Ma-tsu (馬湖) is to be regarded as more likely, for we read [in one of his sermons] to this effect, that [Bodhidharma] further quoted from the Lankavatara with which the mental ground of all sentient beings was given the [authoritative] seal this does not conflict with the fact of the case "

It is immaterial, as far as the historical relation between the Lankävatära and the father of Zen Buddhism in China is concerned, whether the sutra was handed by Bodhidharma to his disciple Hui-k'ê after the latter's realisation of the truth of Zen or before, and again, whether it was Bodhidharma himself or somebody else who first brought the sutra over to China, what we want to establish here is the mere fact of the relationship that historically exists between Bodhidharma and this sutra. Now as to this, we have ascertained it to be really so.

The reference to Ma-tsu (died 788) is important when the position of the Lankāvatāra in the history of Zen Buddhism after Hui-nêng is to be considered, though I do not wish to enter into its discussion here. I just quote the passage in question. Ma-tsu figures most prominently in Chinese Zen after Hui-nêng, for it was practically due to him and his contemporaries that Zen came to strike root most firmly in Chinese soil and grow up as a native product of Chinese genius. The passage reads thus "O monks, when you each believe that you yourself are the Buddha, your mind is no other than the Buddha-mind. The object of Bodhidharma who came from Southern India to this Middle Kingdom was to personally transmit and propagate the supreme law of One Mind by which we are all to be awakened to the truth "He further quotes from the Lankāvatāra, saying, "The mental ground of all sentient beings was given the seal [of authority], because he was afraid of your being too confused in mind to believe that you yourself are the Buddha."

In Ma-tsu's discourse, he does not expressly say that the Lankāvatāra was given to Hui-k'ê by his master, Bodhidharma, but simply that the existence of the Buddha-mind in each of us is certified by the teaching of the Lankavatara The idea of the commentator who alluded to this passage in Ma-tsu was to strengthen the fact that the Lankavatara and Zen Buddhism were mutually related, not only historically but doctrinally However this may be, Bodhidharma undoubtedly attempted to authorise the truth of his teaching by the Lankāvatāra. in which his unique method and the fact of spiritual enlightenment are expounded as from the Buddha's own "golden mouth." But the narrative in the Transmission of the Lamp goes farther than that when it refers to the miraculous virtue of the Lankavatara belief in the magneal power of an object considered to be holy is universal. It may be superstation, but if so it is of a wonderfully lasting character, as we find it throughout the world, civilised or uncivilised May we not regard Bodhidharma's belief in the magical power of the Lankavatara to destroy the effect of poisons as an indication of the opposition of his enemies to his Zen teaching on the ground that it was not in agreement with their own experience of Buddhist life? If this were the case—and it is proved by other facts—the uniqueness of Zen Buddhism must have been quite a disturbing element in the Buddhist world of those days.

There was one noted Zen master of the Sung dynasty who denied the historical relation between the Lankavatara and Bodhidharma His name is Ta-kuan T'an-ying (A D Ain. 985-1061) His standpoint is that of an absolute transcendentalist, ready to ignore anything relative and According to 人天服目 (jen-t'ien yen-mu, "The Eye for the Gods and Men"), a monk once asked, "Tradition says that Bodhidharma, the Great Master, brought along with him the four fasciculi of the Lankavatara is this really T'an-ying replied. "No, that is a mere invention of a busybody Dharma simply transmitted the mind-seal which is above all letters, directly pointing to the mind itself he led people to see their real nature and attain Buddhahood This being so, how could the Lankavatara have anything to do with Dharma?" The monk protested. "But this is the story told in the Pao-lin-chuan". The master said, "The writer had not time enough to enquire with penetration I will give my viewpoint There are three translations of the Lankavatara the first, in four fasciculi, was done by Gunabhadra of Sung, who was a Tripitaka-master from India The next one in ten fasciculi was by Bodhirner in the Yuan-wei dynasty. The translator was a contemporary of Bodhidharma and it was he who poisoned Dharma The last one was by Sikshananda, who as a Tripitaka-master of Yu-t'ien came to China while the Heavenly Empress was ruling in T'ang When these facts are put together, one can readity separate what is true from what is untrue Yang-shan Chi (Mili F), a great Zen master, too, had this once fully discussed and made the matter clear."

Ta-kuan's idea seems to be this The Lankāvatāra was brought over to China and translated into Chinese by somebody else than Bodhidharma, who thus was not at all concerned with the sutra, and, therefore, it is evident that he never handed this to his disciple Hui-k'ê Though there is no express reference to Hui-k'ê, we can infer the above from the way he writes about the translation of the sutra. From the very beginning he had no thought of connecting the father of Zen Buddhism with the Laukāvatāra. The writing of Yang-shan on the subject is now apparently lost

In one respect Ta-kuan's view is even historically justified During the Sung dynasty the relation between the Zen and the Tien-tai school of Buddhism was quite tense, and each did its best to denounce the other as not being in harmony with the spirit of Buddhism This was due, on the one hand, to Tien-tai emphasising the intellectual study of the sutras as steps leading to spiritual development, whereas Zen, on the other hand, ignored all such literary and philosophical handbooks as altogether irrelevant to religious insight which is all in all in the realisation of the mner truth The latter did not stop at this, its followers positively rejected all the literary authorities and treated the sutras and other sacred documents as if they were a mere heap of rubbish. This enraged the disciples of Chihchê Tai-shih, one of whom writes disparagingly in his Hastory of Orthodox Buddhasm, fas III, (釋門正統, Shih-mên Chêng-tung): "The school calling itself Ch'an [that is, Zen] generally makes an all-sweeping negation its main business. All that is expounded in the sutras and sastras, all that is philosophically reasoned out, all that is regarded as morality—all such is put aside by followers of the Ch'an as having no value except on paper. When they are criticised for their extreme view, they declare, 'No disciplining, no realisation—this is the principle of our school,' Why don't they get cured of their diseases by studying our Tien-tai philosophy of the six identities?" In another place (fas VI), the author says, "The Zen followers declare their principle to be something directly transmitted from the Buddha outside his explicit teaching; but where can one find his teaching outside the sutras bequeathed to us and to them?" "It is really a pitiable sight to see a Zen master in the pulpit, who, not knowing what is what, scandalises the ancient worthies, abuses the sutras and their teachings, and confounds the minds of the ignorant and the learned "(Fas VII) The quotations show well the valuation of the Zen school by its intellectualist opponents during the Sung dynasty.

The fact is, there are many things in common with Zen and Trien-tal, and just because of this common ground, one side when it goes to an extreme is certain to be denounced by the other. The compiler of the Jen-t'ien Yen-mu prefaces Ta-kuan's apology in the following manner time followers of the philosophical school [of Buddhism, as distinguished from the intuitionalists] rose up strongly against the latter and concocting various arguments and reports scandalised the ancient worthies to the disparagement of the Zen school " Probably Ta-kuan was one of these extremely impassioned apologists who tried hard to silence his T'ien-tai opponents, but who at the same time only succeeded in stirring up their blood all the more. When Zen insisted on its being above all fetters of discursive reasoning, the Tien-tax pointed out the fact that there is the historical fact of Bodhidharma handing the Lankavatara to his pupil Hur-k'ê, and further argued that if this be the case, how could the Zen followers justify their absolutism which cannot be separated from a sutra In point of fact, the teaching of Zen is not derived from the Lankavatara, but is only confirmed by it Zen stands on its own footing. on its own facts, but as all religious experience requires its intellectual interpretation, Zen, too, must have its philosophical background, which is found in the Lankavatara For the sutra teaches, as will be shown in the subsequent chapters and elsewhere, that the final goal of the Buddhist life is to gain an inner insight into the truth underlying the relativity The reason for this particular sutra's havof all existence ing been brought by Bodhidharma to bear upon his teachings can thus easily be understood Ta-kuan went too far m his assertion, but his spirit is not altogether against Zen.

At the same time, the T'ien-tan philosophers were not quite right in thinking that Zen grew out of the letters of the Lankavatāra. The transcendental intuitionalism of Zen and the teaching of Pratyātmagatigocara in the Lankāvatāra were what connected the two so closely.

VI. THE STUDY OF THE SUTRA AFTER BODHIDHARMA IN CHINA AND JAPAN

After Bodhidharma the study of the Lankavatara went on steadily as is shown in the history of Zen Buddhism. According to Tao-hsuan, the author of the Tang Kao Seng Chuan (唐高僧值), we have under "The Life of Hu-k'ê" the following: "Therefore. Na (那), Man (滿), and other masters always took along with them the Lankavatara as the book in which spiritual essence is propounded. Their discourses and disciplines were everywhere based upon it in accordance with the instructions left [by the Master]." Na and Man were disciples of Hui-k'ê. Further down in Tao-hsuan's Biographies we come to the life of Fa-ch'ung (法件), who was a contemporary of Tao-hsuian and flourished m the early middle of the T'ang, and who was an especial Here we have a concise history student of the Lankavatara of the study of this sutra after Hui-k'ê.

"Fa-ch'ung, deploring very much that the deep signification of the Lankāvatāra had been neglected for so long, went around everywhere regardless of the difficulties of travelling in the far-away mountains and over the lonely wastes. He finally came upon the descendants of Hui-k'ê among whom this sutra was being studied a great deal. He put himself under the tutorship of a master and had frequent occasions of spiritual realisation. The master then let him leave the company of his fellow-students and follow his own way in lecturing on the Lankāvatāra. He lectured over thirty times in succession. Later he met a monk who had been instructed personally by Hui-k'ê in the teaching of the

Lankāvatāra according to the interpretations of the Ekayāna (one-vehicle) school of Southern India Ch'ung again lectured on it over a hundred times

"The sutra was originally translated by Gunabhadra of Sung and written down by Hui-kuan, therefore, wording and sense are in good concord, practice and substance mutually correlated The entire emphasis of its teaching is placed on Praylia (highest intuitive knowledge) which Later, Bodhidharma, the transcends literary expression Zen master, propagated this doctrine in the South as well as the North, the gist of which teaching consists in attaining the unattainable, which is to have a right insight into the truth itself by forgetting word and thought Later. it grew and flourished in the middle part of the country Hui-k'ê was the first who attained to the essential under-Those addicted to the literary teaching of standing of it Buddhism in Wei were averse to becoming associated with these spiritual seers. Among the latter there were some who had their minds truly enlightened by penetrating into the very heart of the teaching As time passed on the younger generations failed to come to the real understanding of their predecessors "

Now we will trace the line of transmission from the beginning, from master to disciple, and show that the Lankāvatāra has its part in the history of Zen Tao-hsuan continues "After Bodhidharma there were his two disciples, Hui-k'ê and Hui-yu, the Master Yu, after attaining the truth, was absorbed in his inner life and did not take the trouble to talk about it K'ê the Ch'an-shih (Zen Master) was followed by San (桑禪師), Hui (惠禪師), Shêng (盛禪師), Na-kuang (那光師), Tuan (湖禪師), Chang (長藏師), Chên (其法師), Yu (玉法師) They all orally discoursed on the deep meaning of the sutra, and did not leave any literature.

"After the Master K'ê, Shan (善師) produced a commentary in four fasciculi, Fêng (豊麗師), one in five fas;

Ming (明禪師), one m five fas, and Hu-ming (胡明師), one in five fas

"Indirectly following the Master K'ê there were the Master Tai-t'sung (大聰節) who wrote commentary in five fas, Tao-yin (道蔭節), who wrote one in four fas; Ch'ung (冲法節), who wrote one in five fas, An (岸法師), who wrote one in five fas, Chung (龍法師), who wrote one in eight fas; and Tai-ming (大明節) who wrote one in ten fas.

"There was another line, independent of the Master K'ê but depending upon [Asanga's] Mahāyāna-samgraha; Chien (遷禪師) wrote a commentary in four fas; and Shan-tê the Vinaya Master (尚德律師), one in ten fas. After Nakuang (那光師), there were Shih the Zen Master (實禪師), Hui (惠禪師), K'uang (曠禪師), and Hung-chih (弘智師) who is said to have been living at Hsi-ming (西明) in the capital, after his death the line was broken. Ming the Zen Master (明禪師) was succeeded by Chia (你法師), Pao-yu (資瑜師), Pao-ying (寶迎師), and Pao-ying (實空師), whose line is still flourishing at present

"Ch'ung, since he began to study the sutras, made the Lankāvatāra the chief object of his especial study and altogether gave over two hundred lectures on it He has not. however, so far written anything about it He went about with his lecturing as circumstances directed him, and he had no premeditated plans for his missionary activities When one gets into the spirit of the teaching one realises the oneness of things; but when the letter is adhered to. the truth appears varied The followers of Ch'nng, however, musted upon his putting the essence into a kind of writing Said the Master, 'The essence is the ultimate reality of existence; when it is expressed by means of language its finesse is lost; much more is this the case when it is committed to writing ' He however could not resist the persistent requests of his disciples The result appeared as a commentary in five fasciculi, entitled Szü Cht AR. [private notes], which is widely circulated at present."

This detailed story relative to the Lankavatara after Hui-k'ê is illuminating in many ways, it not only gives an insight into the historical relation between Zen and the sutra, but it gives the reason why the relationship exists between them When the author refers to the specific features of the Lankavatara as consisting in attaining the unattamable, which is beyond the ken of reasoning, he at the same time describes the peculiarities of Zen teaching brought over to China by Bodhidharma That the school of Dharma was not favourably received by students of Buddhist philosophy, that Hui-yu (饕音) who is better known as Tao-vu (遺音), kept his mouth closed, knowing that the truth realised in his innermost mind was something beyond the phraseology of ordinary mentalities, that Fa-ch'ung (法神) refused to commit his thoughts to writing because by doing so the exquisite colouring of his lively experience vanished. -all these statements made by Tao-hsuan (清音) who was not yet acquainted with the later growth of Zen Buddhism. delineate with exactitude the characteristic point of Zen The study of the Lankavatara, as especially related to Zen, was kept up to the time of Fa-ch'ung and Tao-hsuan, who were contemporaries, and this was about the time of Hung-jên (引双), the fifth patriarch of Chinese Zen Buddhism. Judging from these historical facts we know that the intellectual study and the practical discipline went on side by side, and that there were as yet none of the clear distinctions which later developed distinguishing Zen after Hui-nêng (業能), the sixth patriarch, from what preceded him So far none of all these numerous commentaries on the Lankānatāra have been recovered

There is one thing in the foregoing account given by Tao-hsuan of the history of the Lankavatāra that requires notice that there was another school in the study of the sutra than the one transmitted by Dharma and Hui-k'ê This was the school of Yogācāra idealism. The line of Hui-k'ê belonged to the Ekayāna school () of

Southern India which was also the one resorted to by Dharma himself when he wanted to discourse on the philosophy of Zen Buddhism. To this Ekayana school belong the Avatamsaka and the Śraddhotpanna as well as the Lankāvatāra properly interpreted. But as the latter makes mention of the system of the eight Viinanas whose central principle is designated as Alavavijnana, it has been used by the Yogācāra followers as one of their important authorities Ch'ien the Zen Master (渠藏師) and other teachers were those among whom the Lankavatara received an interpretation different from that given by Fa-ch'ung and his party. Though Fa-ch'ung is not recorded in any historical work on Zen in our possession at present, he was probably one of the earlier Zen followers. That he was not an ordinary scholar of the Lankavatara is proved by the following incident recorded by Tao-hstian. When Hstianchuang (玄奘) came back from his long solourn in India his influence in the Buddhist world of the day must have been immense He was perhaps a little too self-confident and somewhat too presumptive when he declared that all the Chinese translations of the Buddhist sutras and sastras prior to him were not exact and reliable, and no discourses or lectures ought to be given on the older texts When Fa-ch'ung heard of this, he retorted sharply, saying, "You are a Buddhist priest ordained according to the older texts: if you do not allow any further propagation of them, you should first take off the priestly robe and be reordained according to the newer texts. It is only when you listen to this advice of mine that you can go so far as to prohibit the spread of the older translations." This protest from one wandering monk-student of the Lankavatara in four fasciculi against the most powerful authority of the new translation school, whose reputation and influence must have been almost overwhelming, shows what kind of a man Fa-strongly of his Zen training and understanding

The study of the Lankavatara after Fa-ch'ung seems to have declined, especially in connection with Zen Buddhism. and its place was taken by the Varracchedika, a sutra belonging to the Prashaparamita group. It is quite interesting to enquire into the circumstances that brought about this change. For one thing the Lankavatara is a very difficult specimen of literature, and it requires a great deal of scholarship to read and understand it intelligently. Though Tao-hsuan remarks that its diction and sense are well in harmony (女理意識). Su Tung-pei's (蔡東坡) criticism, which appears in his preface to the Chin-shan edition (金山海) of the Sung dynasty (1085), is more to the point. "The Lankavatara is deep and unfathomable in incaning, and in style so terse and antique, that the reader finds it quite difficult to punctuate the sentences properly. not to say anything about his adequately understanding their ultimate spirit and meaning which go beyond the This was the reason why the sutra grew scarce and if became almost impossible to get hold of a copy." The real difficulty of properly punctuating the Chinese text of the Lankavatara in four fasciculi lies not necessarily, as Su Tung-per judges, in the classical terseness of style, but rather m its adoption of the Sanskrit style of arranging words as is remarked by Fa-tsang. It was no easy task even for a most competent scholar to find exact Chinese expressions for the original phrases, and frequently he was obliged to follow the Sanskrit grammar. The Chinese translations, therefore, had occasionally to be read, not after their native laws of syntax, but after the Sanskrit This is what Su Tung-per really means by "terseness of style", and also the reason for Chiang Chih-chi's (蔣之奇) complaint that "I was much distressed with the difficulty of reading this sutra " When even scholars of the first grade found the Lankavatara so hard to read, the natural result was to leave it alone on the shelf for the worms to feed on it Hence its decline as a help to the mastery of Zen. After Fa-ch'ung, who was contemporary with Hung-jên, the fifth patriarch of Zen Buddhism in China, the Lankavatara came gradually to be replaced by the Vagracchedikā. This does not mean that the former went altogether out of usage, but that the latter came to be thought more of in connection with Zen, especially as Zen grew to be more and more popular and appreciated by the general public outside the cloister. It must, therefore, be said that the fifth patriarch was far-sighted enough The decline of the Lankavatara was, in in this respect The statement made by Chiang Chih-chi fact. mevitable in his preface to the Chin-shan edition of the Lankavatara sheds light on the history of the sutra and also on the state of affairs in the Buddhist thought-world of his day (1085). and we give the following extract in which the two tendencies of Buddhism are referred to "The sutras preached by the Buddha are classified altogether into twelve divisions, which now make up as many as 5.000 fascioni. While the Right Law (Dharma) still prevailed, the number of converts was beyond reckoning. who fathomed the depth of the Law by merely listening to a half stanza, or even to one phrase of the Buddha's teaching But as we come to the age of similatude and to these latter days of Buddhism, we are indeed far away from the Sage; people at last find themselves being drowned in the letters: the difficulty is like counting the sands on the bottom of the ocean, and they do not know how to get at the one substance which alone is true This was what caused the appearance of the Fathers, who, directly pointing at the human mind, told us to see here the ultimate ground of all things and thereby to attain Buddhahood. This is known as a special transmission outside the scriptural teaching. If one is endowed with superior talents and an unusual sharpness of mind, a gesture or an utterance will suffice to give one an immediate knowledge of the truth. Therefore, Ummon (雲門) treated the Buddha with the highest degree of irreverence, while Yakusan (藥川) forbade his followers to even study the sutras, since they were advocates of 'special transmission.'

"Zen is the name given to this branch of Buddhism, which keeps itself away from the Buddha It is also called the mystical branch, because it does not adhere to the literal meaning of the sutras It is for this reason that those who blindly follow the steps of Buddha are sure to deride Zen. while those who have no liking for letters are naturally inclined toward the mystical The followers of the two schools know how to shake the head at each other, but fail to appreciate the fact that they are after all complementary not Zen one of the six virtues of perfection? If so, how can it conflict with the teaching of the Buddha! In my view, Zen is the outcome of the Buddha's teaching and the mystical issues from the letters There is no reason why a man should shun Zen because of the Buddha's teaching. nor need we disregard the letters on account of the mystical teaching When we realise this, we come nearer to the truth Jan-ch'ıu, (蚌菜) asked, 'Should I put everything I learn into practice?' Replied Confucius, 'Yes, do so conduct yourself' When Tzu-lu (子路) asked the same question of the Master, the latter cautioned him, saying, 'As long as your parents are still alive, how can you put everything into practice as soon as you learn it?' Ch'iu was backward, so the Master urged him to go ahead, while Lu was too pushing, so he was told to be more circumspect There is nothing cut and dried in Zen teaching, it is always directed at the onesidedness of human character. The fault of studying [scriptural] Buddhism lies in the danger of becoming sticklers for the scriptures, the meaning of which they fail to understand rightfully Ultimate reality is never grasped by such, for them Zen would be salvation Whereas those who study Zen are too apt to run into the habit of making empty talks and practising sophistry They fail to understand the significance of letters. To save them the study of Buddhist literature [or philosophy] is to be re-

the Lankāvatāra ceased to be studied as much as before, being replaced by the Vajracchedikā, but at the same time showing that the Lankāvatāra and Zen were most intimately related in spite of the Zen followers' general attitude of aloofness from all the sutras of Buddhist teaching

There is, however, one point in Chiang Clinh-chi's account which requires revision. He says that the Lankāvatāra lost its transmission after the adoption by Zen followers of the Vajracchcdikā, but this is not entirely correct, for not only are allusions to the Lankāvatāra Sūtra found in Ma-tsu (時期) but the line of Shên-hsiu (神秀) seems to have been more partial to the Lankāvatāra than to the Vajracchedikā, as we see in Chang Shuo's stele-inscription (北野花名) for Shên-hsiu 1

As I remarked before, the chief defect in the Lankavatara which prevented its becoming popular, was its peculiar style and diction, which is not altogether native Chinese, and which made it difficult even for scholars to understand On the other hand, the Vasracchedskā, like other sutras of the Prantaparameta group, is easy to understand so far as its diction and phraseology go; and besides it is short in spite of its repetitious style This advantage over the Lankāvatāra is sufficient to explain why the Vajiacchedikā superseded it as a guide book to the mastery of Zen teach-While the Lankavatara, according to my judgment, as regards pointing the way to the realisation of the inner truth, is nearer the mark, this advantage is easily upset by its unapproachability, and this advantage of the Vajracchedikā is in many ways decisive if Zen is to be studied and practised by a wider circle than scholars and specialists That the Lankavatara, in spite of its literary shortcomings,

Shên shu is not regarded as the sixth patriarch by the followers of Hui-neug, who have been the transmitters of Zen teaching down to the present day. The line led by Shên-haiu was broken off not long after his death, and records regarding him and his descendants are very scarce. But Chang shuo's inscription states that Shên haiu was the sixth patriarch.

kept up its tradition throughout the development and wide propagation of Zen is proved by the existence still of a number of commentaries written in the T'ang, Sung, Ming, and Ch'ing, as well as in Japan. What, therefore, we can say of the Lankāvatāra after the fifth patriarch, is that it did not cease to be studied but was not so much in vogue as before, as for instance at the time of Fa-ch'ung and prior to him

The supersession of the Lankavatara by the Varracchedikā has another reason in the nature of Zen about which I wish to have a word here. Zen has no aversion to booklearning necessarily, but in point of fact Zen can be grasped more readily perhaps by the simple-minded and those who are not stuffed with intellectual accomplishments, as is proved, for instance, in the case of Hui-neng, who to all appearance was not so crudite as his rival Shên-hsin. This practical tendency has produced another tendency to discourage, sometimes to disregard, sometimes to positively slight the study of the sutras Hence the above remarks of Chiang Chih-chi. But here is the lurking-place for the two divergent schools of Zen to emerge without being fully conscious of each other's characteristic standpoint. The one clings to the view that Zen is not controlled by the intellect, while the other upholds the fact that Zen is not by nature shy of crudition. The latter tends to be patronised by those whose natural bent is for learning and intellection; while the former is likely to be favoured by the more practical-minded. Hui-neng belonged to the practical school both by disposition and by education, while Shên-hsiu was a scholar; for this reason Shen-hsiu held fast to the Lankavatara, and Hur-neng to the Vagracchedika, while both were being tutored by Hung-jen; for it is not true that Hung-jen was partial to the Vagracchedika; indeed, for him the one was of as much importance as the other. Seeing that Hung-jên was about to paint the outside wall of his Meditation Hall with pictures illustrative of the Lankava-

ŧ

tāra, Hui-nêng inscribed his famous poem upon it 1 What was a unity in the mind of the master, divided itself in the minds of his disciples, each of whom, according to his individuality, asserted one side more forcibly than the other, although not necessarily consciously. When a tendency is thus in the beginning given a strong impetus, it gains momentum, opening up its own course of movement. The Vajracchedikā school of Hui-nêng proved to be more in accord with the Chinese genius and consequently prospered more than the Lankāvatāra school of Shên-hsiu, though the latter was not entirely replaced by the former

Hui-nêng was not such an illiterate peddler as is made out by his followers, though he was not so learned and scholarly as Shên-hsiu. But it was more politic for them to contrast their leader in this respect with his rival, who, was, indeed, the head of all the monks under Hung-jen not only in learning but in the disciplinary side of Zen as well By emphasising this contrast Hui-nêng came out to be the greater Zen master, and the absolute aspect of Zen by which it transcends all the intricacies of learning and intellection received more emphasis than it actually needed. The Lankāvatāra thus finally ceased to be legitimately appreciated by Zen followers of the present day Some scholars of Buddhism, chiefly modern Japanese, ignorant of the real nature of Zen, yet knowing enough of the historical relation between Hui-neng and the Varracchedikā, which was once edited by him with a preface, try to prove that Zen is the outcome of practical training of the mind to gain an insight into its real working. But its absurdity is patent to all serious students of Zen, for the Prajnaparamita 15 the result of the intellectual elaboration of the Zen experience which alone was the object of Hui-neng's teaching in ² Essays in Zen Buddhism, Series I, p 192.

"The Bodhi is not like the tree,

The mirror bright is nowhere shining,

As there is nothing from the first,

Where can the dust collect itself?"

connection with all the literary endeavours of scholars He never took a dislike especially to the Lankavatāra, his "ignorance" was altogether of a different order.

There are no records after Fa-ch'ung and after Huinêng as to the study by Zen followers of the Lankavatara Sutra. except the commentaries which had been written on it by scholars and of which we are still in possession The fact that during the Sung the sutra was much neglected has already been made clear by the preface of Chiang Chih-chi and Su Tung-pei to the Chin-shan edition of the sutra. But four commentaries of the Sung dynasty are still extant against two of the Tang One of the Tang commentaries was written by Fa-tsang, as was stated previously, and this is a sort of general introduction to the study of the Lankānatāra and is the most valuable literature ever written in connection with the sutra: for not only does it give the author's summarised interpretation of the Lankavatara as a whole and of its position in the system of Buddhism, but in it the reader can find Fa-tsang's view as a Buddhist Ouite a few commentaries have been written philosopher on this work of Fa-tsang's by Japanese scholars

During the Ming dynasty the Lankavatāra seems to have been studied much, for we have seven commentaries that are still in existence written on it during this period written on it during this period that are still in existence. The Ch'ing dynasty has produced two, also extant. There are altogether fifteen expository writings on the Lankāvatāra from Chinese scholars, which are still in current circulation, as they are all included in the supplementary part of the Tripitaka compiled by Mr Tatsuye Nakano, Kyoto, 1905–1912, and one is found in the main body of the Chinese Tripitaka itself.

In Japan during the Nara era in the eighth century it was a deed of merit to copy the Lankavatara with other sutras and sastras and to possess extra copies of them, but how earnestly and systematically it was studied is not We have many interesting and at the same time illuminating documents of this period, that is, of the first half of the eighth century, in which detailed entries are kept as to the various Buddhist writings that were copied by the official scribes as well as the business side of this pions undertaking which was constantly carried on during those days Among these old valuable papers are references to the Lankavatara and its commentaries, and the most remarkable thing is that two of the commentaries mentioned are ascribed to Bodhidharma himself How did such a tradition come over to Japan? As far as we know there are no records in China as to Bodhidharma's authorship of any such writings If these were still in existence, they would shed much light on the history of Zen Buddhism in China

The first serious study of the sutra was undertaken by a Zen monk called Kokwan Shiren (1278-1346) who was also a learned scholar being the author of a history of Buddhism known as The Genko Shakusho (元享釋書三十卷) in thirty fasciculi, as was mentioned before His commentary on the Lankāvatāra is called the Butsugoshinron (佛語心論 十八条), "Treatise on the Essence (or heart) of the Buddhateaching," and consists of eighteen fasciculi His dividing the sutra into eighty-six sections proves the keenness of his intellectual and analytical acumen. Tokugan Yōson (德數 卷存) who published another commentary in 1687 followed His commentary is Kokwan in the division of the sutra He mentions. quite an improvement on his predecessor's among the Lankāvatāra commentaries he consulted with, two which are not included in the Supplementary Tripitaka of I wonder if they are accessible now?

A third Japanese work on the sutra is mentioned by Seigai Ōmura and Gisho Nakano who are the authors of the Explanatory Notes to the Nihon Daizokyo (日本大藏經解題) completed in 1921; the title of this Japanese book is Byōgakyō Kōyoku (楞伽經譯翼), by Kōken (光識) Unfortunately, I have not yet been able to see it myself. In the same Notes seven works are mentioned written by Japanese scholars as commentaries on Fa-tsung's Introduction to the Lankāvatāra (持備心玄義).

١

Most recent Japanese works relative to the Lankāvatāra are Sōgen Yamakami's Japanese rendering of the Lankāvatāra by Śikshānanda; Shōshi Mitsui's concise exposition of the Lankāvatāra teaching; and Hōkei Idzumi's Japanese translation of the Nanjo edition of the Sanskrit original Each in its way is helpful to the understanding of this neglected Mahayana literature.

VII. INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER OF THE LIANKAVATARA SITRA

In which Ravana, King of the Rakshasas, requests the Buddha to discourse on the realisation of the inmost truth

This introductory chapter which appears in all the Lankāvatāra texts except Gunabhadra, the earliest Chinese version now extant, is, as I have remarked before, no doubt a later addition, and does not properly belong to the main text; but as it almost gives a summary, if any such thing is possible, of the Lankāvatāra, I have decided to incorporate its translation in this book. The translation is chiefly based upon the Nanjo edition of the Sanskrit text, and wherever it differs very much from the Chinese versions as regards the sense, the differences are quoted in footnotes 1

1

į

3

ŗ

The state of the

The following translation is far from being satisfactory, and very likely it is laden with errors. Nobody can deny that the original text is corrupt to a great extent and requires for its complete revision greater learning and more critical intellect than the present translator can afford. But his over-zeal to have this important Mahayana sutra more widely known not only among those who are interested in Buddhism but among students of comparative religion will, he hopes, condone his audacity in sending out this partial and imperfect translation of the Lankavatara to the public at large. He will be more than pleased if critics will acquaint him with any criticisms and corrections which may occur to them.

(1)1 Thus I have heard The Blessed One once staved in the Castle of Lanka which is situated at the peak of Mount Malaya in the great ocean, and which is adorned with flowers made of newels of various kinds 2 He was with a large assembly of Blukshus and with a great multitude of Bodhisattvas, who had come together from various Buddha-The Bodhisattvas-Mahāsattvas, headed by the Bodhisattva Mahāmati, were all perfect masters3 of the various Samadhis, the [tenfold] Self-mastery, the [ten] Powers, and the [six] Psychic Faculties, they were anointed by all the Buddhas with their own hands, they all well understood the significance of the objective world as the manifestation of their own mind, (2) they knew how to maintain [various] forms, teachings, and disciplinary measures, according to the various mentalities and behaviours of beings:4 they were thoroughly versed in the five Dharmas, the [three] Svabhāvas, the [eight] Vijnānas, and the twofold Non-ātman

At that time, the Blessed One who [had been preaching] at the palace of the King of the Sea-serpents came out at the expiration of seven days and was greeted by an innumerable host of Sakra, Brahman, and Nāgakanyās, and looking at Lankā on Mount Malaya smiled and said, "By the Tathagatas of the past, who were Arhats and Fully-enlightened Ones, this truth (dharma) was made the subject of their discourse, at that eastle of Lankā on the mountain-peak of

- ¹ These numerals in parentheses refer to the pages of the Sanskrit edition
 - Much more fully described in Bodhiruci (Wai)
 - * Laterally, "sporting" (vilstdita)

4 Trang According to the minds of beings, they manifest a variety of form and discipline them with [various] means

Wer. [There are] various beings and various minds and forms, in accordance with these various minds and various changing thoughts, [the Bodhisattvas], by innumerable means of salvation, save [beings] everywhere, make themselves visible everywhere, so that their manifestations are universal

Sung [There are] various beings and various minds and forms, by innumerable means of salvation, [the Bodhisattvas] become variously visible to all classes [of beings]

Malaya,—the truth realisable by the supreme wisdom in one's mmost self, and not visible to the reasoning philosophers, nor conceivable by the consciousness of the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas ¹ I, too, would here for the sake of Rāvaṇa, Overlord of the Yakshas, discourse on this truth."

[Inspired] by the spiritual power of the Tathagata, Rāvana, Lord of the Rakshasas, heard [his voice and thought], "Certainly, the Blessed One is coming out of the palace of the King of Sea-serpents, surrounded and accompanied by an innumerable host of Sakra, Brahman, Nāgakanyās; looking at the waves of the ocean and contemplating the mental agitations going on in those assembled, [he thinks of] the ocean of the Ālayavijnāna where the Vijnānas revolve [like the waves] stirred by the wind of objectivity." Then standing there, Rāvana uttered an utterance. "I will go and request of the Blessed One to enter into Lankā, which for this long night would probably profit, do good, and gladden (3) the gods as well as human beings."

Thereupon, Rāvana, Lord of the Rākshasas, with his attendants, riding in his floral celestial chariot, came up to where the Blessed One was, and having arrived there he and his attendants came out of the chariot. Walking around the Blessed One three times from left to right, they played on a musical instrument, beating it with a stick of blue Indra (sapphire), and hanging the lute at one side, which was inlaid with the choicest lapis lazuli and supported by [a band of] priceless cloth, yellowish-white like priyangu, they sang with various notes such as Saharshya, Rishabha, Gāndhāra, Dharvata, Nishāda, Madhyama, and Kaisika,² which were melodiously modulated in Grāma, Mūrchana, etc., the voice in accompaniment with the flute beautifully blended in the measure of the Gāthā.

² The Sanskrit text is here certainly at fault, there ought to be a negative particle somewhere in this passage, which is the case with the Chinese translations

Neither Bodhuruci nor Sikshānanda refers so specifically to these various notes

- 1. "The truth-treasure whose principle is the selfnature of Mind, has no selfhood, stands away from reasoning, and is free from impurities; it points to the knowledge attained in one's immost self; O Lord, show me here the way leading to the truth
- 2 "The Sugata is the body in whom are stored immaculate virtues; in him are manifested [bodies] transforming and transformed; he enjoys the truth realised in his immost self: may he enter into Lanka Now is the time, O Muni!
- 3 (4) This Lankā was inhabited by the Buddhas of the past, and [they were] accompanied by their sons who were owners of many forms O Lord, show me now the highest truth, and the Yakshas who are endowed with many forms will listen "

Thereupon, Rāvana, the Lord of Lankā, further adapting the Totaka rhythm sang this in the measure of the Gäthä

- 4 After seven nights, the Blessed One, leaving the ocean which is the abode of the Makara, the palace of the Sea-king, now stands on the shore
- 5 Just as the Buddha rises, Rāvana, accompanied by the Rakshasas and Yakshas numerous by Suka, Sārana, and learned men
- 6 Miraculously goes over to the place where the Lord is standing Alighting from the floral vehicle, he greets the Tathagata reverentially, makes him offerings, tells him who he is, and stands by the Lord
- 7 "I who have come here, am called Rāvana, the tenheaded king of the Rakshasas mayest thou graciously receive me with Lanka and all its residents
- 8 "In this city, the inmost state of consciousness realised, indeed, by the Enlightened Ones of the past (5) was disclosed on this peak studded with precious stones
 - 9 "Let the Blessed One, too, surrounded by sons of
 - 2 Said to be the ministers' names

the Victorious One, now disclose the truth immaculate on this peak embellished with precious stones; we, together with the residents of Lanka, desire to listen.

- 10. "The Lankāvatāra Sūtra which is praised by the Buddhas of the past [discloses] the inmost state of consciousness realised by them, as it is not founded on any system of doctrine.
- 11 "I recollect that the Buddhas of the past surrounded by sons of the Victorious One recited this sutra; the Blessed One, too, will speak.
- 12 "In the time to come, there will be Buddhas and Buddha-Sons pitying the Yakshas; the Leaders will discourse on this magnificent doctrine at the peak adorned with precious stones.
- 13. "This magnificent city of Lanka is adorned with varieties of precious stones, [surrounded] by peaks, refreshing and beautiful and canopied by a net of jewels
- 14. "O Blessed One, here are the Yakshas who are free from faults of greed, reflecting on [the truth] realised in one's immost self and making offerings to the Buddhas of the past; they are believers in the teaching of the Mahavana and intent on disciplining one another.
- 15 "There are younger Yakshas, girls and boys, desiring to know the Mahayana. Come, O Blessed One, who art our Teacher, come to Lanka on Mount Malaya
- 16 (6) "The Rakshasas, with Kumbhakarna at their head, who are residing in the city, wish, as they are devoted to the Mahayana, to hear about this immost realisation
- 17. "They have made offerings assiduously to the Buddhas [in the past] and are to-day going to do the same. Come, for compassion's sake, to Lanka, together with [thy] sons.
- 18. "O great Muni, accept my mansion, the company of the Apsaras, necklaces of various sorts, and the delightful Asoka garden.
 - 19. "I give myself up to serve the Buddhas and their sons; there is nothing in me that I do not give up [for their sake], O great Muni, have compassion on me!"

- 20 Hearing him speak thus, the Lord of the Triple World said, "O King of Yakshas, this mountain of precious stones was visited by the Leaders of the past
- 21. "And, taking pity on you, they discoursed on the truth revealed in their inmost [The Buddhas of] the future time will proclaim [the same] on this jewel-adorned mountain
- 22 "This [inmost truth] is the abode of those practisers who stand in the presence of the truth O King of the Yakshas, you have the compassion of the Sugatas and myself"
- 23. The Blessed One granting the request [of the King] remained silent and undisturbed, he now mounted the floral chariot offered by Rāvana.
- 24 Thus Rāvana and others, wise sons of the Victorious One, (7) honoured by the Apsaras singing and dancing, reached the city.
- 25. Arriving in the delightful city, [the Buddha was] again the recipient of honours, he was honoured by the group of Yakshas including Rāvana and by the Yaksha women
- 26 A net of jewels was offered to the Buddha by the younger Yakshas, girls and boys, and neeklaces beautifully ornamented with jewels were placed by Rāvana about the neeks of the Buddha and of the sons of the Buddha
- 27 The Buddha, together with the sons of the Buddha and the wise men, accepting the offerings, discoursed on the truth which is the state of consciousness realised in the immost self.
- 28 Honouring Mahamati as the best speaker, Ravana and the company of the Yakshas honoured and requested of him again and again, [saying],
 - 1 Gathas 20-28, melusive, are in prose in T'ang

- 29 "Thou art the asker of the Buddhas concerning the state of consciousness realised in one's inmost self, of which we here, Yakshas as well as sons of the Buddha, are desirous of hearing I, together with the Yakshas, sons of the Buddha, and the wise men, request this of thee.
- 30 "Thou art the most eloquent of speakers, and the most strenuous of practisers (yogins), with faith I beg of thee. Ask [the Buddha] about the doctrine, O thou the proficient one!
- 31. "Free from the faults of the philosophers and Pratyekabuddhas and Śrāvakas is (8) the truth of the immost consciousness, immaculate, and culminating in the stage of Buddhahood"
- 32 ¹ Thereupon the Blessed One created jewel-adorned mountains and other objects magnificently embellished with jewels in an immense number.
- 33 On the summit of each mountain the Buddha himself was visible, and Rāvana the Yaksha also was found standing there
- 34 Thus the entire assembly was seen on each mountampeak and all the countries were there, and in each there was a Leader.
- 35 Here also was the King of the Rakshasas and the residents of Lankā, and the Lankā created by the Buddha rivalling [the real one].
- 36. Other things were there, too,—the Aśoka with its shining woods, and on each mountain-peak Mahāmati was making a request of the Buddha
- 37 Who discoursed for the sake of the Yakshas on the truth leading to the inmost realisation; on the mountainpeak he was delivering a complete sutra with an exquisite voice varied in hundreds of thousands of ways.²
 - From this point Trang is in prose again.
- Thus according to Bodhiruci and Siskhānanda. The Sanskrit text has: "hundreds of thousands of perfect sutras".

- 38 [After this] the teacher and the sons of the Buddhas vanished away in the air, leaving Rāvana the Yaksha himself standing in his mansion
- 39 Thought he, "How is this? What means this? and by whom was it heard? What was it that was seen? and by whom was it seen? Where is the city? and where is the Buddha?
- 40 "Where are those places, those jewel-shining Buddhas, those Sugatas? (9) Is it a dream then? or a vision? or is it a castle conjured up by the Gandharvas?
- 41 "Or is il dust in the eye, or a fata morgana, or the dieam-child of a bairen woman, or the smoke of a fire-wheel, that which I saw here!"
- 42 Then [Rüvana reflected], "This is the nature as it is (dharmatā) of all things objectified in and by the mind, and it is not comprehended by the ignorant as they are confused by every form of discrimination
- 43 "There is neither the seer nor the seen, neither the speaker nor the spoken, the form and usage of the Buddhist works—they are nothing but discrimination
- 44. "Those who see things such as were seen before, do not see the Buddha, when discrimination is not aroused, then one indeed sees the Buddha, the Buddha is a Fully-enlightened One, when one sees him, it is in a world unmanifested."

The Lord of Lanka was then immediately awakened Feeling a revulsion (parāvritts) in his mind and realising that the world was nothing but his own mind, he got settled in the realm of non-discrimination, was inspired by a stock of his past good deeds, acquired the eleverness of under-

- 1 The Nango edition has here na, but I have followed the Trang
- 2 Tang his "He who sees in the way as was seen before, cannot see the Buddha, when no discrimination is aroused, this, indeed, is the seeing?" According to Wei "If he sees things and takes them for realities, he does not see the Buddha Even when he is not abiding in a discriminating mind, he cannot see the Buddha?" Wei evidently reads somewhat like the Sanskrit standing all the texts; obtained the faculty of seeing linto things] as they were; was no more dependent upon others: observed things excellently with his own wisdom; gained the insight that was not of discursive reasoning: was no more dependent upon others, became himself a great practiser of discipline, was able to manifest himself in all excellent forms, got thoroughly acquainted with all the skilful means, had the knowledge of the characteristic aspects of every stage whereby to surmount it skilfully; was delighted to look into2 the self-nature of Citta, Manas, Manoviinana: got a view whereby he could cut himself loose from the triple continuation: had the knowledge of disposing of every argument of (10) the philosophers, thoroughly understood the Tathagata-garbha, the stage of Buddhahood, the mmost self; found himself abiding in the Buddha-knowledge; [when suddenly] a voice was heard from the sky, saying. "It is to be known by oneself."

"Well done, well done, O Lord of Lankā! Well done, indeed, O Lord of Lankā, for once more! The practiser is to discipline himself as thou doest. The Tathagatas and all things are to be viewed as they are viewed by thee; otherwise viewed, it is nihilism. All things are to be comprehended by transcending the Citta, Manas, and Vijñānas as is done by thee. Thou shouldst look inwardly and not get attached to the letters and a superficial view of things, thou shouldst not fall into the attainments, conceptions, experiences, views, and Samādhis of the Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers, thou shouldst not have any liking for small talk and witticism; thou shouldst not cherish the notion of self-substance. In or have any thought for the vainglory of rulership, nor dwell on such Dhyānas as belong to the six Dhyānas, etc.

"O Lord of Lanka, this is what is realised by the great

This does not appear in T'ang, nor in Wei

a T'ang. to go beyond

Wer and T'ang. Do not hold the views maintained in the Vedas practisers who can thus destroy the discourses advanced by others, crush mischievous views into pieces, properly keep themselves away from ego-centered notions, cause a revulsion in the depths of the mind fittingly by means of an exquisite knowledge, they are Buddha-sons who walk in the way of the Mahayana; and in order to enter upon the Tathagata-stage of self-realisation, the discipline is to be pursued by thee

- "O Lord of Lankä, conducting thyself in this way, be thou further purified in the way thou hast attained, (11) by disciplining thyself well in Samādhi and Samāpatti, follow not the state realised and enjoyed by the Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers, as it is due to the imagination of those who discipline themselve, according to the practices of the puerile philosophers. They cling to the visible forms created by their egotistical ideas, they maintain such notions as element, quality, and substance, they cling tenaciously to views originating from ignorance, they get confused by cherishing the idea of birth where prevails emptiness, they cling to discrimination [as real]; they fall into the way of thinking where obtains the dualism of qualifying and qualified
- "O Lord of Lanka, this is what leads to various excellent attainments, this is what makes one aware of the inmost attainment, this is the Mahayana realisation. He will accomplish and acquire a superior state of existence
- "O Lord of Lanka, by entering upon the Mahayana discipline the veils [of ignorance] are destroyed and one turns away from the manifold waves of mentation and falls not into the refuge and practice of the philosophers
- "O Lord of Lanka, the philosophers' practice starts from their own egotistic attachments. Their ugly practice arises from their adhering to the dualistic views concerning the self-nature of the Vijnana
- "Well done, O Lord of Lankā! reflect on the signification of this as you did when seeing the Tathagata before; for this, indeed, is seeing the Tathagata"

At that time it occurred to Ravana "I wish to see the Blessed One again, who has all the disciplinary practices at his command, who has turned away from the practices of the philosophers, who is born of the state of realisation in the inmost consciousness, and who is beyond [the dualism of the transformed and the transforming He is the knowledge (12) realised by the practisers, he is the realisation attained by those who are enjoying the perfect bliss of the Samādhi when there takes place an intuitive understanding which comes through meditation. Therefore, he is known as a great adept in the mental discipline 1 May I see thus [again] the Compassionate One by means of his miraculous powers in whom the fuel of passion and discrimination are destroyed, who is surrounded by sons of the Buddha, who has penetrated into the minds and thoughts of all beings, who moves about everywhere, who knows everything, who keeps himself away from works (krsuā) and forms (lakshana), seeing him may I attain what I have not yet attained. [retain] what I have already gamed, may I conduct myself with non-diserimination, abide in the joy of Samadhi (meditation) and Samapattı (concordance), and attaın to the ground where the Tathagatas walk, and in these make progress "

At that moment, the Blessed One recognising that the Lord of Lankä is to attain the Anutpattikadharmakshānti² showed his glorious compassion for the ten-headed one by making himself visible once more on the mountain-peak studded with many jewels and enveloped in a net-work of jewels. The ten-headed King of Lankä saw the splendour again as seen before on the mountain peak, [he saw] the Tathagata, who was the Arhat and the Fully-enlightened One, with the thirty-two marks of excellence beautifully adorning his person, and also saw himself on each mountain-

¹ The original text here as it stands does not seem quite intelligible to me. Hence I have followed the T'ang which generally gives the best reading.

² This is explained later more or less fully as it is one of the most significant conceptions of Mahayana Buddhism peak, together with Mahāmati, in front of the Tathagata, the Fully-enlightened One, putting forward his discourse on the realisation experienced by the Tathagata in his immost self, and, surrounded by the Yakshas, conversing on the literary teaching, recitation, and story [of Buddhism?] Those (13) [Buddha]-lands were seen with the Leaders 1

Then the Blessed One beholding again this great assembly with his wisdom-eye, which is not the human eye, laughed loudly and most vigorously like the hon-king Emitting rays of light from the tuft of hair between the eyebrows, from the ribs, from the loins, from the Śrivatsa² on the breast, and from every pore of the skin,—emitting rays of light which shone flaming like the fire taking place at the end of a kalpa, like a luminous rainbow, like the rising

There is surely a discrepancy here in the text T'ang reads "In all the Buddha-lands in the ten quarters were also seen such events going on, and there was no difference whatever " Wei is quite different and has the following "Bendes, he saw all the Buddha lands and all the kings thinking of the transitoriness of the body. As they are covetously attached to their thrones, wives, children, and relatives, they find themselves bound by the five passions and have no time for eman-Seeing this, they abradon their dominious, palaces, wives, concubines, elephants, horses, and precious treasures, giving them all up to the Buddha and his Brotherhood They now retreat into the mountain woods, leaving their homes and wishing to study the doctrine He [Ravana] then sees the Bodhisattvas in the mountain woods strenuously applying themselves to the mastery of the truth, even to the extent of throwing themselves to the hungry tiger, hon, and Rakshasts He thus sees the Bodhisattvas reading and reciting the sutras under a tree in the woods and discoursing on them for others, seeking thereby the truth of the Buddha He then sees the Bodhisattvas seated under the Bodhi tree in the Bodhi mandala thinking of suffering beings and meditating on the truth of the Buddha. He then sees the venerable Mahlmatı the Bodhısattıa before each Buddha preaching about the spiritual discipline of the inner life, and also sees [the Bodhsattva] surrounded by all the Yakshas and families and talking about names, words, phrases, and paragraphs '' This last sentence is evidenty the translation of the Sanskrit desanapathalatham, which is contrasted in the Lankavatara throughout with pratyatmaryajaanagocara (the spiritual realm realised by the supreme wisdom in one's inmost con sciousness)

⁸ Swastika

sun, blazing brilliantly, gloriously—which were observed from the sky by Śakra, Brahman, and the guardians of the world, the one who sat on the peak [of Lankā] vying with Mount Sumeru laughed the loudest laugh. At that time the assembly of the Bodhisattvas together with Śakra and Brahman, each thought within himself

"For what reason, I wonder, from what cause does the Blessed One who is the master of all the world (sarvadharma-vaśavartm), after smiling first, laugh the loudest laugh? Why does he emit rays of light from his own body? Why, emitting [rays of light], does he remain silent, with the realisation [of the truth] in his inmost self, and absorbed deeply and showing no surprise in the bliss of Samādhi, and reviewing the [ten] quarters, looking around like the lionking, and thinking only of the discipline, attainment, and performance of Rāvana?"

At that time, Mahāmati the Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva who was previously requested by Ravana [to ask the Buddha concerning his self-realisation], feeling pity on him, (14) and knowing the minds and thoughts of the assembly of the Bodhisattvas, and observing that beings to be born in the future would be confused in their minds because of their delight in the wordy teaching (desanāpātha), because of their clinging to the letter as [fully in accordance with] the spirit (artha), because of their clinging to the disciplinary powers of the Śrāvakas. Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers. -which might lead them to think how it were that the Tathagatas, the Blessed Ones, even in their transcendental state of consciousness should burst out into loudest laughter -Mahamatı, the Bodhısattva, asked the Buddha ın order to put a stop to their inquisitiveness the following question: "For what reason, for what cause did this laughter take place ?"

Said the Blessed One "Well done, well done, O Mahāmati! Well done, indeed, for once more, O Mahāmati!

This is wanting in the Chinese translations.

Viewing the world as it is in itself and wishing to enlighten the people in the world who have fallen into a wrong view of things in the three periods of time, thou undertakest to ask me the question. Thus should it be with the wise men who want to ask questions for both themselves and others Rāvana, Lord of Lankā, O Mahāmati, asked a twofold question of the Tathagatas of the past who are Arhats and perfect Buddhas, and he wishes now to ask me too a twofold question in order to have its distinction, attainment, and scope ascertained—this is what is never tasted by those who practise the meditations of the Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers, and the same will be asked by the question-loving ten-headed one of the Buddhas to come."

Knowing that, the Blessed One said to the Lord of Lanka, thus. "Ask, O thou, Lord of Lanka, the Tathagata has given thee permission [to ask], delay not, whatever questions thou desirest to have answered. I will answer each of them (15) with judgment to the satisfaction of thy Keeping thy seat of thought free from [false] discrimination, observe well what is to be subdued at each stage; ponder things with wisdom; [seeing into] the nature of the inner principle in thyself, abide in the bliss of Samādhi, embraced by the Buddhas in Samādhi, abide in the bliss of tranquillisation; going behind the Samadhi and understanding attained by the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas, abide in [the attainment of the Bodhisattvas] in the stages of Acalā. Sādhumatī, and Dharmameghā, grasp well the egolessness of all things in its true significance, be anomited by the Buddhas [with the water] of Samadhı at the great palace of lotus-jewels 'Surrounded by the Bodhi-

The following sentence is done by the aid of T'ang, as the Sangkrit does not seem to give any sense Interally translated it reads "There by the becoming lotuses, by those lotuses that are blessed variously by the benediction of his own person ." Wer has. "O King of Lanks, thou wilt before long see thy person, too, thus sitting on the lotus throne and continuing to abide there in a most natural manner. There are innumerable families of lotus kings and which resounded [all around], and then descending from the air, [the Lord of Lanka] sat down on the peak of the jewel-mountain ornamented with magnificent jewel-lotus whose splendour was second only to the sun and lightning Sitting he made courtesy, smiling first to the Blessed One for his permission, and proposed to him a twofold question "It was asked of the Tathagatas of the past, who were Arhats, Fully-enlightened Ones, and it was solved by them O Blessed One, now I ask of thee. [the request] will certainly be complied with by thee as it was by the Buddhas [of the past] in verbal teaching 1 O Blessed One, duality was discoursed upon by the Transformed Tathagatas and Tathagatas of Transformation. but not by the Tathagatas of Silence 2 The Tathagatas of Silence are absorbed in the blissful state of Samādhi, they do not discriminate concerning this state, nor do they discourse on it O Blessed One. thou assuredly will discourse on this subject of duality Thou art thyself a master of all things, an Arhat, a Tatha-The sons of the Buddha and myself are anxious to listen to it "

The Blessed One said, "O Lord of Lanka, tell me what you mean by duality?"

The Lord of the Rākshasas, (17) who was renewed in his ornaments, full of splendour and beauty, with a diadem, bracelet, and necklace strung with vajra thread, said, "It is said that even dharmas are to be abandoned, and how much more adharmas (no-dharmas)! O Blessed One, why does this dualism exist that we are called to abandon? What are adharmas? and what are dharmas? How can there be a duality of things to abandon? Does not duality arise from falling into discrimination, from discriminating self-substance where there is none, from [the idea of] things

That is, as far as the teaching could be conveyed in words Descaragatha stands in contrast with mediants or pratyelmagati in the Lankswaters created and uncreated, because the non-differentiating nature of the Alayavijnana is not recognised? Like the seeing of a hair-circle as really existing in the air, [the notion of dualism] belongs to the realm of intellection not exhaustively purified. This being the case as it should be, how could there be any abandonment [of dharmas and adharmas]?"

In T'ang and Wei "Original Tathagatas"

Said the Blessed One, "O Lord of Lanka, seest thou not that the differentiation of things, such as is perceived in jars and other breakable objects whose nature it is to perish in time, takes place in a realm of discrimination [cherished by] the ignorant? This being so, is it not to be so understood? It is due to discrimination [cherished by] the ignorant that there exists the differentiation of dharma and adharma Supreme wisdom (āryazñāna), however, is not to be realised by seeing [things this way] O Lord of Lanka, let it be so with the ignorant who follow the particularised aspect of existence that there are such objects as jars, etc., but it is not so with the wise. One flame of uniform nature rises up depending on houses, mansions, parks, and terraces, and burns them down, while a difference in the flames is seen according to the power of each burning material which varies in length, magnitude, etc. This being so, why (18) is it not to be so understood? The duality of dharms and adharms thus comes into existence. Not only is there seen a fire-flame spreading out in one continuity and yet showing a variety of flames, but from one seed, O Lord of Lanka, are produced, also in one contimuity, stems, shoots, knots, leaves, petals, flowers, fruit. branches, all individualised As it is with every external object from which grow [a variety of] objects, so also with internal objects. From Ignorance there develop the Skandhas, Dhātus, Ayatanas, with all kinds of objects accompanying, which grow out in the triple world where we have, as we see, happiness, form, speech, and behaviour. each differentiating [infinitely]. The oneness of the Vijnana is grasped variously according to the evolution of an objective world; thus there are things seen inferior, superior, or middling, things defiled or free from defilement, things good or bad. Not only, O Lord of Lanka, is there such a difference of conditions in things generally, there is also seen a variety of realisations attained inwardly by each religious practiser as he treads the path of discipline which constitutes his practice. How much more difference in dharma and adharma do we not see in a world of particulars which is evolved by discrimination? Indeed, we do

"O Lord of Lanka, the differentiation of dharma and adharma comes from discrimination O Lord of Lanka. what are dharmas? That is, they are discriminated by the discriminations cherished by the philosophers, Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and ignorant people They think that the dharmas headed by Guna and Dravya are produced by causes-[these are the notions] to be abandoned not to be regarded [as real] because they are appearances It comes from a man's clinging [to appearances] that the manifestations of his own mind are regarded as reality (19) Such things as jars, etc., are products (dharmatā) of discrimination conceived by the ignorant, they exist not, The viewing of things their substances are not attainable from this viewpoint is known as their abandonment

"What, then, are adharmss? O Lord of Lankā, what we call dharmas are not attainable, they are not appearances born of discrimination, they are above causality, there is in them no such [dualistic] happening as is seen as reality and non-reality. This is known as the abandoning of dharmas. What again is meant by the unattainability of dharmas? That is, it is like horns of a hare, or ass, or camel or horse, or a child conceived by a barren woman. They are dharmas the nature of which is unattainable, they are not to be thought of [as real] because they are appearances. They are only talked about in popular parlance if they have any sense at all, they are not to be adhered to as in the case of jars, etc. As these [unrealities] are to be abandoned as not comprehensible by the mind (vijñāna), so are things (bhāva) of discrimination also to be abandoned. This is called the abandoning of dharmas and adharmas. O Lord of Lankä, your questioning as to the how of abandoning dharmas and adharmas is hereby answered.

"O Lord of Lanka, thou sayest again that thou hast asked [this question] of the Tathagatas of the past who were Arhats and Fully-enlightened Ones and that it was solved by them. O Lord of Lanka, that which is spoken of as the past belongs to discrimination; as the past is thus a discriminated [idea], even so are the [ideas] of the future and the present Because of reality (dharmata) the Tathagatas do not discriminate, they go beyond discrimination and futile reasoning, they do not follow (20) the individuation-aspect of forms, except when [reality] is disclosed for the edification of the unknowing and for the sake of their happiness. It is by Prajūā that the Tathagata performs deeds transcending forms; therefore, what constitutes the Tathagatas in essence as well as m body is

This is one of the most important sections in this first introductory chapter, but sungularly all the three texts, perhaps excepting T'ang, present some difficulties for clear understanding. Wer "O Lord of Laika, what you speak of as past is a form of discrimination, and so are the future and the present also of discrimination. O Lord of Lanka, when I speak of the real nature of suchness as being real, it also belongs to discrimination, it is like discriminating forms as the ultimate limit If one wishes to realise the bliss of real wisdom, let him discipline himself in the knowledge that transcends forms, therefore, do not discriminate the Tathagatas as having knowledge-body or wisdom-essence Do not cherish any discrimination in [thy] mind. Do not cling in [thy] will to such notions as ego, personality, soul, etc How not to discriminate? It is in the Manovijuana that various conditions are cherished such as forms, figures, [etc]; do not cherish such [discriminations]. Do not discriminate nor be discriminated Further, O Lord of Lanks, it is like various forms painted on the wall, all sentient beings are such O Lord of Lanks, all sentient beings are like grasses and trees, with them there are no acts, no deeds, O Lord of Lanks, all dharmas and adharmas, of them nothing is heard, nothing talked O Lord of Lanks, all things in the world are like mays.

wisdom (jñāna). They do not discriminate, nor are they discriminated Wherefore do they not discriminate in the Manas? Because discrimination is of the self, of soul, of personality How do they not discriminate in the Manovijāna f [The Manovijāna] is meant for the objective world where causality prevails as referred to forms, appearances, conditions, and figures Therefore, discrimination and non-discrimination must be transcended

"O Lord of Lanka. that which comes out in manifestation is [like] a figure inlaid in a wall, it has no sensibility [or consciousness] O Lord of Lanka, all that is in the world is devoid of work and action because all things have no reality, and there is nothing heard, nothing hearing O Lord of Lanka, all that is in the world is [like] an image magically transformed This is not comprehended by the philosophers and the ignorant O Lord of Lanka, he who thus sees things, is the one who sees truthfully Those who see things otherwise walk in discrimination, as they depend on discrimination, they cling to dualism It is like seeing one's own image reflected in a mirror, or one's own shadow in the water, or in the moon-T'ang. "O Lord of Lanks, what you speak of as past is no more than discrimination, so is the future, I too am like him [Is this to be read, "the present, too, is like it" ? O Lord of Lanks, the teach ing of all the Buddhas is outside discrimination, as it goes beyond all discriminations and futile reasonings, it is not a form of particularies tion, it is realised only by wisdom. That [this absolute] teaching is at all discoursed about is for the sake of giving bliss to all sentient beings The discoursing is done by the wisdom transcending forms It is called the Tathagata, therefore, the Tathagata has his essence, his body in this wisdom. He thus does not discriminate, nor is he to be discriminated Do not discriminate him after the notions of ego, personality, or being Why this impossibility of discrimination? Because the Manovijnana is aroused on account of an objective world wherein it attaches itself to forms and figures Therefore, [the Tathagata] is outside the discriminating [view] as well as the discriminated [idea] O Lord of Lanks, it is like beings painted in colours on a wall, they have no sensibility [or intelligence]. Sentient beings in the world are also like them, no acts, no rewards [are with them] So are all the teachings, no hearing, no preaching " light, or seeing one's shadow in the house, or hearing an echo in the valley. People grasping their own shadows of discrimination (21) uphold the discrimination of dharma and adharma, and, failing to carry out the abandonment of the dualism, they go on discriminating and never attain tranquility. By tranquillity is meant oneness, and oneness gives birth to the highest Samādhi, which is gained by entering into the womb of Tathagatahood, which is the realm of supreme wisdom realised in one's immost self."

п

THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA AND THE TEACHING OF ZEN BUDDHISM

THE LANKAVATARA SUTRA AND THE TEACHING OF ZEN BUDDHISM

PRELIMINARY NOTE

The study of the Lankavatara may best be approached in its especial relation to the teaching and history of Zen Buddhism. It was principally due to Bodhidharma, father of the Zen in China, that the sutra came to be prominently taken notice of by students of Buddhism, and it was mainly by his followers that its study was systematically carried on and its commentaries written. This has already been mentroned It is true that the Yogācāra school, or the Dharmalakshana sect (法相宗) of Chinese and Japanese Buddhism makes frequent references to it as supporting the psychological theories of their school, but this side of the sutra 18 incidental, its chief theme being the doctrine of selfrealisation. Whatever psychology, or logic, or metaphysics it may contain, is to prove the main doctrine. The sutra is by no means systematically developed as has been repeatedly noticed, but the current running underneath the whole text 18 unmıstakable There is no doubt that this underneath current in spite of the memorandum-like nature of the sutra is in closest touch with the teaching of Bodhidharma and his school

The study of the sutra, however, has not been so vigorously prosecuted as that of other Mahayana sutras, such as the Saddharmapundarīka, Vimalakīrti, Avatamsaka, or Sukhāvatīvyūha. This neglect has especially been the case with the followers of Zen, who ought to have studied it most seriously, but whose indifference to philosophy and cognate subjects is notorious. Added to this, the fact that the sutra not only in the Chinese translations but in the original Sanskrit presents many difficulties in grammar and m meaning has increased the continued neglect of it the time is ripe for us to take it up and subject it to a serious study now that we have the Sanskrit edition completed by the unceasing efforts of the late Dr. Bunyū Nanjō my intention here to treat it as the sutra par excellence in relation to the Zen teaching of Buddhism While Zen as a rule abhors any connection with one special sutra or sastra, the undeniable fact remains that the Lankavatara was the book handed by Bodhidharma to his first disciple Hui-k'ê (禁可) as the sutra containing the essential teachings of his This being the case, it is natural for his followers of the present time to renew the investigation and study of Besides, no religious experience can stand outside a more or less intellectual interpretation of it Zen may like to ignore its literary or philosophical side, and it is justified in doing so, no doubt, but to think that this implies the absolute ignoring of all attempts at any form of interpretation would be a grievous error

PART I

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE PRINCIPAL IDEAS EXPOUNDED IN THE SUTTA

The Breadth of Mahayana Buddhism

Buddhism, especially Mahayana Buddhism so called, is like a vast ocean where all kinds of living beings are allowed to thrive in a most generous manner, almost verging on a chaos. Students who lightly step into it generally find it too complicated and overwhelming for their logical comprehension. But the fact is that Mahayana Buddhism is the outcome of long years of development of a religious system among a people furnished with a most fertile imagination. The student has to be patient. The best method of study may probably be found by taking up one principal Mahayana sutra at a time, and examining its contents historically. philosophically, and psychologically The Chinese scholars encountered the same difficulties centuries ago, and as in those days there was no lower or higher criticism of the sacred texts, every tradition was respected on its face value The scholars exhausted their ingenuity to make a logical. humanly plausible arrangement among the vast treasure of literature brought over from India and all claiming to have been delivered by the Buddha himself This untenable position is now abandoned, and each sutra has come to be studied. historically, critically, and analytically Each principal sutra may now be regarded as marking a certain stage or phase of development in the history of Mahayana Buddhism, which is indeed too huge and unwieldy to be handled as one solid piece of work completed within a few decades

What, then, does the Lankāvatāra signify in the composite system of Mahayana Buddhism? What phase does it represent in the long history of Buddhism? What in short is the message of the Lankāvatāra as we have it now? What function does it or did it perform in the conservation of Buddhist thought and experience?

Each principal sutra has had its special work to accomplish in the unfoldment of the religious consciousness of the Buddhists. For instance, the Saddharmapundarīka marks the epoch in the history of Buddhism when Šākyamuni ceased to be conceived of as a historical personage subject to the fate of all transient beings, for he is no more a human Buddha but one who lives through eternity for the benefit of all creatures. All that he is recorded to have done in history is no more than one of his "skilful means" (upāya) to save mankind. So we read.

"I show the place of extinction, I reveal to all beings a device (upāya) to educate them, albeit I do not become extinct at the time, and in this very place [that is, Mount Gridhrakuta] I continue preaching the Dharma Here I rule myself as well as all beings. But men of perverted minds in their delusion do not see me standing here. In the opinion that my body is completely extinct, they pay worship in many ways to the relies, but me they see not They feel, however, a certain aspiration by which their minds become right. When such upright, mild, and gentle creatures leave off their bodies, then I assemble the crowd of disciples and show myself here on the Gridhrakuta And I speak thus to them in this very place I was not completely extinct at the time; it was but a device of mine, monks, repeatedly am I born in the world of the living . I see how the creatures are afflicted. but I do not show them my proper being Let them first have an aspiration to see me, then I will reveal to them the true Dharma."1

The Suvarnaprabhāsa, at least in part, belongs to the same period, when it says. "Every drop in the oceans may be counted up, but the age of Sakyamum is altogether beyond calculation. Mount Sumeru may be pulverised and every particle is countable, but the age of Sakvamuni is altogether beyond calculation However unnumerable, every particle of dust composing the great earth may be counted up, but not the age of the Victorious One However boundless space 15, its ends may be reached, but the age of Sākyamum is altogether beyond calculation. However long one may live through hundreds of kotis of eons, he cannot count up the age of the Buddha. There are two deeds whereby a man's life is prolonged not to kill others and to give away For this reason the age of the Great Man much food cannot be measured, it is like the measure of kalpas which are incalculable Therefore, harbour not any shadow of doubt as to the age of the Victorious One which is indeed beyond the reach of measurement ''2

The Sukhāvatīvyūha represents a stage in the history of

¹ S.B E., Vol XXI, pp. 307-308

Nanjo and Idrum edition, pp 9-10 This edition has so far only partly appeared in The Bastern Buddhist, Vol V. No 1

Buddhist experience which ceased to be wholly satisfied with the intellectual presentation of the doctrine of enlightenment, when Buddhists began to be oppressed with the idea of sin and doubt hanging over them too heavily and acutely. Read the following in which the destiny of those Bodhisativas is described who have not yet come to have an absolute faith in the wisdom of the Buddha but who try to save themselves by amassing their own stock of merit

"And, O Anta, there might be a dungeon belonging to an anointed Kshatriva king, inlaid entirely with gold and beryl, in which cushions, garlands, wreaths, and strings are fixed, having canonies of different colours and kinds, covered with silk cushions, scattered over with various flowers and blossoms, scented with excellent scents, adorned with arches. courts, windows, pinnacles, fire-places, and terraces, covered with nets of bells of the seven kinds of gems, having four angels, four pillars, four doors, four stairs; and the son of that king having been thrown into the dungeon for some misdeed is there, bound with a chain made of the Jambunada gold And suppose there is a couch prepared for him. covered with many woollen cloths, spread over with cotton and feather cushions, having Kalinga coverings, and carpets, together with coverlids, red on both sides, beautiful and charming. There might be brought to him much food and drink, of various kinds, pure and well prepared do you think, O Anta, would the enjoyment be great for that Dringe?

"Ajita said Yes, it would be great, O Bhagavat

"The Bhagavat said. What do you think, O Ajita, would he even taste it there and notice it, or would he feel any satisfaction from it?

"He said. No, indeed, O Bhagavat, but, on the contrary, when he had been led away by the king and thrown into the dungeon, he would only wish for deliverance from there He would seek for the nobles, princes, ministers, women, elders, householders, and lords of castles, who might deliver him from that dungeon Moreover, O Bhagavat, there is no pleasure for that prince in that dungeon, nor is he liberated, until the king shows him favour

"The Bhagavat said Thus, O Ajita, it is with those Bodhisattvas who, having fallen into doubt, amass a stock of merit, but doubt the knowledge of the Buddha."

It is very interesting to contrast these passages from the Sukhāvatīvyūha with the thought pervading the Prajūāpāramitā-sūtra For the Prasnāpāramitā dwelling on the conception of unreality or emptiness (śūnyatā) seeks deliverance from the dungeon of existence, or rather interprets the Buddhist realisation purely from a metaphysical point of The doctrine of Sünyata2 constituting the keynote of the Pranantans really the foundation of all the Mahayana schools of Buddhism including even the Yogācāra What is known as primitive Buddhism denied the existence of an ego-substance (ātman), but its conception of the external world was that of the naive realist The Prajnaparamitā philosopher insists on the non-existence of a particular body as such, that is, as an objective reality whose identity is Every being or every object, as he sees it, is relative, impermanent, and not worth attachment. This Prazñāpāramstā idea of unreality, or emptiness as the literal sense of the term sūnyatā is, is the foundation of the Buddhist theory of nature

Thus, in the Prajūāpāramitā, supreme enlightenment is

¹ SBE XLIX, The Larger Sulhavativyüha, pp 63-64

The theory of Sünyath (emptiness or void) is one of the best-known theories propounded by the Mahayana, but it is one of the least-understood especially by those whose thought has never run along the line of Mahayana ontology. But, even among Buddhist scholars, there are some who do not so fully comprehend the doctrine as one may expect of them, seeing that they must have been imbued with the idea since the beginning of their study. The reason is that the doctrine itself is quite hable to be wrongly or inadequately interpreted, owing to its subtlety or depth, or to its extreme simplicity, as it is variously approached and taken hold of. See also below where the doctrine of "Anutpida" (no-burth) is treated identified with the attainment of Sünyatä. In other words, the object of the Buddhist life is to find an unattached abode in this realisation. This abode is called apratishthita, notabiding. Hence the noted phrase in the Dramond Sutra. XIV na kvacrt pratishthitam crttam utpādamtavvam 1 The Tathagata has no dwelling place in the sense that all his thoughts and doings have no exterior or ulterior objects in view to which he desires to adapt himself, and therefore that he is like the sun that shines on everybody just and unjust. or like the lilv in the field that blooms in its best even when there is nobody around to admire its supra-Solomonic array. So we have again in the Ashtasāhasrika, Chapter II, p. 34: "A Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva should abide himself in the perfection of Prania by abiding in emptiness.... The Tathagata is so called because he is not abiding anywhere, his mind has no abode neither in things created nor in things uncreated, and yet it is not away from them " This is the message of all the sutras belonging to the Praynaparameta ezelo

As to the Avatamsaka-sūtra, it is really the consummation of Buddhist thought, Buddhist sentiment, and Buddhist To my mind, no religious literature in the experience world can ever approach the grandeur of conception, the depths of feeling, and the gigantic scale of composition, as attained by this sutra. It is the eternal fountain of life from which no religious mind will turn back athirst or only partially satisfied It is a great pity that this magnificent literature still remains concealed in a language not so universally accessible. Here not only deeply speculative minds find satisfaction, but humble spirits and heavily-oppressed hearts, too, will have their burdens lightened Abstract truths are so concretely, so symbolically represented here that one will finally come to a realisation of the truth that even in a particle of dust the whole universe is seen reflected-not this

1

^{1 &#}x27;'A Bodhusattva should have his thoughts awakened without abiding in anything whatever.'' In Chinese, 廣美所住而主其命

visible universe only, but a vast system of universes, conceivable by the highest minds only. Towards the end of this section I have translated the ten vows of the Bodhisattva Samantabhadra as given in the final chapter of the Gandavyūha, which forms a part of the Chinese Avatamsaha

The Teaching of the Lankavatara

Where does the Lankāvatāra stand then? It may be classed in a way with the Avatamsaka masmuch as it teaches the absolute idealism of the latter and is the disclosure of the inner mind of the Buddha, but it has a special message to give to the Buddhist world in a manner characteristic of the sutra. It is devoid of all symbolism, quite different in this respect from Avatamsaka. It is, instead, straightforward in expression and notes down in a somewhat sketchy style almost all the ideas belonging to the different schools of Mahayana Buddhism. It is partly for this reason that the sutra requires a great deal of learning as well as an insight to understand all the details thoroughly. The principal thesis of the Lankāvatāra, however, may be regarded as summarised in the following passage.

"Again, O Mahāmati, there may be other Sramanas and Brahmans who hold the following views that all things have no self-substance (nihsvabhāva)," they are like a cloud, like a circle traced out by a revolving fire-brand, or like the aircastle of the Gandharvas, that they are unborn (anut-pāda)," that they are like māyā, or mirage, or the moon in water, or a dream, that external objects are manifestations of the mind erroneously perceived due to false discrimination (vikalpa)² since time immemorial, that by thus viewing the world one ceases to be conditioned by the false discrimination worked out in one's own mind, one does away with the terminology belonging to such false discrimination and with the signification of words such as predicating and predicated, that when one understands that the body, property, and abiding-place¹ are the particularisations of the Alaya-vijāna (or citta, mind), one is freed from [ideas such as] perceived and perceiving, attains to a state of no-image, or shadowlessness (nirābhāsa).² O Mahāmati, such a Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva will before long realise the sameness of Samsāra and Nirvāna

As to the meaning of these terms, see below

¹ This is done mainly from the Tang version, the Kökyöshom edition of the Buddhist Tripitaka, 黄 (huang), VI, 87b f Of the Sanskrit text (pp 42f) Throughout this book, wherever page-references are given, unless specified, they all refer to the Sanksrit text edited by B Nanjö

"O Mahāmatı, by deeds of great love (mahākarunā). skilful means (upāya), and effortlessness (anābhogacaryā).3 a Bodhisattva reviews all beings and knows that they are like māyā, they resemble shadows, they are not produced by causes; and, further, knowing that the world exists not outside the mind, he leads a life of formlessness (animitta). As he gradually goes up the higher stages (bhūmi), he will realise a state of Samadhi where he comes to the understanding that the triple world is Mind itself (cittamātra) Samādhi he attains is called Māvā-like (māvopama). He will further free himself from all images, perfect his knowledge, and realise that things are unborn, and entering upon the Samadhi called Vajravimbopama, will obtain the Buddha-He will, always abiding in the suchness of things, manifest himself in transformed bodies, he will be endowed with the ten Powers, the six Psychic Faculties, and the ten-

Deha-bhoga-pratishtha is found generally in combination. It means this bodily existence with its material possessions and its physical surroundings; in short it stands for the world generally.

This is a spiritual state of absolute purity in which one finds no traces of dualism. It is a complete identification of the self with the suchness or thusness (tathatā) of things, and there is no thought of birth, abiding, and disappearance, seeing that all things start from the evolution of one's own mind (evacitta).

or purposelessness, a state of perfect adjustment, when one is not at all conscious of doing anything special for any particular individual. The sun is said to be effortless or purposeless in its work when it shines on the just and on the unjust.

fold Self-mastery. O Mahāmatı, adorned with Upāya (skilful means), he will visit all the Buddha-lands, and disengaged from the philosophical doctrines as well as from the Citta. Manas, and Vijfiāna, he will experience a revulsion (parauritis) within himself and by degrees will attain the Tathagata-body.

"Therefore, O Mahamati, if a Bodhisattva wishes to attain the Tathagata-body, he should keep himself away from the Skandhas, Dhātus. Avatanas, Cittam, causation, works, discipline, birth, staying and passing, and cease from discriminating, philosophising, and abide in the thought of the "Mind-only" (cittamatra).

"When the triple world is surveyed [by the Bodhisattval, he perceives that this existence is due to memory (vāsanā) that has been accumulated since the beginningless past but wrongly interpreted. He recognises that Buddhahood is a state imageless, unborn, and to be inwardly experienced by oneself, when the mind becomes fully controlled and purposeless deeds are accomplished Like the Cintamani (wish-gem), he will now manifest himself in a variety of forms according to the needs of sentient beings and lead them to the view that only Mind is, and then gradually compel them to ascend the stages Therefore, O Mahamati, let the Bodhisattva discipline himself well in the work of selfrealisation (svasiddhānta) "

Being full of technical terms, the reader may find the import of the passage here quoted difficult to understand, but as we go on, it will, I hope, grow fully intelligible. In the meantime, the following paraphrase will help the reader to get a general idea of it

The highest stage of Buddhist experience is reached when a man comes to realise that things are devoid of a self-substance, or that they are not after all final, irreducible realities, for they never have been created, they are what they are from beginningless past, if we say that they have come into existence, or that they exist as we perceive them through the senses, this will imply that individualisation is ultimate fact, which, however, is contrary to the truth inwardly perceived by an enlightened mind

Individualisation is due to discrimination (vikalpa), which is falsely interpreted and adhered to by a heart blinded by desires and passions, and from this fact there issue all kinds of human tragedies and comedies. What really exists is mind, which is above all discrimination, that is, above logic and analysis. When this Mind which is designated in the sutra as the Alaya or Alayavijāna is discriminated by an erroneously self-created and self-reflecting agent called Manas, this world of particulars develops in its misleading fulness and richness.

Discrimination is the result of memory (vāsanā) accumulated from the unknown past Vāsanā literally means "perfuming," or "fumigation," that is, it is a kind of energy that is left behind when an act is accomplished and has the power to rekindle the old and seek out new impressions. Through this "perfuming," reflection takes place which is the same thing as discrimination, and we have a world of opposites and contraries with all its practical consequences. The triple world, so called, is therefore the shadow of a self-reflecting and self-creating mind. Hence the doctrine of "Mind-only" (cittamātra).

Reality as it is, or Mind in itself, is also called the suchness (tathatā) or sameness (samatā) of things, as herein are unified all forms of antithesis which constitute our actual world of sense and logic. The Bodhisattva abides in this suchness which transcends all our reasonings and discriminations. And because he abides in this transcendental realm his all-loving heart works without the taint of selfishness and one-sided attachment, using all contrivances (upāya) whereby to save his fellow-beings from pain and suffering These works of his are called purposeless for the reason that they are not actuated by any egotistic interests or desires or motives. They are called out from the abundance of his

ments of intellection as well as of conation

The world is like māyā, or mirage, as his intellect is no longer snared in the meshes of dualistic logic, he intuitively perceives that the world of particularisation is no more than the reflection of his own mind. His life is thus designated as formless or imageless and his deeds effortless and purposeless. Yet he never relaxes his efforts to benefit all sentient beings. He knows from his transcendental position that Samsāra and Nirvāna are the same (samatā), and yet he knows not when to stop working for the realisation of the highest ideals and also for universal salvation. His inner mind is then said to be abiding in the Samādhi known as Māyopama (mirage-like)

This seems to be the highest state of spiritual attainment realisable by a mind encased in a human body, but there is still a higher state to be attained by the Buddhist There is a higher body called Buddhakāya which is obtained when a man enters upon Vajravimbopama Samādhi. When this is obtained one is endowed with the ten Powers, the six Psychic Faculties, and the tenfold Self-mastery. He is then able to transform himself into various forms in order to benefit sentient beings in accordance with their desires and circumstances. He is also able to visit all the Buddhalands and to perform all Buddha-deeds.

The main object of the Buddhist life is thus seen to consist in having a certain spiritual revulsion, whereby we are able to leap from the dualistic shore of this individualistic world to the other shore of Nirvana, where there are no egoistic impulses and desires in evidence any longer, though this means not at all the death of a loving heart itself. To effect this revulsion, spiritual discipline is needed which finally leads up to a certain exalted inner condition. Enlightenment, self-realisation, or the opening of an inner eye is the name given to it. The Laikāvatāra calls it Pratyātmāryajūānagocara, or Svasiddhānta, and the main object of its teaching is to acquaint us with the fact of an inner perception which causes a spiritual revolution in our whole life

The reason why the Lankavatara is considered to be historically and doctrinally so closely related to Zen Buddhism is based on this fact that herein most emphatically asserted is the importance of an inner realisation as the source of all the religious virtues and blessings Zen, of all the schools of Buddhism, is preeminently the religion of enlightenment If the Buddhist life is to be regarded as consisting of Prajna (higher knowledge) or Bodhi (wisdom), and Karunā (love). Zen indeed makes most of the Prajñā element at least during its first stages of training, and this Pranta which it teaches is to be attained by transcending the relativity of worldly knowledge, which will free our desires and passions from the entanglements of the individualistic world-conception It does not teach to destroy all the impulses, instincts, and affective factors that make up the human heart, it only teaches to clear up our intellectual insight from erroneous discriminations and unjustifiable assertions; for when this is done the heart knows by itself how to work out its native virtues This is the position of Zen Buddhism, and in the following pages I wish to develop what the Lankavatara states on this subject, rather generally in the first part concerning the nature of the inner realisation, and in the second and the third part concerning its relations to logic, psychology, and the practical life

The All-importance of an Inner Realisation

The ideas that things are devoid of self-substance (svabhāva), that is, they are by nature empty (śūnya), that the world is nothing but Mind, that in order to reach the ultimate end of Buddhahood one must transcend all the limitations of dualism and particularisation, and finally that the state of enlightenment must be realised within one's self,—these are the common property of Mahayana Buddhism; but in the Lankāvatāra these ideas are developed in a way peculiar to this sutra By this I mean that it lays especial emphasis on the importance of self-realisation, without which the Buddhist life remains a mere philosophical exercise. The season why Bodhidharma (菩提達摩) handed this sutra over to Hui-k'ê (註頁) as containing the essence of Zen Buddhism must be sought in this that the constant refram of the Lankāvatāra is the all-importance of an inner perception (pratyātmagati) or self-realisation (svasiddhānta). Therefore, the purpose of this sutra is highly practical in spite of its abstract speculations

In the first chapter¹ which is added to the two later translations of the Lankāvatāra, we have this from the Buddha, who gently smiled looking at the palace of Lankā on Mount Malaya "All the Buddhas of the past have discoursed on the truth of an inner realisation which can be attained only by the supreme wisdom (āryajīāna) of the Buddha and never by the speculation (tarka) of the philosophers² or by the discipline of the Śrāvaka and Pratyekabuddha This truth I will now disclose for the benefit of Rāvana, King of Lankā"

And when the Bodhisattva Mahāmati finished praising the virtues of the Buddha in the beginning of Chapter II, (which is Chapter I of the Sung translation), the Buddha surveying the assembly made this remark "O ye, sons of the Victorious One, and O thou, Mahāmati, ask and I will instruct you concerning the attainment of the immost realisation (pratyātmagati)"

These statements are conclusive as showing that Lankāvatāra's special importance in the literature of Mahayana Buddhism lies in its perpetual upholding of this intuitive element in all religion. While the sutra has been made use

For an English translation from the Sanskrit text, see supra

Whenever "the philosophers" are referred to in this book, they mean Writya, or Writhakara, and Frit (was-tao) in Chinese, which literally means "other teachings".

^{*} P 2

of to support the claims of a particular school such as the Yogācāra or the Avatamsaka, m its connection with the doctrine of the Alayavijnana or Tathagata-garbha, this connection is accidental. The thesis of the sutra must be regarded as centered upon the idea of an inner perception of the deepest truth, which goes beyond language and reason-The Buddhist discipline or exercise (uoga) as is told by the Buddha consists of two parts, philosophical and practical. The philosophical discipline is to train the mind to absolute idealism and see that the world is Mind, and that there is in reality no becoming such as birth and death, and that no external things really exist; while the practical side is to attain an inner perception by means of supreme wisdom (svapratyātmāryajñānādhigama). Putting the practical side of Buddhist discipline first, we can say that when it is accomplished, the philosophical side follows by itself; that is to say, the world as seen in the light of self-realisation is to be interpreted in terms of absolute idealism. However this may be, the Lankavatara is decidedly rich in deep mystical speculations.

One thing I wish to notice in the Lankāvatāra before I proceed to describe the nature of the inner realisation, is that this sutra does not make one reference² to the awakening of the thought of enlightenment (bodhicittotpāda) made so much of, especially in the sutras of the Prayñāpāramitā group. The awakening of the thought of enlightenment means to take interest in the teaching of Mahayana Buddhism and to wish sincerely for the realisation of its truth. This is really the first step in the career of a Bodhisattva, for without this awakening no further progress in spiritual discipline will be possible. Therefore, in almost all the Mahayana sutras one is told to direct one's first thought toward enlightenment. When this is accomplished, one must come some day to the final attainment, however remote that day may be. In the Lankāvatāra no word is said about the awakening, but it goes directly to the heart of the matter, that is, it asks the Bodhisattva to come to the realisation at once, instead of making gradual advance toward the goal. In this respect, this sutra may be said to be an appeal to those Bodhisattvas who are already deeply steeped in the Mahayana teaching of Supreme Enlightenment.

² P 79 f. "To be great in the exercise that makes up Bodhisattvahood (mahdyogoyogin), one has to be an expert in four things. [three of which are intellectual and the last one is practical] (1) To perceive clearly that this visible world is no more than Mind itself; (2) to abandon the notion that birth, abiding, and passing-away really take place; (3) to look into the nature of things external and realise that they have no reality (abhāva), and finally (4) to train oneself towards the realisation of the truth in the immost consciousness by means of supreme wisdom."

This may not be quite an exact statement, as Mahamati does refer once or twice to it, but the Buddha himself does not touch the subject. He always talks about the realisation of the inner truth.

Another thing that the student of the Lankāvatāra notices is that the Buddha here tells Mahāmati to attain to a state of inner realisation (pratyātmagocara) and not of enlightenment (sambodhi). These two are psychologically the same process; when one has Pratyātmajūāna, one is enlightened. But in the Lankāvatāra the ultimate goal of the Buddhist life is generally stated in terms of experience (gocara) and not intellectually as illumining. I am inclined to think that the Lankāvatāra is unique in this respect explaining perhaps the reason why Bodhidharma, the father of Zen Buddhism in China, recommended it to his mystic followers.

When the Lankāvatāra refers to Gocara or Gatigocara, instead of to Bodhi or Sambodhi, we realise that the main

This does not mean that the Lankavatara never refers to the attainment of the Bodhi, for the Bodhi is the cardinal idea in every school of Buddhism, and the sutra frequently speaks of it, for instance, see pp 70, 73, 79, 85, 89, 112, 114, 148 We cannot help noticing however and emphasising the fact that the Lankavatara makes more frequent references to that higher state of consciousness in which is revealed the immost truth of things, than to the attainment of supreme embritamment object of the sutra centres on the acquirement and cultivation of a certain general subjective attitude towards the world and life, which is not merely philosophical or conceptual, but which comes from the experience of some definite turning in the activity of the mind. Sambodhi or enlightenment looks more toward the cognitive aspect of the revulsion (parāvritti) one experiences This is all well as far as it goes, which is indeed the basis of all Buddhism, be it Hınavana or Mahayana. The Lankāvatāra, however, has come to see that the whole of the Buddhist life is not in merely seeing into the truth, but in living it, experiencing it, so that there will be no dualism in one's life of seeing and hving seeing must be hving, and living seeing, with no hiatus between them, except in language Hence the Lankāvatāra's reference so much to living or experience. Gocara or Gatigocara, that is, Pratyatmagocara.

The Inner Experience and Language

This inner perception or realisation is made possible by the presence of the Tathagata-garbha within the heart of every sentient being.1 The Garbha, which literally means "womb," or better, "something interiorly hidden," is the seed of Tathagatahood from which a fully-enlightened being grows up This, however, is generally found covered up with defiled wrappings of false judgment (parikalpa or vikalpa) and irrational attachment (abhinivesa) judgment comes from not perceiving things as they are (yathābhūtam), that is, as not subject to the principle of individuation, which is imposed by the mind upon things considered external. As to the irrational attachment which causes in us all kinds of vexation, it is the inevitable result of false judgment The Garbha, therefore, originally pure and immaculate, must be restored to its natural state free from attachments. It is thus generally likened to a priceless gem concealed under a soiled garment Take the garment ¹ Pp. 77, 222.

off and the shiring stone will begin to shed its natural light over things as they are. The illumination thus obtained is a state of self-realisation, and one can then see the Garbha as if held in one's own hand, even as plainly as the āmalaka fruit. As the Garbha thus cleansed of its defilement is beyond the speculations of the philosophers and the attainment of the Hinayanists, the author of the Daśabhūmska² as well as the Laikāvatāra calls it Avikalpa, or Nirvikalpajūāna,³ meaning knowledge of non-judgment or non-discrimination, a kind of direct perception, or again knowledge of thusness or suchness (tathatājūāna).

In spite of the practical end it has in view, the Lankāvatāra is filled with abstract nomenclature, which sometimes turns away those unfamiliar with Buddhist literature from further pursuing their study of it. But this is unavoidable seeing that the experience on which the Lankāvatāra discourses is not within the reach of a consciousness ordinarily suffocated with contrary notions. The sutra is quite explicit in this respect as it declares that those who are tied (samsakia) to words do not understand the truth (tattvam), or that "the superior state of self-realisation is beyond speech and analysis". In fact, in this sutra the Buddha is never tired of repeatedly reminding us of the fact that language falls far too short of adequately representing the true state of self-realisation. This is in the nature of language. Language is always discriminative,

P 222 * Edited by J Rahder, p 64 * P 158, etc

See also Sthiramati's commentary on the Tremsike by Vasubandhu, edited by Sylvam Lévz, pp 40-41

Pp 223, 224, "As the ignorant sense upon the finger tip and not the moon, so, indeed, those who are fastened to letters comprehend not my truth"

an inner attainment which goes beyond words, letters and discriminations and leads to the realm of non-outflowings, it is the ground of inner realisation riself, it has nothing to do with the reasonings of the philosophers and evil doers, destroying all these philosophers and evil doers, self-realisation shines out.

when we make reference to anything, it is to be distinguished from other things, thus limiting it to that extent and to that But the supreme moment of self-realisation is not subject to any form of limitation and discrimination; perhaps the only way of describing it will be to say "that." or abstractly, "thusness" (tathatā), but even this is discriminating (parikalpita), and distorts the conception long as we are what we are, tied up to the exigencies of maternal existence and to the inherent needs of logical thinking, language is inevitable, and if we do not use words we have to resort to gestures and movements of some parts of the body in one way or another As the Lankavatara remarks,1 words are not necessarily used all over the world for the communication of ideas or feelings; for in some other Buddha-lands the Buddha-teaching is carried out by mere gazing, or by the contraction of the facial muscles, or by the raising of the eye-brows, by frowning or smiling, by clearing the throat, by the twinkling of an eye, by merely thinking, or by a motion of some kind. Articulate speech is not an absolute necessity for human intercourse. Mere gazing is said to be sufficient in the world of Samantabhadra to make one realise the highest state of enlightenment known as "Anutpattikadharmakshānti." Even in this world, says the sutra, the ordinary business of life is carried on most successfully among the bees or ants that never use words. If so we never need wonder at those Zen masters who merely raise a finger or utter an unintelligible cry in order to demonstrate the profoundest experience ever attainable by human consciousness. When there is nothing in my mind which can readily respond to or which is already awakened to take in what is flashed out from another mind, the latter may use the finest expression possible in our language. and yet my mind may remain perfectly blind to its truth. If, on the other hand, there is a chord of harmony between the two, a touch on either side will create a reverberation in the other There is no power in a language as such, though we cannot dispense with it by any means

^{&#}x27; P 105

This is explained below See pp 125 ff and pp. 226 f

The Lankanaiara here makes a distinction between words (ruta) and meaning (artha),1 and advises us not to understand meaning by merely depending upon words, to do which is quite ruinous to the comprehension of reality A word (ruta) is the combination of sound and syllable, subject to our logical or intellectual understanding (Vagakshara-samyoga-vikalpa) It issues from the cavity of the mouth between the teeth, saws, palate, tongue, and lips, when one is engaged in conversation, inflections, conjugations, and other grammatical and rhetorical modifications are effected according to the errors (whalpa) and innate desires (vāsanā)2 of the speaker. As to meaning (artha), it is an inner perception itself gained in self-realisation when one entering upon the path of Nirvana causes a revulsion (paravritii)3 in the deepest recesses of consciousness known as Alayavijñana To gain this inner perception, a man retires into a solitary spot all by himself, and, by applying himself assiduously to abstract meditations and deep reflections, his inner sense (prajñā) or self-knowledge (svabuddhi) begins to shine out from underneath the residual accumulation (vāsanā) of the past thoughts, affections, and deeds since time immemorial The meaning,

¹ Pp 154, 193 ff

^{*} Vilolya, literally means "to distinguish," "to determine," or "to discriminate," and is rendered in Chinese by AM (fên-pieh), which is the characteristic function of thinking Väsanä is a more difficult term implying the whole philosophy or psychology of Mahayana idealism. No English equivalent is found. In this book, "memory," "habit energy," or "impression," is rather loosely used for it. For fuller explanation, however, see below, pp. 128, 178, etc.

According to the T'ang translation, "They [the Hinsyanists] do not understand that the great Nirvana is obtained when through an inner perception there takes place a revulsion in the Alaya upon which depends the existence of an external world." Vasubandhu's Trimšikāvijūaptilārikā XXIX, also makes reference to this revulsion. The Lankāvatāra, pp. 62, 108, 238, etc. More about this revulsion later artha, thus realised in one's inmost consciousness is something no combination of the physical organs is capable of expressing in any way adequate to the experience. But as when searching for an object in the dark one has to rely on a lantern, meaning is after all to be gathered by means of words, at least it is to be thus oriented. The understanding of the relation thus existing between ruta (words) and artha (meaning) will be necessary when we wish to know the nature of the inner perception (svapratyātmajūāna).

This relation between words and meaning, or between syllables (akshara) and reality (tattvam or tathātvam).2 or between teaching (desanā) and truth (siddhānta),3 is like that between the finger and the moon.4 The finger is needed to point out the moon but it ought not to be taken for the latter. The same disastrous result follows from regarding akshara, or ruta, or deśanā as the reality itself. Those who are not able to take their eyes away from the finger-tip will never realise the ultimate truth (paramartha) of things 5 It is again like feeding the baby with uncooked food.6 it will be too late to resuscitate it when it has succumbed to the mother's unwise treatment Those trained in the Buddhist doctrine ought to be quite discriminating in this respect. Naturally, we would not know what the teaching of the Buddha was if we had had no communication in words, words were very much needed, but when there is no correspondence between words and meaning the teaching itself will lose its sense The Lankavatara thus reiterates throughout the text that the Tathageta never teaches the Dharma fallen into mere talk (aksharapateta), and it was

¹ "By means of the lamp of word and discrimination, the Bodhisattva-Mahisattvas go beyond word and discrimination and enter upon the path of self-realisation." P, 155

Pp 48, 196, etc.

Pp 148, 172

^{&#}x27; Pp 196, 223.

[&]quot;"The ignorant clinging desperately to the finger-tip of words are unable even unto their death to reach the ultimate truth." P. 196 for this reason that it was preached by the Buddha and other teachers of the Dharma that "the Tathagata had not uttered a word in answer or in discourse" during his lifetime between his Enlightenment and the Nirvana 1 The idea is, "Do not ching to words!" (Na desanā-ruta-pāthā 'bhinivesatam)2 For "dharmo naira ca desito bhagavatā pratyātmavedyo yatah "3

P. 196

Words are to be treated like the lunar reflection in water as far as they are related in meaning. The reflection is there, though the moon itself has not entered (apravishiam) into the water, nor is it to be considered as standing in no relation (nirgatam) to the water, because the latter has something in it to reflect the moon.4 Only let us not fall into the habit of superficially taking mere words for real meaning This is the warning of the Lankavatara Yatharutarthābhınıvcsasamdhau na prapatata 5

Disastrous Complications Arising from Discrimination

The habit of regarding words as completely and adequately expressing all that can be found there comes from another habit of ours, which is, in the terminology of the Lankāvatāra, our wrong discrimination or interpretation (vikalpa) of the aspect of existence which may be designated as individuation (prabhedanaya-lakshana, or vishaya-paric-

- Pp 144, 194, 240 The same idea is expressed in the Tathagataguhya sutra, which is quoted in Candrakirti's Commentary on the Madhyamska, B T. Society edition, p. 201.
- P 193

 Süträlamlära, XII, 2, p 77. "The truth has indeed never süträlamlära, XII, 2, p 77. "The truth has indeed never been preached by the Buddha, seeing that one has to realise it within oneself "
- 4 Jalacandra or udalacandra, pp 42, 72, 158, 198, 225, 227, etc This is also used to show the Tathagata's ability to manifest himself as he is conceived variously by his devotees, and again to symbolise the nature of existence as mere appearance
- P 160, "Do not fall into the secret error of getting attached to the meaning as expressed in words "
 - P 127.

cheda-lakshana1) When this aspect is well understood so that we shall no more be misled by wrong interpretation, we are able to get into a state of self-realisation. Individuation means to separate one object from another, and taking these separated, particular objects for final substances (svabhāva, or dharmātmyalakshana), to cling to this notion and thereby to keep up the evil desires and passions burning all the time According to the sutra. this wrong interpretation takes place in regard to several categories of thought and being such as (1) speech, (2) describable objects of thought. (3) appearances, (4) maternal wealth. (5) substance. (6) causal relations, (7) definite philosophical views. (8) reasonmes as to the existence of an ego. (9) coming into existence. (10) not coming into existence, (11) dependence, and (12) bondage and release 2 Logically considered, this kind of classification is baffling, but when we survey the Indian background which stimulated the Buddhist philosopher to speculate on such conglomerate subjects, we can readily enter into its spirit. For Buddhists, in fact for all Indian philosophers, there are no abstract problems of philosophy to be solved from a purely intellectual point of view. They are always tinged with religious sentiment, they have always some bearings on the most important practical question of life, which is how to get spiritual freedom. All the thinking carried on in this sutra, therefore, has always this question in view, and naturally those statements above referred to are to be explained according to the general trend of Buddhist thought

The wrong consideration about speech (1) creates an attachment to musical or literary productions which are not always spiritually enhancing, and these are to be avoided Objects of thought are describable and therefore are determinable (2), but the content of the inner perception forming the central theme of the Lankavatara is not subject to this limitation, and if one gets a wrong idea here, there will be no salvation for him, as he takes a thing indescribable and mexpressible for a thing to be seen, to be touched, and to Things describable have no permanency and be possessed consequently no spiritual value, but we are hable to judge them wrongly and get firmly attached to them (3) We are in this respect like those who fancy watery appearances in the desert to be a real sheet of water This faulty judgment may extend indefinitely over all appearances, and that the Hence this result will be ruinous goes without saying warning Attachment to material wealth or property (artha) is another case of false judgment as to appearance (4)

¹ P. 44.

² P. 128 et seq

Substance (svabhāva) means in the Lankāvatāra a concrete individual object, a residue after the last analysis, and the adherents of the substance-theory maintain that there are really such things outside the mind (5) Owing to this misjudgment, the way to self-realisation is blocked of causal relation refer to the ideas of "to be" (sat) and "not to be" (asat), which are considered real masmuch as they make it possible to establish causal relationship between But this idea of causality ought not things about us (6) to lead us to a first cause or a primary being from which all things derive their reality As we know, Buddhist philosophy denies the existence of a first cause as such The ideas of sat and asat are only relative and have no substantial existence besides being so named

We next come to such philosophical views as were entertained by different schools of thought at the time of the Lankāvatāra (9); according to which such categories as "to be" (asti) and "not to be" (nāsti), as oneness (ekatva) and otherness (anyatva), or as botheress (ubhaya) and not-bothness (anubhaya), are actualities and for that reason to be adhered to This is, however, wrong and is sure to lead one away from the inner realisation of the truth (8) Reasoning (yukti) is concerned with the notion of the ego; when this is thought to be a reality our spiritual development stops short. The Lankavatara, loyal to the traditional view of Buddhist philosophy, refuses to countenance the theory of ego-substance, which may be regarded as a corollary to the general substance-theory. (9) The notion of "coming into existence" (utpāda) is related to that of causality When certain causes and conditions are matured, people think something comes into actual existence and continues to exist until the causes and conditions cease to operate, for coming into existence and vanishing from it are both real facts as much as is the general law of causation. (10) The "nobirth" (anutvāda) view of things, on the contrary, argues that nothing has ever been brought into existence through causal relations, but that things are what they are prior to the operation of the law of causation And this is one of the characteristic views of the Lankavatara, and a special treatment of the subject appears below.1

!

Dependence (sambandha) and bondage (bandha) are similar ideas. The relation between metal and wire is dependence, while a man tied with a cord is in bondage, from which he can later be released when the cord is broken. All such relations when conceived as real and permanent become dangerous to the spiritual growth of a true Buddhist, that is, of a Bodhisattva (11 & 12).

Words (ruta) and meaning (artha), therefore, are to be separated, as the former generally fail to give us an exact idea of the object described with them. They are of course indicative, suggesting where to look for the meaning. Numerous indeed are close attachments (abhinivesasamdhi) a man makes to things and relations on account of a wrong understanding of their true nature and value, and, owing to these mistaken attachments, he wraps himself like a silkworm in a cocoon, binding tight not only himself but others?

¹ Pp 183 ff, of these Studies

² Pp 161-163 "Since the ignorant, seizing upon words [as corresponding to] the knowledge of reality, do not comprehend its secret aigmification, they wrap themselves up like the silkworm with their own false discrimination (47)."

Imagining things where they are not, or not perceiving them where they are, men are addicted to evil desires and passions. Let them learn to look into reality, yathābhūtam, for to do this is to break through the net of wrong judgment and false imagination and to attain the inward perception which is emancipation

The Meaning of Yathabhūtam and Māyā

To understand the world and selfhood as they really are -this is seeing yathābhūtam, one of the great trumpet-calls ringing through both Mahayana and Hinayana literature But to know exactly what "uathabhutam" means is the problem, for it does not allow of any definite description problem is to be settled only by appealing to experience, i.e., to direct perception when the truth has been grasped as such In this respect Buddhist terminology is often graphic and full of power; think of such terms as tathatā (如如 or 真如, ie, suchness or thusness), tattvam (如曾 or 真實, thatness), or satya (真鱬, being-so), which are used to designate the content of the inner perception (pratyātmajñāna). This seeing uathābhūtam constitutes the mystical element of all religion; and if one is affectively inclined. "Tat" (that) will have to be taken in faith; but when the intellectual claim predominates, "Tat" will have to be perceived with "a noble eve of wisdom" (arnapramacakshus) and not by a divine (divya) or human (māmsa) eye.1

The world seen through a divine or human eye is a world of māyā, but one disclosed to the Prajñā is the real one Therefore, logically speaking, māyā is not a quality objectively attached to the world, it is not inherent in it, it rather belongs to the subject. As indeed the idealistic Mahayana does not admit the existence of an external world, whatever qualities we ordinarily think as belonging to the latter are creations or constructions of our own mind. But if we allow ourselves to be guided by the discriminating imagination (parskalpa), the world must be said to have in itself something of the nature of maya; for its impermanence is patent to us all, it appears and disappears like lightning, having no self-substance in it. To say that this is an evanescent world is to say that it is always becoming, never in a state of being, that is, in constant flux as an ancient philosopher describes it We must, however, he most careful not to be carried away by the ordinary method of interpreting the world and designate its transiency or constant becoming in Mahayanistic terminology This is strongly coloured with an idealistic tinge, and to apply it in an objective realistic sense will be quite misleading. When the world is said to be like māyā, it is to be understood subpectively, and not objectively Such objective terms as transiency or a flux of becoming presuppose realism, and are not, strictly speaking, in harmony with the absolutely idealistic standpoint adopted by Mahavanists

¹ Pp 40, 164 P. 13, buddhyd na mamsacalshushd

So with the conception of Sunyata (emptiness), we must bear in mind the fact that the term is not to be found in a logician's dictionary, nor in one containing realistic terms only. For it is the word comed by the possessor of the Prajñacakshus (wisdom-eye) when he has reviewed the world as I look at a sheet of paper before me this very moment By him the world is perceived yathabhutam stripped of all its logical predicates and also its so-called objective trappings, the world thus appearing in its nakedness has been designated empty (śūnya), by the Mahayamsts It is in this sense, therefore, that it can be said there is nothing substantial in the world, nothing which has individuality (atmon), nothing which can be grasped; and that it slips through the hands, one predicate disappearing after another, so that it cannot be designated. as being (sat), nor by its opposite, not-being (asat). No term that admits of an antithesis can be applied to the world, as it is beyond the logic of opposites To mention some such terms of antithesis used frequently in the Lankavatara, they are (1) asis and nāsis, or sat and asat, (2) śāśvata and uccheda, (3) svalakshana and sāmānyalakshana, (4) lakshya and lakshana, (5) grāhya and grāhaka, (6) samsāra and nirvāna, (7) utpāda and nirodha, (8) kritaka and akritaka, (9) bāhyan and adhyātmaka, (10) anya and ananya, (11) anekatā and ckatā, (12) ubhaya and nobhaya, (13) nitya and anitya, (14) buddhi and boddhavya, etc. Before one term definitely fixes its quality, it runs over to the other alternative

The Lankavatara, therefore, declares that the world as it is does not fall within the four propositions or points (catushkotika).2 and in the first chapter even one hundred and eight negations are enumerated. The most truthful description of the state of things as we experience in this world of particulars, will be, from the Buddhist way of thinking, to compare it with maya as created by the magician a Making use of whatever objects a man chooses, he makes a variety of phantom creatures which appear to the spectators as real and substantial But in this neither the magician nor the objects fancifully created are at fault, the fault lies with the spectators who make erroneous judgments permitting things where they are not The sutra gives further analogical proofs to impress upon us the truth of the māyā-conception or that of Sūnyatā. That a picture is seen as if it really had three dimensions, that

^{1 (1)} being and non being, 有無 (2) eternal and discontinuous, 常新; (3) individuality and generality, 白性武性, (4) predicable and predicate, 所相能相; (5) seizable and seizing, 所政能取; (6) birth and death and nivana, 生无理数, (7) birth and extinction, 主故; (8) and and not-made, 作用, (9) external and internal, 所外; (10) other and not other, 他才能, (11) not oneness and oneness, 一不一, (12) both and not-both, 恨不识, (13) eternal and not eternal, 常經常; (14) know ledge and knowable, 先所是.

They are affirmation, "It is A", negation, "It is not A", double affirmation, "It is both A and not-A", double negation, "It is nother A nor not A",

^{*} Pp. 56, 109, 129-130, 199, etc.

⁴ Pp 90 ff, etc.

a bedimmed eye imagines a hair-net (keśondukam), that a circle traced out by a fire-brand in quick motion is considered real, that a bubble is taken for a crystal ball, and, further, that the reflection of a tree in a lake, an image in the mirror, an echo reverberating through the valley, a mirage in the spring-field, and the wooden man operated by a goblin (Piśāca)—that each of these objects is regarded as an actuality, is due to the error of judgment on the part of an unenlightened mind, which, being placed under the permeating memory-influence (vāsanā) of past thoughts and desires, is self-incapacitated from looking into the truth of the However, we must not take them for absolute illusions, for they are there and yet they are not there, so that the category of existence fails to be applied here. From the dualistic point of view, we feel inclined to interpret these terms objectively as denoting the idea of mere transiency or unreality, but when the whole trend of Buddhist thought is understood, we know that these similes are meant to describe a state of things, to which such logical conceptions as sat and asat, etc., are inapplicable, but which must be directly experienced in the inmost consciousness with the understanding of reality as it is.

The Lankavatara says.1

"The sky [or space], the hare's horns, and a barren woman's child-

They are not, only talked of; so are things discriminated. In the totality of causes and conditions, the ignorant imagine birth;

Not knowing this reason, they go astray in the triple world "

This may seem to mean. All things are mere names, their existence is not more than a matter of subjective discrimination; to think that things are really born, stay, and disappear in the system of causes and effects, is an illusion.

¹ P. 105

All these realities, so called, have no objective validity; and, therefore, the world is altogether empty, void, unreal, and a mass of nothingness. To think this way, however, is not the position of the Mahayanist What he wants us to do is that we should have a revulsion of the whole system of mentality and get a new point of view where we may survey the world wathabhūtam The sutra, therefore, states a little further down1 that the difference between the wise and the ignorant is that the former are free from the Viparyasa (as 価. teen-tao), while the latter are not. Veparyāsa literally means, "inversion" or "error", it means imagining things as they are not, taking error for truth The wise not hampered by this imagination see that the world is like māyā and has no reality, but at the same time they know that it is there, that it is not pure nothingness. Why? Because they have gone beyond the relativism of being and non-being The waters of the Ganges are not visible to the Preta, but since other people see them they cannot be said to be non-existent. In a similar way, the wise have a correct view of things for they are free from errors in their perception of an objective world, which exists only in relation to their own mind. An objective world is really an error (bhrānti, 妄独, wang-fa) in so far as it is discriminated as existing externally and individually. Or we may say that an external, particularised world is an illusion as long as the ignorant are unable to break through the fetters of Vikalpa, wrong discrimination, whereas to the wise the phenomenal world is true in its suchness (tathatā) What, therefore, is an error to one is truth to the other, because the latter is entirely free from all forms of discrimination (sa) vakalpanāvirahitam) 2

To repeat the objective world is an error, there is nothing real about it, it is maya, it is empty (śūnya), but this does not mean that it is altogether non-entity and merely a vast expanse of vacuity; the world, even if it is error, is there to the wise as well as to the ignorant, but the wise know that it is of an illusive nature and in this cognition they are neither perverted nor unperverted, they just see it in reality (wathabhatam), they perceive the world as it truly And while they do this, the world or what is regarded as such by the ignorant, is eternal (sāśvata or nitya), and beyond the reach of every possible dualistic category. It is in this sense that the Lankavatara declares: bhrantih śaśvata, bhrantis tattvam,1 "this world of error is eternity itself, truth itself " If the wise, as the sutra states, cherish even an incipient stirring of thoughts rooted in discrimination or particularisation of forms and signs (nimittalakshana-bhedatva), they are far from the reality and thought of supreme wisdom (ār varāāna) and the wise fall into the rank of the ignorant.

¹ Pp 106 ff

^{*} P 108

It, however, is to be remembered that the existence of this erroneous and confusing world makes it possible for the wise to cause a revulsion (parāvritti) in their minds and awaken their supreme wisdom from the narcotic effect of evil memory (vāsanā) accumulated since time immemorial This narcotic effect manifested in so many aspects of consciousness as Citta, Manas, Manovijñāna, etc., causes it to differentiate reality as in a dream into subjects and successive appearances and thus accepting them as real and final to ching to them as to the truth But, realising the illusive nature of these intellectual discriminations. the wise rise above them and seeing them as errors transmute falsehood into truth, phantasm into reality on account of this realisation they know that what confront them is neither reality (vastu) as imagined by the ignorant nor unreality (avastu) as inferred by the unreflecting The world is such as it is, it is neither existence nor non-existence, no such predicates are applicable to it, and for this reason what is to be termed an error

¹ Pp 106, 107,

(bhrānti) for the ignorant is Tathatā (suchness) for the wise Though this statement sounds paradoxial or even irrational, the position of the Lankāvatāra will readily be comprehended when we abandon our dualistic standpoint and see the world yathābhūtam, from its aspect of eternity (nityatā) So we have

"The wise do not see the erroneous world (bhrānti), nor is there any reality (tativam) in the midst of it [But] since the erroneous world is reality, there is reality in the midst of it

"If, by abandoning all that is of the erroneous world, something (nimittam) is to rise, this something is an error, like the cataract which has not yet been cleared off the eye"

In short, all such apparent paradoxes are designed to adjust our thoughts yathābhūtam to the actuality of existence, with which no ordinary rules of logic are compatible. To say, "It is," is eternalism (śāśvatavāda), to say that "It is not" is nihilism (ucchedavāda); and the object of Buddhist reasoning is to avoid both of these two antithetic views, though not necessarily attempting to establish idealistic monism, but to lead us to the way of experiencing it in its inwardness as well as in its totality

"O Lord of Lanka," reads the sutra, "he who sees thus sees rightly, if seen otherwise, it is 'carrying on discrimination' (vikalpa), because here is discrimination which leads to dualism. It is like seeing one's own face in water, or like seeing one's own shadow in the moonlight or by the lantern, or listening to an echo of one's own voice in the valley, wherein discrimination takes place leading to attachment. In like manner, to separate "Dharma" from "Adharma" (or a from not-a) is only due to discrimination, and on account of this one finds it impossible to do away with the distinction, thereby creating all forms of falsehood. One is thus unable to realise tranquillity (sant). By tranquillity is meant oneness of objects, and oneness of objects is the highest Samādhi. from which grows an inner perception by supreme wisdom. The Tathāgata-garbha is its objective."

¹ P 109 The lines are repeated in the "Sagāthakam", gg 127 and 128

s Sa samyak-pasyati, p 20

As we see here, any thought that permits of opposition or antithesis such as sat and asat, dharma and adharma, is considered to be the outcome of discrimination (vikalpa), and as long as this is cherished, one can never realise the standpoint of pure idealism (cittamātra) and the yathābhūtam understanding of absolute oneness will never take place

"If this world is an error as is taught by thee, is it to be regarded as existent or as non-existent?" Mahāmati 1s made to ask the Buddha in the Lankavatara? The natural conclusion as we ordinarily see it will be. "This erroneous world does not exist " But the Buddha says. "It exists as māyā, and no aspects of it are worth while clinging to there are any aspects of it worth chinging to, there can be no rejecting the notion of substance (svabhāva), and the theory of causation (pratity as a mutpada) will be upheld as is done by the philosophers who assume the existence of a final cause." If this erroneous world is like māyā, does this not lead to the creation of another error? "No, it does not, because maya is not the cause of the error, because it does not produce faults and fallacies. Māyā, indeed, does not produce faults and fallacies O Mahāmati, māyā is not the product of discrimination, but evolves from the magic formulas pronounced by another person; it owes not its existence to the power of self-discrimination and fallacious habit-energy; it does not produce faults Whatever faults there are in connection with this erroneous world come from the clinging of the ignorant to that which is nothing but the delusion of their own minds The wise, however, are free from all this "

The concluding passage of the first chapter, the Lakkavatara, after the T'ang version.
 Pp 108-109.

What is Meant by Being Unborn?

When maya is understood in the sense as elucidated above, we shall find light shed over the statement that all things are uncreated, or, literally, unborn (anutpannah This is one of the phrases quite frequently sarvabhāvah) met with in all Mahayana literature, and those who are not familiar with it will certainly find the phrase devoid of sense. as they may regard it as having no connection with selfrealisation. But this again is a part of viewing things wathabhutam For if existence is not to be annotated by any one of the four propositions (catushkotika) and is above the alternation of sat and asat, and not controlled by the law of causation (hetupratyaya), it cannot be described in any other way than by calling it unborn (anuipanna).—unborn not in the sense of eternity, nor in that of uncreatedness Things are unborn simply because no categories admitting contradiction or alternation or antithesis are applicable here Eternity contrasts with non-eternity or impermanence, uncreatedness if it has any relative meaning stands in opposition to creation, and if being unborn is taken in a similar way it limits itself and our perception of things will be no more yathabhutam but affected by Pankalpa For this reason, the Buddha in the Lankavatara repeatedly warns us not to get confused here, but to understand anutpadam sarvadharmānām in its absolute, unconditioned sense

"Why is existence regarded as unborn or unoriginated? Because there is neither creating nor created, and, therefore, there is no causer [i.e., creator] "Again, things are unborn because they are to be regarded as māyā, and because the Buddha desires that the philosophers should look beyond logic and its necessary limitations. As long as the anti-thesis of sat and asat is considered objectively real, as held by some philosophers, there will be the real coming into existence and the real passing away from it. Those who are taken to the passing-away aspect of existence are nihilists, while those who look for the eternal aspect are eternalists; and neither of them has the right view of it. They are attached to one thing or another, they are far from attaining the point where all things are perceived in their true bearings, that is, as manifestations of Mind itself (cittamātradriśya). The Lankāvatāra calls this viewpoint "seeing into the abode where things are in their suchness" (yathābhūtāvasthāna-daršana. in 哲議員)." The gāthā reads:

"Because there is no causing, there is no birth;

Where existence is admitted, there is the holding of birth and death.

When it is seen as being like māyā, etc.,

No discrimination takes place as regards appearances "2". This Buddhist idea of being unborn is hable to be confused with eternalism as is suggested by Mahāmati 3. But when we know that Anutpāda, "to be unborn" is not an idea contrasted to Utpāda, "to be born," or an idea subject to the principle of causation, but an idea absolutely going

- 1 Pp 112, 184, and 200 (line 6): yathābhātārthasthāna-daršana, seeing into the abode of reality in its truthful signification Again p 124, line 1, yathābhūta-svalakshaņāvasthānāvasthītam (住地實施, or 如實自相應). It is the point where things are perceived in their proper bearing
 - P. 112.
- Pn. 111, 116, etc. Eternalism may not be an appropriate term for that school of philosophy which holds that all things have been what they are and remain for ever as such. This is the Sasvata (eternal or persistent) view of existence and stands opposed to the other view known as the Uccheda (destruction or extirpation). According to the latter, there is nothing in the world that is real, eternally abiding, and that will retain its identity for ever. The doctrine of Sunyata is sometimes taken for this. Buddhism goes the middle way between the two extremes; for, according to it, existence is neither temporal and forever vanishing, nor eternal and forever abiding Objectively stated, it is in a state of constant becoming, which in terms of Mahayana philosophy is called like māyā, or it is sānya (empty, another difficult word to translate properly), it is unborn, it is not dualistic, it has no self-substance. This is the Buddhist teaching known as Sanyatā, anutpāda, advaya, nūrsvabhāva-lakshaņam sarvadharmānăm 11 P. 78.

beyond opposites, we come nearer to the truth. We need an inner perception to see into the true nature of existence; otherwise, like the ignorant and confused, we see things where there is really nothing, and imagine them to be actualities though they are like the hare's horns' or the tortoise's hair. Vikalpa takes place here, and all looks distorted. So we read in the sutra

"According to my doctrine, there is neither being nor non-being, for existence (sarvabhāva) is not to be characterised as being born, nor as disappearing. Why is there no non-herne? For it is like seeing various objects created by the magician or in a dream [As long as there are things actually seen, they cannot be said to be non-existent ! Why is there no being? For the self-nature of all things that appear to be here, is really non-existent, they are seen and yet not seen, they are taken hold of and vet not taken hold Therefore, I say that things are neither existent nor non-existent If a man, realising that there is nothing but what is seen of mind, abides in the suchness of things where no individuation (or discrimination. vikalpa) takes place, he will see that all doings in the world cease criminate is the business of the ignorant and not of the wise O Mahamati, it is due to the mind that discriminates that there appears a world destitute of reality, such as the palace of the Gandharvas or the phantom creations of the magician To distinguish between the born and the not-born, between the created and the un-created, is like talking about the works of the magician, that have never been in existence and therefore that will never disappear The ignorant fail to see the self-nature of existence (bhāvasvabhāva) because their views are perverted When they are thus perverted, they are unable to realise a state of alcofness, and as they are unable to do so, they cannot disengage themselves from false discrimination As long as one sees things partienlarised in forms, there is a perception of the born and the somewhat puzzling What has patience to do with this existence that is to be designated as unborn? Kshānts, of course, means "patience" here as when it is one of the six Pāramitās, or resignation, or acquiescence, but not in its ordinary sense For kshānts here does not mean "to endure," or "to suffer patiently", endurance or suffering implies unwillingness and resistance to a certain extent The sense of Buddhist kshants, however, is a willing compliance or acceptance When the anutpanna view of existence is truthfully recognised and accepted, it becomes the principle of one's conduct, determining the whole attitude of The Chinese scholars generally take 22. (patience) for 18 (recognition) as they are both pronounced jên, but, strictly speaking, the term is not an intellectual one, it belongs to the will, it is a whole-hearted acceptance of the ultimate fact (tativam) as perceived by a mind free from errors or wrong judgments (vikalpa)

In the Avatamsaka-sūtra, a chapter is devoted to an explanation of ten kinds of Kshānti 2 (1) Kshānti in sounds means to listen to the oral teaching of the Buddha, to accept it without fear or hesitation and to abide in it whole-heartedly (2) Kshānti of obedience is to reflect upon the nature of things, and, truthfully penetrating into it, to keep the mind pure and serene (3) Kshānti in the unborn of Sulhavativysha, SBE XLIX, p 51 § 32, where three kinds of Kehānti are mentioned (1) Ghoshānugā-kehānti, (2) anulomki-kehānti, (3) Anutpattika dharma-kehānti. They evidently correspond to the first three of the ten Kehāntis here explained from the Avatam-sala-sitra In a Śāstra called On the Avakening of Bodhicita (设置运动路, 需耐大衰程, 来一), sseribed to Vasubandhu, there is a chapter devoted to the explanation of "Śānyatā (empiness) as heving no distinguishing marks," in which the author also gives three kinds of Kahānti (1) Kehānti of faith, (2) Kehānti of obedience and (3) Dharma-kehānti The first is to believe (信, ksn.) in the various teachings of the Buddha, such as the Fourfold Noble Truth, the Twelvefold Chain of Origination, the Four Virtues of Infinite Greatness, (goodwill, compassion, joy, and equanimity), and the Six Virtues of Perfection which lead one finally to liberation in one form nature of existence has already been explained. The rest of the ten are realised when one attains to the knowledge of things as like māyā (4), mirage (5), dream (6), echo (7), shadow (8). phenomenal (9). and empty (10)). That this way of looking at existence is generally Mahayanistic and that it is not the same as regarding existence as altogether unsubstantial from the relative point of view, has been already made clear, as I hope in the preceding section.¹

¹ Sıkshünanda, Chapter XXIX "On Kshüntı"

How is Nirvana Explained?

Nirvana has been the central object of the Buddhist life ever since the Buddha's own time, though in the Mahayana we do not come across the term so much as in the Hinayana. The idea has been replaced to a certain extent by such conceptions as Prajūā, Sambodhi, Dharmakāya, Tathatā. Pratyētmajūāna. etc., as Buddhist thought drifted towards intellectual intuitionalism. The Lankavatara, however, has not forgotten to make reference to Nirvana and to interpret it in its own characteristic manner. According to its author, whoever he may be, Nirvana is realised when one can see into the abode of suchness (yathābhūtārthasthānadersanam).2 Here is the point the intellect as such (vikalpa) cannot enter; for it dissects and establishes somewhat to take hold of (grahana), and it will then see that something coming into existence (utpāda) and disappearing (nirodha or apracritti). But Nirvana has no tangible form (nimitta) or another. The (2) Kshlati of obedience (M, shun), is to see into the truth that there is no self-substance in any individualised object, animate or otherwise, and, therefore, that there is neither actor nor sufferer, and things are eternally such as they are. When a man comes to accept this truth though he may not yet have fully realised its meaning, he has the obedience. (3) The Dharmakshlati (HZ, fc-fin) which is apparently an abbreviation for Anutpattikadharmakshlati is attained when he fully realises the truth and knows that all is empty including emptiness itself.

² Pc: further definition of "Anutyattikadharmakshānti" see below, pp. 226-227.

P. 200; see also supra.

and it neither comes into existence nor ceases from working To attain Nirvana, therefore, is to see into the truth of things yathābhūtam, that is, as unborn, as not affected by categories of intellectual construction

To attain Nirvana which is a state of emptiness (sūnyata) inherent in the nature of things and which again is a state of self-realisation obtained by means of supreme wisdom (āryajñāna), there must be a revulsion (parāvritti) at the deepest seat of consciousness known as the The latter is a kind of mental receptacle Ālavavījāna ¹ where all the memory of one's past deeds and psychic activities is deposited and preserved in a form of energy called Vāsanā (智术hsi-chi, in Chinese, habit-energy) But as this energy is so contaminated with ignorance and wrong judgments and all sorts of attachment (abhinivesa), it reacts upon an external world in a way detrimental to the realisation of Nirvana, and, therefore, to the perception of the truth The old conditions must now be overhauled uathābhūtam m order to create a new situation in our consciousness do this, we must free ourselves from views nihilistic (uccheda) and eternalistic (śāśvata) and also from the notions of being (bhava) and non-being (abhava)

When this revulsion is effected, Nirvana is found to be devoid of all predicates. In it nothing is gained, nothing is cast aside, no extermination, no eternity, no unity, no diversity, one finds here. Nirvana is the mind of all holy ones and the goal of Buddhist discipline?

The Hinayanists do not know this, when they realise that Nirvana is something above particular conditions and tranquil in nature, they feel that they have it in its completeness in their Nirvana, so called But in fact they distinguish it from birth-and-death (samsāra), and seek it for fear of being caught up in the net of transmigration. They cherish dualism, and so long as they do so, there is no true

¹ Pp 62, 98, etc

P 99

Nirvana for them. Nirvana, according to the Lankävatāra, is not to be found in contradistinction to birth-and-death or Samsāra; for thus to distinguish one from the other is the result of a wrong judgment (vikalpa), which imagines a future when the world of the senses is altogether annihilated, which is their Nirvana. The Mahayanistic Nirvana goes, however, beyond the dualism of Nirvana and Samsāra. It is to be found where there is the identity of Nirvana and Samsāra

So long as dualism is adhered to, there is no Nirvana, no self-realisation Light and shadow, long and short, black and white—they are mutually related; when they stand alone each by itself, they have no meaning. So with Nirvana. When it is sought after in relation to Samsāra, we have a sort of Nirvana But this kind vanishes when separated from the condition of mutuality in which it exists. True Nirvana is that which is realised in the oneness of Nirvana and Samsāra, absolute or śūnya in its nature, and above the relativity of eternalism and nihilism Mahayana followers strive to realise this kind of Nirvana 1

The following passages² from the Lankāvatāra will give us some ideas of Nirvana prevalent at the time when this sutra was compiled

"The Buddha said, O Mahāmati, what is regarded as Nirvana by the philosophers is not in accordance with the true features of Nirvana. Lasten, O Mahāmati, I will tell you what it is

"Some philosophers, seeing how impermanent things are, do not cling to the individual conditions; to them no external world exists, nor does the subjective mind exist; they do not think of the past, present, and future. Like the light that shines no more, like the seed that has no life, like the fire that no more burns, all attachments are gone with them, no individualising reflections take place, and this they

¹ Pp 76, 126

Pp 182 ff The translator has here mainly followed T'ang consider to be Nirvana But masmuch as they see something destroyed, their Nirvana is not a true one, O Mahāmati

"Again, there are some who think that departing to another realm is Nirvana, there is no external world of particulars for them; it is like wind ceasing to blow 1

"Again, some think that not to see the distinction between the knowing subject and the known object is Nirvana

"Again there are some who, holding to the view that all individual appearances are real, cherish the feeling of pain; for they are ignorant of the truth that all is the manifestation of mind-only. And just because of this ignorance they are frightened with appearances and seek for a state where there are no-appearances. An intense longing for this is regarded by them to be Nirvana.

"Again, there are some who, reviewing things inner as well as external in their individual and universal aspects and as existing in time, think that here is self-substance, not subject to destruction, and in this they find Nirvana

"Again, there are some who believe in the indestructibility of all things such as ego, being, life, growth, and personality, and think this to be Nirvana

"Again, some philosophers, not being intelligent enough, imagine the reality of Prakriti and Purusha and think that the Gunas in various transformations constitute all objects, and in this they see Nirvana

"Again, some philosophers see Nirvana in the extinction of both merit and demerit, others in the extinction of evil passions by means of knowledge, and still others hold that Iśvara is in truth the creator.

"Again, there are some who think beings come into existence mutually conditioning and not through any other cause. As they are without wisdom, they are unable to understand rightly, and because of their not understanding rightly, they imagine Nirvana in their own way.

² This last sentence does not properly belong here. There must have been some transposition in the text.

- "Again, there are some who, wrongly imagining what they have seen to be the true path, find Nirvana here.
- "Again, some philosophers, holding to the view that quality and substance are one and yet two, and mutually related and yet not-related, think Nirvana to be in this relationship.
- "Again, there are some naturalists who believe in spontaneous creation, saying of the peacock's variegated beauty, the thorn's pointedness, and the production of the various kinds of precious stones from the mine,—who is the maker of all these things? Nobody but Nature And this is their Nirvana.
- "Again, some find Nirvana in the understanding of the twenty-five principles (tattva).
- "Again, some cherish the opinion that the looking after the welfare of the subjects by the observance of the six virtues (guna) is Nirvana.
- "Agam, some think time is Nirvana, from which issues the world.
- "Again, there are some who see Nirvana in that the world (bhava) exists, or that the world (bhava) exists not, or that the world exists and exists not, or that the world and Nirvana are not two different things.
- "Agam, there are some who, differing from all these philosophers, and in possession of all-knowledge (sarvajāā), proclaim like a roaring lion that to understand thoroughly what is meant by the manifestation of Mind itself (citta-
- This is evidently the Mahayanist view of Nirvana, though it is treated as if it were one held by the philosophers also not belonging to Buddhism. In fact, the Sung version has this entire paragraph moved towards the end of the whole section on Nirvana, and begins with, "According to my view, Nirvana is .," showing that this is the Buddhist conception of Nirvana. The conclusion of the paragraph is: "O Mahamati, you and other Bodhisattva-Mahasattvas should discipline themselves in this so that they could quickly get away from all these other views if Nirvana as upheld by the philosophera." This transposition clears off the difficulty at once The Wei version is like the Tang and the Sanskrit.

mātra), not to get attached to the external world (hāhvabhāva), to be disengaged from the four propositions, to abide in the yathabhūtam view of things,1 not to fall into the errors of dualism, to be free from the ideas of subject and object, to stand above all forms of knowledge, not to get attached to any one form of truth, to abide in the realisation of the truth revealed to one's immost consciousness (svapratyātmāryadharmādhagama), to perceive the twofold truth of egolessness, to be devoid of the two kinds of evil passions (kleśadvaya), to be cleansed of the two kinds of hindrance (avaranadvava), to discipline oneself in all the stages [of Bodhisattvahood] one after another, whereby, entering upon the state of Buddhahood, to realise all the great Samādhis such as Māyā, and forever to go beyond the Citta, Manas, and Manovijnana —this is indeed to attain Nirvana

"O Mahāmati, all these philosophers' views [except the last mentioned] are based on the imagination (tarka) and are not in accordance with the truth (yukti), they are forsaken by the wise, for they are dualistic and Nirvana is imagined where it is not. There is really no Nirvana where one may enter or come out. The philosophers each adhering to his own thesis, fall into erroneous views contrary to reason, thereby achieving nothing but the wanderings and tribulations of the mind and will. O Mahāmati, therefore, you and other Bodhisattvas should avoid them."

To quote the gāthās attached here.

"Nirvana is variously viewed and discriminated by the philosophers, but they are no more than imaginations, there is no way in them that leads up to emancipation (moksha) (69)

"The philosophers who are not released from [the dualism of] fettered and fettering and who are far spart from the right way of thinking (upāya), imagine emancipation where there is no [real] emancipation (70)

² See also above, p 123

"All sorts of doctrines are maintained by various philosophers, but as they issue from the wrong discriminations of confused minds their emancipation is not a true one (71).

"As all the philosophers are fascinated with the ideas of something done and something doing, they are upholders of doctrines of being and non-being, and their emancipation is no true one (72).

"Those ignorant ones who delight in debating and idle talk cannot have a wider view of truth; mere talking is the source of sorrow in the triple world. It is the truth only that destroys sorrow (73).

"It is like an image reflected in a mirror, it is seen there but it is not real; the one Mind is seen as a duality by the ignorant when it is reflected in the mirror constructed by their habit-energy (vāsanā) (74).

"From not knowing that all that is seen is of mind-only, there takes place discrimination and hence duality; but when it is known that it is nothing but Mind, no discrimination evolves (75).

"It is true that mind reveals itself as multitudinousness, but in itself it is devoid of predicates (lakshyalakshana); appearances are there but not to be seen in the way discriminated by the ignorant (76)

"The triple world is no more than [the product of] discrimination, there is no external world of objects; it is owing to discrimination that the multidinousness of things appears, which, however, is not understood by the ignorant (77).

"In various sutras discrimination is the subject of discourse, it is on account of ideas and names, for apart from naming (abhidhāna) no meaning (abhidheya) is attainable (78)".

The Essence of Buddhahood

The self-realisation that is to be attained by the Bodhisattva is none other than the Buddha's own inner consciousness, self-illuminating as well as world-illuminating. Therefore, when we know what is the nature of this enlightenment attained by the Buddha (svabuddhabuddhatā). we shall also have some glimpse of the content of the Pratyūtmūryajūānagocara, the subject-matter of the Lankava-According to the sutra,1 what constitutes the essence of the Buddhahood (buddhatā) is neither a thing made nor a thing not-made, it is neither cause nor effect, it is neither predicable nor unpredicable, it is neither describable nor indescribable, neither subject to perception nor beyond per-Why? Because by applying any one of these ception terminological explanations (nsrukts) to this case, we commit a logical offence If Buddhata, the essence of Tathagatahood, is something made, it is impermanent, and if it is impermanent, all things made will be Tathagatas-which is impossible. If, on the other hand, it is a thing not made, it will be without a substance (ātmakatva), and all efforts to realise it will be to no purpose, as it is like the hare's horns or a barren woman's child For are they not all notmade, unreal, merely imagined ?

³ Pp 185–187.

"Again, if the essence of Tathagatahood is neither cause nor effect, it is then neither being (sat) nor not-being (asat) And this being the case it lies outside the four propositions (catushkotika) The latter belong to the worldly way of talk and what lies outside them is no more than talk, it is like speaking of a barren woman's child This exists only in talk and does not come under the four propositions. As it does not come under them, the wise know it is beyond their logical survey (pramāņa) The meaning of all the Tathagatas' words is to be thus understood by the wise."

This passage is taken from the Sanskrit text, which coincides with one of the Chinese versions, the T'ang, but when we weigh the meaning of the passage, we grow somewhat confused about it because it is apparent contradiction to the general drift of thought that has been explained above as characteristic of the Lankavatara teaching. For if the essence of Buddhahood is something like the barren woman's child existing only in name and placed beyond the survey of the wise in the sense that it has no truth in it, the object of all Buddhist discipline will be set at naught. If, however, it could be understood in the sense that the truth is beyond the logical survey of even the wise, and, therefore, it is an object of direct intuition, altogether beyond the reach of popular parlance which is made up of the four propositions. the quoted passage would be consistent with the rest of the The sentence referring to the barren woman's child as mere talk and beyond the four propositions will have to In fact, the Wei translation reads quite differbe altered "The four propositions belong to the worldly way ently O Mahāmatı, if the truth does not go beyond the four propositions, it is no more than a word like when speaking of a barren woman's child. O Mahāmati, this belongs to mere speech, coming under the four propositions. and if the truth should come under them, the wise would not take it up." Evidently there is some discrepancy in the The earliest Chinese version in fact, that is, the Sung reads simply and is quite intelligible, showing perhaps that this is a more original text, not mixed with gloss and other "O Mahamati, if it is neither an object (vastu?) nor a cause, then it is neither being nor non-being, it lies outside the four propositions The latter belong to worldly When it [or the essence of Buddhahood] hes outside the four propositions it is beyond them, and being beyond them as such the wise accept it The meaning of all the Tathagata's propositions is to be understood by the wise thus [that is, as beyond the four propositions] "

² Pp. 187 ff

² P 188

When Buddhism speaks of the egolessness (nirātmana) of all things (sarvadharma), this must be understood in the way suggested above, that is, in the sense that while all things have their characteristic marks (svalakshana), they are without self-substance (atman). Inasmuch as the cow is not the horse and the horse is not a cow, they are quite distinct one from the other. Their individuality is to be reckoned with, but as to each possessing any substance in itself or anything that remains eternally so except its appearance (lakshama), that cannot be Therefore, things in one sense are as they are, but in another sense they are This is what is meant by Buddhist phenomenalism. but we are not to be carried away by its doctrine of emptiness as was explained before, as Buddhism has after all something to affirm. Its superficially paradoxical way of presenting the truth is often baffling to logicians The Lankavatara proceeds to say that the ignorant and confused use their own way of discrimination (vikalpa) to grasp the theory of nonego, but as existence is really beyond any system of categories, the Tathagata's wisdom alone is capable of penetrating into reality. It is, therefore, declared by him that he 18 not distinct from the Skandhas, nor 18 he identical with them 1

The two horns of a cow are distinguished one from the other, for the one is longer or shorter than the other, and m colour they may differ, but they are of one nature as they are both horns In a similar way, the Tathagata is different from what constitutes matter, and yet he is not different. Again, he is designated as one who is emancipated (moksha), but he is not one with emancipation, nor is he different from it Therefore, the essence of Buddhahood is neither eternal nor transient, neither made nor not-made, neither composite nor un-composite. neither knowledge nor the known, neither predicable nor unpredicable, neither of the Skandhas nor not of them. neither describable nor in-It is beyond all measurement, it is not to be brought under any forms of category. We may talk of it as talk we must, but we can never reach it through words For it is unborn, and consequently not subject to destruction. It is like unto the sky beyond logical construction, and no amount of intellectual tricks (prapañca) will bring it within one's grasp. The essence (buddhatā) transcends measurement (pramāṇā) and the senses (indriya).

¹ P. 188

"[The nature of enlightenment] is not limited by measurement and senses, it is neither an effect nor a cause, it is neither enlightening nor enlightened. It is neither predicated nor predicating (79).

"The Skandhas, causation, enlightenment are not visible anywhere to anybody; how can any statement be made concerning that which is not visible anywhere to anybody (80)!

"It is neither something made nor something not made, neither an effect nor a cause, neither Skandhas nor no-Skandhas, nor indeed is it of any other composition (81).

"It is not something that is subject to discrimination and hence perceptible, nor is it for that reason to be understood as non-existent; it is the very nature of things as they are (82).

"Non-being goes along with being, and being goes along with non-being; when non-being is not knowable, being too is not to be discriminated (83).

"Those who cling to words only, not comprehending the egolessness of an ego [so called], are drowned in dualism; they destroy themselves, they destroy the ignorant (84).

"When they see any teaching shorn of all faults, they then see things rightly; they do not vilify the leaders (85)."

The Lankāvatāra is quite anxious to have us realise that the theory of non-ego does not conflict with that of the Tathagata's Womb (tathāgata-garbha), of which mention is made in various connections. When the Tathāgata-garbha is spoken of as a kind of storage where all the seeds (bīja) of the past deeds and psychical activities are preserved, philosophers are apt to take it for an ego-soul. But, says the Lahkāvatāra, the Tathāgata-garbha is empty in its nature yet real, it is Nirvana itself, unborn, without predicates, without affections (apraņihita), and, further, it is attained where no false discrimination (nirvikalpa) takes place, where no shadow (nirābhāsa) of particularisation falls. There is nothing here for the Buddhas or Bodhisattvas to take hold of as an ego-soul. They have gone beyond the sphere of discriminations and judgments, and it is due to their wisdom and skilful device (upāda) that they set up all kinds of names and phrases in order to save their followers from mistaken views of reality. Hence the following.

³ P. 189 ff.

² Here Sung and T'ang have: The Skandhas and causation in their relation to enlightenment—whether they are one or different, nobody can see. Wei: The causal relations and the five Skandhas, the Buddha sees nothing [here].

See pp. 105-106, 177, etc., and also under "Alayavijfians."

"O Mahāmati, it is like the potter who, out of a mass of atoms of clay of one kind, produces various kinds of vessels by applying on it his artistic skill and manual labour, knowing how to make use of the stick, water, and string, just so, O Mahamati, is the Tathagata who points out the egolessness of things (dharmanasralmua)-the truth transcending everything characteristic of discrimination-by a variety of skilful means, which is joined with Prajna, that is, sometimes by the doctrine of Tathagata-garbha, and sometimes by the doctrine of non-ego, or sometimes like the potter by the aid of words, suggestions, and synonyms For this reason, 0 Mahāmatı, the doctrine of Tathagata-garbha is not the same as the doctrine of ego as advocated by the philosophers Thus indeed the doctrine of Tathagata-garbha is taught by the Tathagatas in order to induce the philosophers advocating the ego-theory [which latter in a superficial way may be regarded as resembling the Buddhist conception of Tathagata-garbhal and further indeed in order that those who have fallen into the view of discriminating an unreal ego [as real] may become possessed of the realm of the triple emancipation and speedily realise the highest supreme enlightenment. For this reason the Tathagatas who are Arhats and Fully-enlightened Ones talk of the doctrine of Tathagata-garbha which is thus to be differentiated from the egotheory of the philosophers. Therefore, O Mahāmati, in order to keep thyself away from the ego-theory of the philosophers thou shouldst seek the doctrine of the Tathāgata-garbha that is based on non-ego.

¹ Pp 18, 79.

"Pudgala (soul, 人 or 土夫), Santati (continuity, 相 癥), Skandha (aggregate 陰 or 蘊), Pratyaya (causation, 緣), Anu (atom, 微塵), Pradhāna (supreme soul, 陽), Iśvara (god, 自主), Kartri (creator, 作者):—some such ideas are entertained by the philosophers, but they are mere constructions of mind."

The World-Transcending Knowledge

The inner consciousness of the Buddha, which constitutes the essence of Buddhahood (svabuddhabuddhatā), is the highest form of knowledge (jñāna) Of knowledge the Lankāvatāra distinguishes three forms (1) worldly knowledge (jñānam laukikam), (2) supra-worldly knowledge (lokottaram), and (3) supreme supra-worldly knowledge (lokottaratamam). The first is relative as cherished by ordinary minds whose thinking is determined by ideas of being and non-being: the second is one possessed by Hinayanists who cannot go beyond the categories of particularity (svalakshana) and generality (samanyalakshana); while the the third and highest is the knowledge attained by the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas who view the world from an absolute standpoint, for they know that the world is beyond all characteristics, that is, has never been brought into existence and will never be annihilated, that it is designable neither as being nor as non-being. It is by means of this highest knowledge that the Bodhisattva finally comes to the realisation of the egolessness (nairāimya) of all things, thus entering upon the path of Tathagatahood.2 This supreme supra-worldly knowledge is none other than the supreme wisdom (ā yajāāna) of the Bodhidsattva, which enables him to enter into the inmost nature (svapratuāima) of all the Buddhas, and which constitutes the central theme of the Lankavatara-sūira Its three aspects are now distinguished 1 The first is its not being mere appearance (nirābhāsa), that it is reality, as distinguished from the way it is regarded generally by the Hinayanists and philos-The second is that it is awakened by the will (pranidhāna) and power (adhishthāna) of all the Buddhas That is to say, supreme wisdom is aroused in the mind of the Bodhisattva by virtue of the Buddhas' earnest desire for universal enlightenment and salvation, their earnest desire or will sends out strong waves of vibration throughout the universe, and all sentient beings there feel its effect according to their capacities Thirdly, sustained by this and going beyond the relative knowledge of the Hinayanists, the Bodhisattva's mind is freed from all predicable forms and is ready for realising in himself a psychic state termed Māyopamasamādhikāya (如幻三昧身). This means the body attained by a Bodhisattva when he enters ınto the Samādhı known as Māyā-lıke, that 18, the Samādhı that enables one to look intuitively into the nature of existence and realise that it has no self-substance and is like The following passage2 will shed light on the Māyā-"The Tathagata, for the sake of the Bodhlıke Samādhi sattvas whose minds are still distracted by individuality and generality, preaches the path of particularisation based on their relative knowledge of existence When the nature of relative knowledge and particularisation is fully comprehended, they are able to realise the egolessness of an individual person and an external object, and gain an insight into the stages of Bodhisattvahood, they will pass beyond the Dhyānas, Samādhıs, and Samāpattıs belonging to the Śrāvaka, Pratyekabuddha, and philosopher, and walk on the path and enter into the realm of Tathagatahood, which is outside the ken of the ordinary understanding; they will abandon the path belonging to the five Dharmas (五法) and embellish themselves with the highest wisdom (pranā) which comes from the Dharmakāya of all the Tathagatas, and entering into the realm of māyā will visit all the Buddha-lands, abide in the palace of Tushita and reach the highest place where they will obtain the Tathagata-body." Māyā, Śūnyatā. Anutpatti, Apranihita, Nirābhāsa,— they are all synonymously used in the Lankāvatāra The Bodhisattva is now fairly on the way to the final stage of Buddhist discipline

² Pp 78, 79. ² P. 156 ff.

¹ P 49

² Pp 50-51

In Buddhism no distinction is made between knowledge and knower. Supreme wisdom (āryajñāna) is at once the inner perception and the mental power that brings about this perception This is quite in accordance with the general mode of thinking in Buddhism, for if there is something at the back of the knowledge, or if this is the function of a certain higher faculty of the mind, there will be a dualism which is so strongly combatted by the Mahayanists ledge after all must be absolute; so Prajñā, which is the same thing as Arvannana is described as one of the six Pāramitās (virtues of perfection) in the following manner.1 As the Hinayanists cling to the idea of Nirvana for their own spiritual enjoyment (ātmasukha), they are unable to think of the welfare of their fellow-beings With the Mahayanists it is different, they are ever bent on practising the sıx Pāramitās ın their highest possible form, and, therefore, in Prajfiā their minds are free from false discrimination (vikalpa), because they are awake to the suchness of reality they do not fall into any of the opposing predicates, they are thus able to cause a revulsion (parāuratti) in the whole field of their consciousness, though this does not mean that they destroy the work of their own past karma

¹ P. 288.

thus leads them finally to the realisation of the mmost truth deeply concealed under the wrappings of attachment and mtellectualism

Doctrine of the Triple Body1

When the Lankavatara was compiled, the doctrine of the Triple Body (trikāya) was apparently not yet formulated in the shape we have it today. We thus have terms corresponding to the three Bodies and the indications of the underlying idea, but no specified relationship is established between them Only the absolute state of self-realisation is considered as belonging to the Dharmata-Buddha, who is evidently the Dharmakava of the later periods

There are other forms of Buddhahood known as Nishyanda-Buddha and Nirmana-Buddha Nishvanda literally means "flowing down" or "flowing into," and the Nishyanda-Buddha is a Buddha into whom Dharmata flows and who shines in splendour The two later Chinese translators have rendered it as 報佛, pao-fo, 報 meaning "to requite," "to compensate", while the Sung by Gunabhadra has 依佛 1-fo, 徒 meaning "to depend," "to rely upon " The latter is nearer to the sense of the Sanskrit nishuanda, and it is hard to know how the later translators came to have 報 pao for it instead of 楼: Did they try to read their own thought into it? For they were doubtless acquainted in their own day with the doctrine of Trikaya, one of which, generally known as Sambhogakāya, corresponds to Vipākaja (報生),2 or Vipākasthā (報件?)3 m the Lankāvatāra

The other form of the Buddhahood mentioned in the Lankāvatāra is Nirmānika, or Nairmānika, or Nirmāna This is generally done into Chinese by 化佛 or 變化佛, ie, Transformation-Buddha, corresponding to the Nirmanakaya

¹ This subject is more fully treated in Section III under the same heading; see p 308 et seq

P. 28
P. 84

¹ Pp 28, 34, 56, 93, etc

of the Triple Body. As to what this Transformation-Buddha is, the sutra does not offer any explanation. But when the distinction is made between the Nirmana-Buddha and the Dharmata-Buddha as to their method and material of preaching, we can have a glimpse into the specific foatures of the Nirmana-Buddha. The Lankavatara1 makes the latter the teacher of the ordinary people known as "būla ture, while the Dharmata-Buddha discusses an inner perception penetrating into the suchness of truth, or the selfabsorbing contemplation by supreme wisdom (aryajñana) of the ultimate condition of things which cannot be reached by logical categories. The class of beings designated as "Bāla and Prithagjana," which includes almost all of us who drift over the ocean of contrary ideas, is not able to see behind the veil of ignorance and wrong judgment (vikalpa), and to lead this unfortunate group of sentient beings to salvation and enlightenment, the Nirmana-Buddha would discuss the aspects of particularity (svalakshana) and generality (sāmānya-lakshana) as objects of the intellect. His preaching is thus concerned with the individualising side of existence (prabhedapracara), which is dealt with in Buddhist philosophy under such entegories as the six Pāramitās, five Skandhas, twelve Ayatamas, eighteen Dhātus, methods of emancipation (vimokshii), inches of consections ness, and other subjects.2 The object of these distuitisted in naturally to go beyond the teachings of the various shilles ophical schools of the day. The Dharmala Bulldia, an the other hand, is meant for the Beathfaultston when will it in

¹ P. 93,

² Bills means "their fully he incorporate had pelllagians ascause "different people or thee," This lists stands apained the enlighted and Pritingians syminat the actor (hepa). In this thirt interaction they represent people where missing he act the term when where missing them in the heart to the limited of the Buddha. I have transacted than in this back as "the typical ant," or the transplacement," of the high had interaction!

^{*} F. M.

come to the highest realisation of truth, which is known as Pratyātmāryajñānagatigocara in the Lankāvatāra

The distinction between the Nirmana-Buddha and the Nishyanda-Buddha is not quite clear as far as the Lankavatāra is concerned. For it describes the latter as performing almost the same function as the Nirmana-Buddha 1 His teaching is said to consist of such topics as particularity, generality, habit-energy (vāsanā) conserved in the deep recesses of consciousness, wrong judgments about it, and their interrelations causing multitudinousness of objects to apppear, and then our mordinate attachment to them, but in reality the non-existence of all these phenomena. Of these topics, the Dharmatanishyanda Buddha will speak thus the conception of an individual ego-substance arises from our wrong judgment concerning the nature of existence and the law of causation, both of which fail to apply beyond the world of relativity which is empty (sūnua). it is like the creation of the magician, he knows how to produce a variety of unrealities depending upon some objects of the senses, such as plants, brick, etc., the spectators are induced to take them for real objects, though in fact there are none such. To the ordinary mind, the law of causation is made to extend beyond the world of relativity, which is also the world of wrong judgments and attachments, whereas the world which supplies a subject-matter for the Dharmata-Buddha is altogether unsupported (nirālamba) and disengaged from dependence (ālambavīgata), that is to say, it is not to be subsumed under such notions as creation, sense-perception, inference, and others, as it is not to be found among the contents of thought cherished by ordinary ego-bound minds, in which the Hinayanists and philosophers are included The Dharmatā-Buddha points directly to the truth of mamediate perception in which the Bodhisattva stands alone detached from the hypothetical creations of the mind

This gives us an insight into what the Dharmata-Buddha

¹ P 56 ff

teaches in contradistinction to the two other Buddhas, the Nirmana and the Nishyanda; but as to the distinguishing marks between the latter two we fail to get any definite and specific ideas When the universe is divided into two aspects, absolute and relative, the absolute belongs to the Dharmata, while the relative one is the common province of the Nirmana and the Nishyanda. One may ask, Why the distinction, then? As far as the Lankavatara goes, this question is not explicitly answered. We can say only this, that the doctrine of Trikaya must have already been in progress at the time of the Lankavatara and the compiler of the sutra took it for granted that his readers were acquainted with the idea. It was evidently some time later that the doctrine came to be dogmatised. The term "Dharmakaya" occurs at several places1 in this sutra but no "Sambhogakāya," (except once in the "Sagathakam," p 314, g 384), nor "Nirmanakaya," perhaps except once on p 241 2 However, that the Buddha is able if he wills to manifest himself as a Nirmanakaya in response to the earnest desire of his followers or in order to execute his own purposes, is foreshadowed in the conception of Manomayakaya, "mind-made-body," or "will-body" This is a kind of Nirmanakaya

² Pp. 51, 70, 192, 212, etc; as Tathāgatakāya, pp. 42, 43, 51
² One difference between the Transformation-Buddha and the Dharmath-Buddha is described to be as follows:

"The Tathagata of Transformation (nirmita-nairmānika) is attended by Vajrapām, but not the original Tathagata (maula-tathāgata) The original Tathagata is beyond all senses and reasonings, cannot be known by the simple-minded, Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers. He abides in a state of bliss which follows from the perception of the truth as he has perfected himself in the doctrine of wisdom and patience. He requires no attendance of Vajrapām. No Buddha of Transformation (nirmita-buddha) are born of karma (na Larma-prabhava), yet they are neither the same nor different with the Tathagata. Like the potter who produces articles by bringing various conditions together, the Transformation-Buddhas preach the Dharma when circumstances are provided for them, but they are inexpable of discoursing on the state of consciousness realised by supreme wisdom which leads to an inner perception of truth " (P 242)

Pp. 81, 186, 192

ì

١

One thing I wish to emphasise in this statement concerning the three forms of Buddhahood is that the story of the immost perception to be gained by the Bodhisattvas, forming the central theme of the Lankāvatāra, is told only by the Mūla-tathāgata, or true Tathagata (其實流狀) as in the T'ang version, because he is above all senses, all logical measurements (sarvapramāna), and cannot be perceived by the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas, nor by the philosophers; because he abides absorbed in the bliss of realisation and in the perfection of the highest knowledge ¹ The doctrine of the Lankāvatāra is thus seen to be the direct revelation of the absolute Buddha as he is

This sketchy and incidental reference to the doctrine of the Triple Body is far from being satisfactory. In a chapter exclusively devoted to the treatment of the subject a fuller exposition is presented

The Highest Knowledge and a First Cause

We know now that supreme wisdom realised in the inmost depths of consciousness (pratyātmāryajñāna) is something absolutely defying all description and altogether unpredicable, and that it is therefore the topic to be properly dealt with by Dharmatā-Buddha himself and not by any beings subject to the principle of relativity. This knowledge is thus eternal, unconditioned, and beyond the reach of all analysis and discursive understanding, as it belongs to the highest principle of cognition from which all relative knowledge is derivable. Now the question is, "In what respect does this differ from the first cause (kārana) considered by the philosophers to be also eternal (nitya) and beyond thought (acentya)?" This is answered by the author of the Lathāvatāra in the following manner 2

What is claimed to be first cause by the philosophers cannot really be so, because a cause always presupposes something beyond and cannot be its own cause. The idea of causation belongs to a world of relativity, and what is relative cannot be eternal and is always within the sphere of thought. If we take a thing belonging to the relative world and therefore to a realm of action, as a first cause from which everything else has its beginning, this will be a wrong form of inference; for we jump from relativity to transcendentality, from impermanence to eternity, from a thing that is to a thing that is on the other side of being and non-being. Therefore, what is regarded by the philosophers as the first cause eternal and beyond thinkability is not to be identified with supreme wisdom attainable by the Buddhas and Bodhisattyss.

² P 242

² Pp 59 ff.

That the supreme wisdom is eternal and cannot be made a subject of thought, comes from its intrinsic nature. For it is a state of mind realised personally by the Buddhas when they deeply delve into the ultimate principle itself which is not conditioned by any category of thought. It is not to be designated as a cause which is bound up with its antecedents and consequents, it stands alone "quietly" as absolute knowledge flashed through one's consciousness, it is a fact of experience which does not allow of any arguments. It is Tathatā (suchness), Tattva (thatness), perceived in the immost consciousness of the Tathagata. As it is not an object external to him, it is a self-sufficient cause not depending on anything. We may say that this is a state of pure perception (pratyātmagati).

And it is for this reason that the Laskāvatāra is ever persistent in making this pure perception not an object of discursive understanding for the ordinary minds, for the philosophers, for the Hinayanists—It is not only too exalted a subject for them to comprehend, but quite beyond logic and hable to be wrongly and disastrously interpreted by them. It is meant for those only who are not at all surprised, or alarmed, or frightened at hearing that there is a thing beyond one's power of thinking, for such belong to the family of Tathagatayana 1 The Mahayanist does not deny the reality of the objective world as regards its relativity, where all conditions obtain, he only refuses to extend these to a realm where they do not apply, and of the existence and reality of such a realm he is firmly convinced because his inner perception testifies to it. What stronger and more intimate and more convincing proof could one ever expect to offer for a truth? Therefore, the Lankavatara boldly declares 2

"Srotāpatti-phala (預流果), Sakrīdāgāmi-phala (一來 果), Anāgāmi-phala (不設果), and Arhattva (羅漢果)3they are all perturbed states of mind Sometimes I speak of the Triple Vehicle, sometimes of the One Vehicle, and sometimes of No-vehicle; all these distinctions are meant for the ignorant, for men of inferior wisdom, or even for the noble-minded As to the entering into the ultimate truth (paramār tha), it goes beyond dualism When one is abiding where there are no images (nirābhāsa), how could the Triple Vehicle be established? All kinds of Dhyana, Apramana, Ārūpya, Samādhi, and the Extinction of Thoughtst-they do not exist where there is Mind-itself (cittamātra) "

The Parable of the Sands of the Gangā

From the absolute point of view, no use is apparently to be found for anything in the world, no talk is needed, no sermoning avails, and therefore, let the world go as it pleases and work out its own salvation if it ever wants, for what are the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas after all? This is then the question awaiting the absolutist's solution The following passages concerning the parable of the sands of the Ganges will be edifying in this respect 3

^{*} P 65

These are the spiritual attainments of the Hinayanists, Arhatship being the highest of the four Summarily stated, these are all different forms of meditation.

⁵ P 229 ff

say that the appearance of the Tathagata is as rare an event as the blooming of udumbara plant is not a statement put forward in accordance with my inner knowledge. When a statement is shown in accordance with my inner knowledge, it goes beyond, it oversteps any comparison that may be made in the world, because of its unbelievableness, and it will not be believed by stupid and vulgar people. No comparisons hold good in the realm of the supreme wisdom which is attained by an inner realisation, because the truth (tattuam) goes beyond those marks visible to the Cittam, Manas, and Manovijāna. The truth is the Tathagata, therefore no comparisons are adequate here

"Nevertheless, O Mahamati, just a little of comparison is given, that is, Tathagatas are said to be equal to the saids of the Ganga, they are equal, they are not different, yet the comparison is not proper, nor erroneous O Mahāmati, for instance, the sands of the river Gangā are violently trampled on by fishes, tortoises, porpoises, crocodiles, buffaloes, lions, elephants, etc. but the sands are not troubled, have no ill feelings, nor are they unconscious of being trampled on, they are without imagination, beautifully clear and devoid of impurities Even so with the Tathagatas, O Mahāmati, their supreme wisdom attained by an inner perception is the great river of Ganga, and their Powers. Psychic Faculties, Self-mastery are the sands: and they are trampled by the philosophers, stupid people, and antagonists, who are the fishes, but they are not troubled. they have no ill feelings The Tathagatas, because of their original vows, fulfilling all the bliss that accrues from perfect mental concordance (samāpatiz) for the sake of all beings, are not troubled, have no ill feelings Therefore, the Tathagatas, like the sands of the river of Ganga, do not particularise, as they are above likes and dislikes

"O Mahamati, the sands of the river of Ganga do not lose their earthly quality even when fire breaks out on earth at the end of the kalpa, because the sands are of the nature of the earth itself. And, O Mahāmati, as the earth is one with fire, it will never consume away though it is imagined by stupid and vulgar people who are fallen into the way of untruthfulness that the earth will burn up because of continuity. But it will never consume away because it is the element on which fire subsists. Even so, O Mahāmati, the Tathagata's Dharma-body. like the sands of the Gangā, is not destructible.

"O Mahamati, as the sands of the river Ganga are immeasurable, even so, O Mahamati, the Tathagata's rays of light are immeasurable, which are shed by the Tathagatas over the assemblies and circles of all the Buddhas in order to effect the ripening and inspiring of all beings.

"O Mahāmati, as the sands of the river Gangā, retaining their quality of being themselves, do not change into anything else, even so, O Mahāmati, the Tathagatas, because of their severance from the cause of conditional existence, have gone beyond the realm of birth-and-death.

"O Mahāmati, as the sands of the river Gangā are unconcerned whether some of them are taken away or whether more are thrown in. even so. O Mahāmati, the Tathagatas' wisdom (jāāna) which is engaged in the ripening of all beings knows neither decrease nor increase, for the Dharma is without corporeality. Beings endowed with the body, O Mahāmati, are destructible, not so with beings without the body; and the Dharma is without the body.

"O Mahāmati, as a man cannot obtain ghee or oil or such things from the sands of the river Gangā, however hard he may squeeze them to get it, even so,² O Mahāmati, the Tathagatas however painfully hard they may be oppressed for the sake of all beings, never neglect the fulfilling

Liferally, "are neither produced nor vanishing in Samsara."

This analogy does not hold good as far as the getting of ghee from the sands is concerned; but we may take the hard squeezing part as compared with the ever-unrequited labour of the Tathagata who works hard for all sentient beings though the latter fail to appreciate the love so ungradgingly bestowed upon them.

of their original vows which they cherish in the depths of their hearts in the Dharmadhätu [1 c., realm of the Dharma], so long as all beings are not led into Nirvana by the Tathagatas, and this is due to the latter's being endowed with great compassion

"O Mahāmati, as the sands of the river Gangā flow along the banks of its water and not where there is no water, even so, O Mahāmati, all the discourses by the Tathagatas on the Buddha-dharma take place in accordance with the stream of Nirvana For this reason the Tathagatas are said to be like sands of the river Gangā O Mahāmati, the sense of transmigration here does not apply to the Tathagatas, O Mahāmati, decay is the sense of transmigration And, O Mahāmati, the ultimate end of birth-and-death is not to be known. Not being known, how am I to disclose the Dharma in the sense of transmigration? Annihilation is the sense of transmigration O Mahāmati, this is not known to stupid and vulgar people

"Mahāmati asked: If, O Blessed One, the ultimate end is not knowable, how is it possible for all sentient beings to obtain deliverance as they are living in the midst of birthand-death?

"Said the Blessed One O Mahāmati, when the cause is removed which is the memory [1 e, habit-energy or vāsanā] or erroneous reasoning and faulty discrimination during beginningless time, and when there takes place a revulsion at the seat of discrimination by realising that external objects are appearances or manifestations of one's own mind, then there is deliverance, which is not annihilation. Therefore, O Mahāmati, there is no occasion for speaking of endlessness. An endless end is a synonym of discrimination, O Mahāmati, and apart from discrimination, there is no being whatever present. When the inner world or the outer one is surveyed with wisdom (buddhi), we find indeed, O Mahāmati, all objects transcending the dualism of knowing and being known. Only because of ignorance of the discriminating mind, discrimination takes place; when this is realised, it disappears.

"On this occasion this was uttered:

"Those who perceive the Buddhas like the sands of Gangā as unrelated to destruction, or to transmigration, they truly see the Tathagatas.

"As the sands of Ganga are free from all defects, always flowing along the current, so is the substance of Buddhahood"

PART II

(A) THE INTELLECTUAL CONTENT OF THE BUDDHIST EXPERIENCE

Having elucidated to a certain extent though not so exhaustively as a thorough survey of the Lankavatara may require, as regards its general contents and especially the nature of the inmost consciousness of the Tathagata known as Pratyātmāryajñāgocara, let us now proceed to see what intellectual equipment is needed for a Bodhisattva before he can attain to this inner realisation so emphatically acclaimed in the sutra This intellectual equipment consisting of two parts, logical and psychological, is in a way the philosophical content of the intuitive experience attained by the Bodhisattva. It may be regarded either as the intellectual attitude to be acquired by him before he enters upon the path of Buddhist discipline, or as the philosophy of what he has realised, which as a rational being he is to elaborate later on. In either case, the Lankavatara offers us a thoroughgoing idealism along with the message of self-realisation, and this has been the point of discussion as referred to before among the Buddhist exegetists who wished to decide which was the more important topic of the sutra. Whatever this may be, we are now prepared to see what is the philosophical background of the Buddhist experience.

ŧ

ţ

1

1

j

Ī

į

f

Ì

Ą

Historically, the Lankavatara has been considered as an exposition of the following subjects, the five Dharmas, three Svabhāvas, eight Vijnānas, and two Nairātmyas Buddhist scholars, Indian, Chinese, and Japanese were always quite inclined to what may be termed a numerical method of analysis The whole text was first analysed into so many parts, and each part again into so many sections, and so on. and the important ideas developed in them were picked up and gathered up numerically in order, one, two, three, and They often thus failed to see one central thought running through the text, like the mountaineer whose attention is constantly arrested by the details in his way and fails to take in the mountain as a whole Now, the Lankavatāra's philosophy is absolute idealism and all these numerical headings are details used to establish the main theme I will here first discuss each subject separately and then arrange it so as to bring out the whole system in a more centralised shape

The Five Dharmas

To begin with. "dharma" is a very troublesome word to handle properly and yet at the same time it is one of the most essential technical terms in Buddhism. As it is used in many different senses, the serious business of a translator or a commentator is to know exactly what the term means in a given context Etymologically, it comes from the root dhr: "to hold," "to bear," "to exist"; there seems always to be something of the idea "to endure" also going The commonest and most important sense along with it given to it in Buddhism is "truth." "law." "religion," as exemplified in saddharma, dharmakāya, dharmacakra, dharmaparyāya, etc Secondly, it is used in the sense of "existence," "being," "object," or "thing," as, for instance, in sarvadharmašūnyatā, dharmanarrātmya, etc Thirdly, it is synonymous with "virtue," "righteousness," "norm," not only in the ethical sense, but in the intellectual one also In the latter case, it is "truth," "standard,"

the latter judge wrongly and become attached to appearances Now Names are not real things, they are merely symbolical (samketa. 四寸, chra-li), they are not worth getting attached to as realities Ignorant minds move along the stream of unreal constructions, thinking all the time that there are really such things as "me" and "mine." They keep tenacious hold of these imaginary objects, over which they learn to cherish greed, anger, and infatuation, altogether veiling the light of wisdom. These passions lead to actions, which, being repeated, go on to weave a cocoon for the agent He is now securely imprisoned in it and is unable to free himself from the encumbering thread of wrong judgments He drifts along on the ocean of transmigration, and, like the derelict, he must follow its currents again compared to the water-drawing wheel (ahatiyantra) He never grows turning around the same axle all the time or develops, he is the same old blindly-groping sin-committing blunderer Owing to this infatuation, he is unable to see that all things are like māyā, mirage, or like a lunar reflection m water, he is unable to free himself from the false idea of self-substance (svabhāva). of "me and mme." of subject and object, of birth, staying and death; he does not realise that all these are creations of mind and wrongly interpreted. For this reason he finally comes to cherish such notions as Iśvara, Time. Atom. and Pradhāna,1 and becomes so mextricably involved in appearances that he can never be freed from the wheel of ignorance

By Appearances (nimita) are meant qualities belonging to sense-objects such as visual, olfactory, etc; and by Discrimination (vikalpa) is meant the naming of all these objects and qualities, distinguishing one from another. The text reads "Then again, O Mahāmati, Discrimination is that by which names are set up Expressions are given to appearances, saying, 'This is such and not otherwise', and

Pradhäns is a kind of the Primary Germ, which, according to the Sāńkhya philosophy, becomes the cause of all material appearances

we have names such as elephant, horse, wheel, footman, woman, or man, wherein Discrimination takes place.'11

Right Knowledge (samyagjääna) consists in rightly comprehending the nature of Names and Appearances as predicating or determining each other. It consists in seeing mind as not agitated by external objects, in not being carried away by dualism such as nihilism and eternalism, and in not falling into the state of Śrāvakahood and Pratyekabuddhahood as well as into the position of the philosopher

When a world of Names and Appearances is surveyed by the eye of Right Knowledge the realisation is achieved that they are to be known as neither non-existent nor existent, that they are in themselves above the dualism of assertion (samāropa) and refutation (apavāda), and that the mind abides in a state of absolute tranquillity undisturbed by Names and Appearances With this is attained with the state of Suchness (tathatā), and because in this condition no images are reflected the Bodhisattya experiences joy.²

The Three Forms of Knowledge

The three forms of knowledge known as Svabhāva-lakshanatraya³ are more or less a recapitulation or reclassification of the five Dharmas Svabhāva, or sva-bhāva, hterally means "self-nature," "self-substance," or "existence as it is in itself," and lakshaṇa is the "characteristic mark" or marks that distinguish one thing from another. The combination thus literally understood looks as if it had nothing to do with knowledge. The meaning however is this, that as existence (bhava) is conceived or cognised by mind, it allows itself to be understood in three different and characteristic ways, and that each of these three ways of understanding or three views of existence is taken as final

P. 226

An English translation of a part of this section is given elsewhere in this book(pp. 25-33), where a comparison is made between the three Chinese versions and one Sanskrit text Pp. 225-220.

¹ Pp 67, 227.

and true to the self-nature of existence by those who may hold that particular view. Thus, the phrase sva-bhāva-lakshaṇa may apply to the nature of knowledge itself and also to its object, that is, to existence in general. The motive underlying the classification is to see what knowledge or view of existence is required for the attainment of the truth that brings release from the pain and bondage of existence, and the three characteristic marks so called will more properly describe the nature of knowledge than that of its object Svabhāva in this case is to be understood as an epistemological term

The first of the three Svabhavas is known as the Parikalpita (pari+kalpita, contrived or imagined), wrong discrimination of judgment, and proceeds from rightly comprehending the nature of objects, internal as well as external. and also the relationship existing between objects as independent individuals or as belonging to a genus second is the Paratantra, literally, "depending on another," is a knowledge based on some fact, which is not, however, in correspondence with the real nature of existence acteristic feature of this knowledge is that it is not altogether a subjective creation produced out of pure nothingness, but it is a construction of some objective reality on which it depends for material Therefore, its definition is "that which arises depending upon a support or basis (āśraya)." And it is due to this knowledge that all kinds of objects, external and internal, are recognised, and in these individuality and generality are distinguished 1 The Paratantra is thus equivalent to what we nowadays call relative knowledge or relativity, while the Parikalpita is the fabrication of one's own magination or mind In the dark a man steps on something, and imagining it to be a snake is frightened This is Parikalpita, a wrong judgment or an imaginative construction, attended with an unwarranted excitement. He now bends down and examines it closely and finds it to be a piece of rope This is Paratantra, relative knowledge. He does not know what the rope really is and thinks it to be a reality, individual and ultimate.

² P. 67.

While it may be difficult to distinguish sharply the Parikalpita from the Paratantra from these brief statements or definitions, the latter seems to have at least a certain degree of truth as regards objects themselves, but the former implies not only an intellectual mistake but some affective functions set in motion along with the wrong judgment. When an object is perceived as an object existing externally or internally and determinable under the categones of particularity and generality, the Paratantra form of cognition takes place Accepting this as real, the mind elaborates on it further both intellectually and affectively. and this is the Parikalpita form of knowledge. It may be after all more confusing to apply our modern ways of thinking to the older ones especially when these were actuated purely by religious requirements and not at all by any disinterested philosophical ones

The third form of knowledge is the Parinishpanna. perfected knowledge, and corresponds to the Right Knowledge (samuaniñana) and Suchness (tathata) of the five Dharmas It is the knowledge that is available when we reach the state of self-realisation by going beyond Names and Appearances and all forms of Discrimination or judgment (vikalpa). It is Suchness itself, it is the Tathagatagarbha-hridaya, it is something indestructible (avināśa).1 The rope is now perceived in its true perspective. It is not an object constructed out of causes and conditions and now lying before us as something external From the absolutist's point of view which is assumed by the Lankavatara, the rope is a reflection of our own mind, it has no objectivity apart from the latter, it is in this respect non-existent. But the mind out of which the whole world evolves is the object of the Parmishpanna, perfectly-attained-knowledge

¹ Pp. 67, 227.

The following gāthās are translated from the Sanskrit text, where the relation of the three Svabhāvas is treated somewhat in detail This is one of the difficult series of the gāthās to be found in the Lankāvatāra, for the meaning is obscure. I have given here my interpretation of it rather than a translation, which latter when reproduced as it stands in the original would be quite unintelligible to the average reader. This series of gāthās is broken up into five sections and is reproduced with more or less variations in the "Sagāhakam" part of the sutra. The gāthās run thus

"When the mind (citta) is bound by an objective world, the intelligence (jääna) is awakened and reasoning takes place; but the highest wisdom (prajää) obtains where there are no images,—a higher level of consciousness (182)

"Owing to the Parikalpita conception of existence it appears real; from the Paratantra point of view there is no such reality, the Parikalpita discrimination holds good as long as there is a state of confusion; in the Paratantra view of existence there is no [subjective] discrimination (183).

"Though a variety of things may be produced by māyā, there is no validity (siddhi) in them; so also in the Parikalpita discrimination which causes the multiplicity of appearances there is no validity (184).

"Appearance is due to the evil way of the past, the effect of a fettered mind, it becomes for the ignorant the object of their Parikalpita conception which is formed on the Paratantra [relative] nature of things (185)

"Existence of which the Parikalpita conception is formed [by the ignorant] has the nature of relativity, and it is as regards this relative nature of existence that the discrimination creates multitudinous appearances (186).

"There is worldly [knowledge, samurits], and ultimate truth (paramārtha), and a third is the doctrine of causelessness (nāstihetukam), the Parikalpita belongs to worldly knowledge, when it is cut asunder, there is revealed the realm of the wise (187)

² Pp 180-133

"As in the case of the magician who reveals multiplicity out of oneness, though there is really no multiplicity, so is the nature of the Parikalpita view of existence (188).

"As with cataract of the eye which makes one imagine various forms though the cataract itself has nothing to do with forms or no-forms, so is the relative nature of existence to the unenlightened (189).

"Lake unto pure gold, water free from dirt, and the sky clear of clouds, pure is the nature of the discriminated (190)

"There is no reality as discriminated in the Parikalpita view of the world, but Relativity (paratantra) itself exists; assertion and refutation are done away with, which are the products of discrimination (191).

"If the Parikalpita is non-existent because of the nature of Relativity (paratantra), what is existent has no existence, and what is existent is produced from non-existence (192).

"Depending upon the Parikalpita, discrimination there obtains Relativity (paratantra); from the relationship of Names and Appearances there rises the Parikalpita-discrimination (198).

"But the Parikalpita is not ultimately complete, it has no other way of birth [than depending upon Relativity]; thus it is known that Ultimate Truth is pure in its selfnature (194).

"There are ten kinds of Parikalpita and six kinds of Relativity; as to that which is recognised as Suchness in one's immost consciousness there is no differentiation in it (195)

"The five Dharmas are truth, and so are the three Svabhāvas; when the Yogun has an insight into this he does not go outside Suchness $(tathat\bar{a})$ (196).

"What is known as Appearance [and] Relativity, that In all the Chinese translations we have twelve instead of tan.

is due to Discrimination, but the phenomena of Parikalpita take place depending upon Relativity (197)

"When, however, [existence] is truthfully discerned (vivecya) by the intelligence (buddhi), there is neither Paratantra nor Parikalpita discrimination. Nor is there anything to be called Perfect Knowledge (parinishpania), and how can there be anything to be discerned by the intelligence (198)?

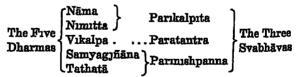

"That which is Perfect is beyond the dualism of being and non-being, how can there be these two views of existence [known as Parikalpita and Paratantra] (199)?

"In the Parikalpita view of existence dualism is established, and with these dualistic establishments, multiplicity is seen discriminated, but pure is the realm of the wise (200)

"Multiplicity is discriminated indeed, it is discriminated depending upon Relativity (paratantra), if a man's discrimination takes place in any other way, he follows the doctrines of the philosophers (201)

"The discriminating is said to be the discriminated, the idea of causation grows from trying to formulate philosophical views, when the dualism of discrimination is gotten rid of, there is indeed that perfect view of existence (parinishpanna) (202)"

The relation¹ between the five Dharmas and the three Svabhāvas may be tabulated as follows

In going over this tabulation as in the study of other parts of Buddhist philosophy we must keep one thing always

P. 68, g 134, see also p 229, g 6, and p 285, g 156 Numitam nāma samlalpah svabhāvadvayalalshanam, Samyagjāānam hi tathatā paranishpannalalshanam before our minds, as I stated elsewhere, which is, that Buddhist thought is always the outcome of Buddhist life; that its logic, or psychology, or metaphysics cannot be understood adequately unless we realise that facts of Buddhist experience are at its basis, and, therefore, that pure logic is not the key to the understanding of Buddhist philosophy.

The Two Kinds of Knowledge

The division of knowledge of truth (satya) into two forms. Sanvriti and Paramertha.1 is also known to the author of the Lankavatara, but it was due to the Madhyamika school of Nagarjuna that the distinction was thoroughly formulated into a system, and they made most of it to account for the dual aspect of experience in their treatises on the doctrine of the Middle Path. In the Lankavatara we may say that the idea is foreshadowed when it makes reference to "Travahara" (practical experience) according to which the Buddha concedes the possibility of such concepts as being and non-being, birth and death, caused and causing, grasped and grasping, etc. "Tyavahāra" belongs to ordinary life where rules the principle of individuation, and as long as the relative and provisional existence of maya is admitted. common parlance too has to be permitted for practical purposes. When the sutra, however, goes on further down to explain the characteristic features of the Paratantra form of knowledge, the terms Samvriti and Paramertha occur, as we have just noted in the gathas quoted—the former as leading to particularity and the latter as a mental state when this is transcended. The gathas throw some light on what is meant by the Parikalpita and the Paratantra view of ex-

The term "Paramatha" is semetimes (p. 87) used in opposition to the "resim of words, discrimination, and intelligence" (cogricalps-buddhi-gozara) or to the "discrimination of individuality and generalit" (p. 89). In this case Paramatha is groupmens with the supreme wisdom realised in one's immost consciousness, which is the main thesis of the Locilovoidra.

^{*} Fyarchara means "usage" or "world's way." P.S.

istence and at the same time on their relationship to the Madhyamika conception of Samvritisatya They are very complicated in meaning and difficult to expound exactly and in full But the main idea seems to be this. Mind is set in motion when it allows itself to be conditioned by the principle of individuation The Parikalpita and the Paratantra follow from this stirring up of mentation tantra is intellectual, for it operates depending on something outside itself It is a kind of representation It may not always be correct, but it does not create anything out of itself The Parikapita, on the other hand, weaves its own imaginative world regardless of its objective value. It is always in the wrong not only in a logical sense but psychologically The main point about it is that it discriminates "me and mine" from what is not "me and mine." and holding this distinction to be real and final, becomes attached to it, which culminates in moral egoism When this is once asserted, all the evils follow that are to be found in connection with life. The Paratantra which may be innocent in itself becomes the most efficient hand-maid to the Parikalpita, and what is created by it is also intellectually confirmed with all its practical consequences Paratantra and the Parikalpita are mutually dependent The Parinishpanna is to go beyond both these forms of knowledge This is Paramartha, the highest transcendental wisdom, while the Samvriti form of truth prevails in the world of Parikalpita and Paratantra

The two kinds of Buddhi (knowledge)¹ which are elsewhere distinguished in the sutra may be considered to correspond to Samviti and Paramärtha. In the following lines² which are repeated in the "Sagāthakam" (gg 54-55), truth or reality (bhūtakot) is contrasted with its reflected image or semblance (pratibinba). "As the king or householder gives his children all kinds of playthings looking like deer and other animals and alluring and pleasing them by these, finally gives them real things; so I do, for I tell my children, by the aid of various forms reflecting realities, the ultimate truth which is to be realised in their inmost consciousness." Buddhi is a higher power of reasoning, but it also denotes any form of intelligence. The first is called Pravicavabuddhi.1 which is a kind of absolute knowledge corresponding to the Parinishpanna. Pravicaya means, "to search through.""to examine thoroughly," and the Buddhi so qualified penetrates into the fundamental nature of all things, which is above logical analysis and cannot be described with any of the four propositions (catushkotika). The second Buddhi is called Pratishthapika.2 that is, the intelligence that sets up all kinds of distinction over a world of appearances, attaching the mind to them as real. it may establish rules of reasoning whereby to give indements to a world of particulars It is logical knowledge, it is what regulates our ordinary life. But as soon as something is established (pratishthapita) in order to prove it. that is, as soon as a proposition is made, it sets up something else at the same time and goes on to prove itself against that something else. There is nothing absolute here.

¹ P 122.

P. 88.

This setting up or establishing is elsewhere designated as Samāropa.³ The four establishments are given: (1) characteristic marks (lakshaṇa), (2) definite views (dṛishṭa), (3) a cause (hetu). and (4) a substance (bhāva)—all where there are none such in reality. Owing to these proposotions definitely held up as true, opposite ones will surely rise and there will take place a wrangling or controversy (apavāda)⁴ between the opposing parties. The sutra thus advises the Bodhisattva to avoid these one-sided views in order to attain a state of enlightenment which is beyond the positive as well as beyond the negative way of viewing the world.

^{*} 哀哀智, kuan-ch'a-ch'h. * 哀立智, ch'er-li-ch'k. (T'ang). * 意文, pp. 70, 96, 156. * 萨兹, pp. 70, 96.

The Twofold Non-Atman Theory

We now come to a third distinctive feature of the philosophy of the Lankavatara, which is known as the twofold non-Atman theory, 1e. Nairätmyadvava 1 The non-Atman or non-ego theory is known among all Buddhist students as the most differentiating mark of Buddhism, but the denial of an Atman or self-substance (svabhāva) in external objects is the specific property of the Mahayana and may require some explanation To translate atman always by "ego" or "self" or "soul" may not be right, and especially when its denial is applied to an objective world, egolessness has no meaning, it is merely the source of misapprehension An Atman means something substantial in possession of a number of qualities, and a free agent not bound by the principle of relativity When its existence, therefore, is denied in us, it means that we have no such free agent within ourselves, enjoying a substantial existence even above the concatenation of cause and effect. When we deny its reality in the world external to us, it means that there is no self-substance (svabhāva) in individual objects which come into existence, abide for a while, and finally disappear according to certain In this case, nairātmya is mhsvabhāva, and when it is understood in this way, the idea falls in harmoniously with the other views maintained by Mahayanists Though not yet formulated numerically by Buddhist scholars, there are four distinguishing marks in Mahayana ontology which constitute its very kernel They are. (1) that all things are empty (śūnya), (2) unborn (anutpanna), (3) not dual (advarta), and (4) without self-substance (nihsvabhāva).2 This sums up the metaphysical aspect of Mahayanism, and the dual non-Atman theory is merely a partial recapitulation of it.

² P 68. etc

Pp 73, 188, etc These somewhat correspond to what is generally known as the three Samādhi or Vimokshamukha, šūnya, animitta, and apramhita. Of. pp 78, 166, 163, etc; and also pp 138, 141 etc, of these Studies.

The Lankavatara explains the theory in the following manner. 1 The Skandhas, Dhatus, and Avatanas have nothmg personal in them, there is no "me and mine" in them. they are created by the ignorant affirmation of the desire to have,2 and attachment takes place when they are comprehended by the senses The material world as well as the physical body are manifestations of the mind known as Alayavijnana, and when they are discriminated as particular existences, we are discriminating our own mind-made When thus created they are seen in constant transmigration, they never remain even for a moment as they are, they flow like a stream, they change like a seed, they flicker like a candle light, they move like the wind or like a cloud. And when affections are stirred up, they are pursued by us, we behave like the monkey who is ever restless, or like the fly that runs after filthy food, and not knowing when we are satiated, and evidently to no good purpose, we burn like fire Owing to the habit-energy (vāsanā) accumulated since time immemorial through wrong reasoning and attachment, we now transmigrate from one state to another revolving like a wheel. like a machine, like a phantom creation, or like a walking ghost When we realise this, we are said to have the knowledge of the non-existence of an individual ego-soul (pudgalanairātmya-jñānam)

Dharma-nairātmya-jñānam(法無我智),⁸ as I said before, is gained by extending the knowledge of the non-existence of an individual ego-soul to the external world. The two ideas are interrelated, and when the one is asserted the other follows inevitably. To say that all objects are devoid of self-substance is to recognise a most complicated system of

¹ P 68 ff ² ajñāna-Larma-trishna

It is sometimes argued that the Himayana too denies the existence of Dharmatman and that Dharmanairatmya-jūānam is not the exclusive property of the Mahayana. The argument may be true as far as it goes, but what most distinguishes the Mahayana is the doctrine of Sünyatā which necessarily follows from the egolessness of all things, and its application to the Bodhisativa's practical life relationship running through all existence This was noticed by the Buddha himself when he discovered what is known as the chain of origination, but as his immediate interest was to free his disciples from ignorance and attachment, his statement stopped short at the theory of non-ego With the development of Buddhist experience and thought, the psychology grew up into metaphysics, and the doctrine of Sūnyatā (emptiness) came to occupy the minds of Mahayanists And this doctrine is another way of saying that all objects are without self-substance When the theory of non-ego is once established, all these stock ideas of Mahayana Buddhism are the necessary inferences Sūnyatā(秦), Dharmanairātmya(法 無我), Nihsvabhāva (無首性), Anutpāda (不生), Anābhāsa (無影像), Nirvāna (邊線), Mayopama (如幻), etc

The denial of self-substance means that just as the Skandhas, Dhātus, Āyatanas, are devoid of an ego-soul and have no other creator than the desire to possess (trishna) which expresses itself in deeds, thereby subjecting itself to an endless concatenation of cause and effect, so all things are by nature above such categories of particularity and generality, are distinguished as concrete individuals only through wrong discrimination which is so intensely cherished by the The wise are not thus confused, however, ordinary mind they are free from unwarranted inferences and attachments, as they know, by rightly reviewing the world of particulars (sarvadharma), that the latter is devoid of mind (citta), will (manas), intelligence (manovijāāna), the five Dharmas, and the three Svabhavas (self-nature).1 When this is attamed, the knowledge concerning the absence of Atman in all things is attained

"To be devoid of mind, etc.," means that the real nature of existence cannot be designated by any category of thought, for to be predicated means to be determined, to be limited. The truth, if it is really something that gives complete satisfaction to the yearnings of our religious consciousness, must be absolute, and to be absolute and thoroughly convincing such truth must be inwardly experienced. When an appeal is made to logic a statement or proposition is to be proved according to rules of thought, and these rules are sure to be conditional, and, therefore, more or less one-sided and prejudicial When the Mahayanists have to assert (astr) or deny (nāstr), they run the risk of being judged by the rules of thought, and perhaps all they can establish in the circumstances is to say that all things are devoid of "mind, will, ete" as above referred to This is where Mahayana philosophers are always in a quandary, and this is the reason why the Mahayana teaching looks on the surface at least as self-contradictory or full of paradoxes.

To apply the term, "ātman," ego, soul, not only to a person (pudgala) but to all manimate objects may sound strange at first sight as was stated above, but when it is realised that Buddhist philosophy has no special intellectual interest in the discussion itself except from the most pragmatical point of view, i.e., as concerned with life, with this person, with its salvation and enlightenment, the extension of the term "self" or "soul" over to all existence seems justified and appropriate At any rate the dual non-ego theory is one of the features of the Mahayana as differentiated from the Hinsyana.

(B) THE PSYCHOLOGY OF BUDDHIST EXPERIENCE

The Doctrine of Mind-only

Having finished that phase of equipment which may be called logical, for the upward career of the Bodhisattva, let us now pass on to the psychological phase, that is, the doctrine of consciousness, technically known as the theory of the eight Vijnānas. As I wish to repeat, Buddhism being a religion has no abstract interest in logic, or psychology, or metaphysics per se, and especially in the case of the Lankavatāra the chief problem is to reach a state of self-realisation which is the sine qua non of Buddhahood, and of Bodhisattvahood as well. All efforts are to be directed towards this goal, and it would be entirely against the spirit of the sutra to discuss the psychology of the Lankāvatāra. I am doing this simply for the benefit of the modern reader who wants to get a better perspective of the text than in its original confusion.

Psychology is, however, the most difficult part of the Lankavatara, and it is not an easy matter to get a clear insight into the meaning of it. What I have done here may not be quite correct as far as the reading of the text is concerned, and I am open to conviction from the hand of a more competent interpreter.

Most Buddhist scholars are often too ready to make a too sharp distinction between the Madhyamika and the Yogacara school, taking the one as exclusively advocating the theory of emptiness (śūnuatā) while the other is bent singlemindedly on an idealistic interpretation of the universe They thus further assume that the idea of emptiness is not at all traceable in the Yogacara and that idealism is absent ın the Madhvamıka This is not exact as a matter of historical fact Though it is impossible just at present to fix the date of the Lankavatara definitely, we find in it the tendencies that might have developed into the Yogācāra as well as into the Madhyamika; and these tendencies must be regarded as prior to the development of these two schools each distinctly claiming its special province of interest differentiation must have taken place after the sutra and not before, for it is natural to infer that composite tendencies appear first and then their decomposition into separate ideas and further development each along its specified line

However this may be, the main point we must never forget in the study of the Lankavatara is that it is not written as a philosophical treatise to establish a definite system of thought, but is to discourse on a certain religious experience. What philosophy or speculation it offers is only meidental as an introduction or as an intellectual interpretation necessitated by the rational nature of humanity. This latter phase of religious experience may be more predominant in Buddhism than in some other religions, but it is not for us to overlook the essence of the matter for the sake of its more or less unimportant accessories, however inevitable they may be in the understanding of it

As was definitely stated, the principal theme of the Lankāvatāra is Pratyātmāryajūānagocara, the state of consciousness in which the immost truth is directly presented in one's mind. This being an immediate perception of the truth it cannot be imparted to others by means of logic, but without it the perception itself ceases to be operative, which is the same thing as not existing at all or being unreal. The experience itself is without content, and must be given to it by the intellect to make it workable in our social living. The psychology of the Lankāvatāra is also to be treated thus, that is to say, its doctrine of "Mind-only" (citamātra) with all its accompaniments is meant to explain the mental experience of the Bodhisattva. We have always to bear in mind this subordinate position of psychology or logic or metaphysics in the teaching of the Lankāvatāra.

The doctrine of the Vijnanas is described in this wise. "As the waves of the ocean depending on the wind are stirred up and roll on dancing without interruption (99).

"So the Alaya-flood constantly starred up by the wind of individuation (vishaya) rolls on dancing with the waves of the various Vijnānas (100):

"As dark blue, red, and other colours with salt, conchshell, milk, and honey; fragrance with fruits and flowers; rays of light with the sun—they are neither different nor not-different one from another (101):

"So the seven Vijnanas which are the waves of the ocean rise in conjunction with mind (cetta) (102);

² Pp 46 ff. These gathas are in some places not quite clear as to their meaning Perhaps the text ought to be more thoroughly rearranged, which to a certain extent the author hopes to do later.

"Manifold are the waves evolved in the ocean, likewise indeed the Alaya sets in motion a variety of Vijñānas (103).

"Citta, Manas, and [Mano-]vijnāna are spoken of [as different] because of appearances, in fact the eight [Vijnānas] have no specific qualifying marks there is neither that which qualifies nor that which is qualified (104)

"As there is no differentiation in the ocean's waves, so no modification obtains in Citta as regards the Vijnānas (105)

"Citta gathers up karma, Manas inspects, the Vijñāna distinguishes, and the five Vijñānas discriminate the visible [world] (106)

"[Mahāmatı asked]

"Dark blue and red and suchlike are known to be the Vijnana of mankind, tell me, O Mahamuni, how a likeness is obtained between waves and mind (citta) (107).

"[The Buddha answered]

"Dark blue and red and suchlike are indeed not in the waves, it is for the sake of the ignorant that mind is described as evolving due to appearances (108)

"There is no evolving in mind, mind in itself is free from that which is perceived, where there is that which is perceived there is that which perceives, the case is the same with the waves (109)

"Body, property, and abode are known to be the Vijnana of mankind, in which an evolution is thus observed, the analogy holds good with the waves (110)

''[Mahāmatı saıd]

"The ocean with its dancing waves is discernable, and why is not the evolution of the Alaya likewise perceived by intelligence (111)?

"[The Buddha replied]

"In accordance with the intelligence and discrimination

1 Deha, bhoga, and pratishtha are usually enumerated together m the Lankāvatāra, symbolising the entire material world Deha is the physical body, bhoga stands for everything that belongs to an individual and is enjoyed by him, while pratishtha is his entire physical environment where he finds his place of living 勇, 实际, 所任, (T'ang) of the ignorant, the Alaya is compared to the ocean, and the likeness of waves and the evolution [of mind] is pointed out by a simile (112).

"[Mahāmatı requested]

"Inke unto the sun that illumines equally above and below, thou art indeed the light of the world; announce the truth for the sake of the ignorant (113) Thou hast already begun the exposition of the Law, why dost thou not announce the truth [tattvam] *

"[The Buddha then replied] .

"Even when there is a man who discourses on the truth, there is in his mind no [special object to be called] truth (114) 1

"As the waves are stirred on the ocean, as images are seen in a mirror, in a dream, simultaneously, so is the mind in its own field (115).

"To discriminate objects, an evolution [of Vijñānas] takes place in succession the Vijñāna distinguishes, and Manas again reflects (116).

"The visible world manifests itself to the five Vijnanas; there is no successive evolution when mind is in a state of

In Bodhiruci's translation this verse is put into the mouth of Mahamatı with all that follows; in the Sanskrit text it forms the second half of the verse (114) where bhashams in the footnote may be a more logical reading. My reading is here after the Sung and the T'ang version The sense of the verse, however, as it is phrased here may not be quite clear to the reader, for it may be taken as meaning that the Buddha speaks of a thing which is not really in his mind, that 18, that he is a har and that he is confessing the fact himself The intended idea is that the truth (tattuam) is something elusive and beyond specification, or that defies logical definition; when it is said that here is the truth, it is no more there, for in this case "here" fails to melade what is "not-here," and to be the truth it must transcend all possible limitations ascribed by human thought The Lankavatāra, m fact the whole system of Mahayana speculation, is built upon this idea of truth. Tattvam is tathatā (如如 or 如實) which literally means "suchness" or "thatness" or "thusness," and is therefore said to be unattamable (alabdha, 不可得). The reader must get used to this Mahayana way of describing the absolute character of ultimate reality when he tries to understand the psychology of the Mahayana Buddhist.

collectedness As a painter or his disciple (117) arrays his colours in order to produce a painting, so do I preach; the picture is not in the colour, nor in the canvas, nor in the plate (118)

"In order to attract all beings, the picture is produced in colours, preaching may err, but the truth is beyond words (119)

"Being the master of all the doctrines, I preach the truth to the devotees, and the truth is to be attained by an inner perception, as it goes beyond both the distinguished [objects] and the distinguishing [subject] (120).

"I preach for the sake of sons of the Buddha, this preaching is not for the ignorant; the manifoldness of things is seen as like maya, and exists not (121).

"Preaching is thus done in various ways, subject to errors; when the preaching is not in good accord [with the mentality of the hearer], it is then for him no preaching (122)

"A good physician administers medicine according to his patients; so indeed do the Buddhas discourse in accordance with the mental capacity of beings (123).

"The masters thus preach the state of consciousness attained by their inner perception, which does not belong to the realm of the philosophers and Śrāvakas (124)."

According to the Lankāvatārā, the mind, inclusive of Citta, Manas, and the other six Vijnānas, is in its original nature (svabhāva) quiet, pure, and above the dualism of subject and object But here appears the principle of particularisation known as "Vishaya" (投票), which comes from the root vish meaning "to act," "to work"; and with the rise of this wind of action, the waves are agitated over the tranquil surface of the mind It is now differentiated or evolves (vriti) into eight Vijnānas Ālaya, Manas, Manovijnāna,

In the "Sagāthakam" section all these gāthās, 99-124, are reproduced, but are broken up into four parts, while gāthās 101-123 are kept solid See pp 271, 272, 314-315, and 320 and the five senses, and simultaneously with this evolution the whole universe comes into existence with its multitudinous forms and with its endless entanglements. The following is indeed the constant echo reverberating through the sutra:

"The visible [world] which is mind does not exist [as seen by the senses]; but mind is set in motion by being seen [i.e., objectified]; the body, property, and the abode are the manifestations of the Ālaya [inherent in all] mankind (125).

"Citta, Manas, and Manovijnana, Svabhava, the five Dharmas, the two forms of Nairatmya (egolessness), purity—these are elucidated by the Buddhas (126).

"Long and short and suchlike come to exist mutually conditioned; not-to-be grows effective by to-be and to-be by not-to-be (127).

"When things are analysed into atoms, there remains nothing to be discriminated as objects. Those who hold wrong views do not believe in the ever-abiding ground where the mind-only [doctrine is established] (128).

"The masters point out the state of consciousness attained by their inner perception, which goes indeed beyond the mental calibre of the philosophers and Śrāvakas (129) "2"

The Important Terms Explained

Before going further, it may be desirable to explain the more important technical terms constantly used in Buddhist psychology.

As is seen here, the conception of the Alayavijñana plays a chief, though silent, rôle in the evolution of the

That is, Vijfilias When vijfidia is used in its most comprehensive sense, it is equivalent to mind as distinguished from unthinking matter, rapa In its specific, technical sense, it is the perceiving and discriminating activity of mind (See also infra)

Pp 54-55. This last gatha (129) is also found as the concluding line on the previous page. In fact, it is the favorite theme of the Laskdvatāra. This string of gathas is repeated in the "Sagāthakam." page 330 idealistic philosophy of the Lankāvatāra It is often called simply "Citta," or "Tathāgata-garbha" Ālaya means a storage-house (tsang, Km in Chinese) where all kinds of goods are kept in storage, and it is the Ālayavijāna's function to store up all the memory (vāsanā) of one's thoughts, affections, desires, and deeds The seeds (bīja) thus stored remain in the Ālaya perfectly quiescent and neutral

Citta which is used as a synonym of the Alaya may be translated "mind" as distinguished from Manas, that is, in its more specific sense Citta, according to the sutra, apparently comes from the root ci, which has two senses, (1) "to gather," "to pile," "to acquire," and (2) "to perceive," "to look for" Citta, therefore, may mean either "collection" or "perception," and in the present case, that is, when it is identified with the Alaya, Buddhist scholars take it in the sense of accumulation. So we read in the Lankāvatāra, "Citta gathers up karma," or "karma is gathered up by Citta" Ordinarily, it may correctly be rendered "thought," or "mind". The great source of confusion, however, comes from Citta being used frequently for the whole system of Vijāānas as well as for the Alaya alone.

Vijiāna is one of the significant terms in Buddhism, it is difficult to find one English word for it. Jāā means "to know," "to perceive," but Vijāāna in Buddhism has a technical sense, it is not mere-cognition or understanding, it is a sort of principle of conscious life as distinguished from the body, and it is also the power or faculty of discrimination. It has, however, essentially an intellectual connotation, faithfully retaining its original sense. In the case of Alayavijāāna, there is no discrimination in it, no intellection; for it simply accumulates all the impressions, all the memory-seeds (bīja) that are produced and left behind by the activities of the other Vijāānas

¹ Pp. 46, 158 · cittena cīyate karmam Also of the ''Saga thakam,'' g. 754, tair doifdni karman, and g 829, cittam anddi matisamottam

Tathāgata-garbha, which is another name for the Alaya, 18 also a sort of store-room or receptacle where the seeds of Tathagatahood are retained and matured. It has a religious shade of meaning in contradistinction to the Alayavijnana which is a more philosophical term. Garbka is generally done into Chinese as # (tsang), same as Alaya, but literally it means "womb" (Rh. tai). It is strange that the Chinese translators never, as far as I know, rendered tathaqutagarbha by 如來胎, but always, 如來職, except when in the Shingon sect the Garbha-kośa-dhātu (胎臟界) is spoken of as contrasting with the Vajradhātu (会酬果). But the meaning is clear because the Tathagata-garbha is the womb where the Tathagatas are conceived and matured, and as we are all possible Tathagatas except that we sit generally bound like mummies by the heavy intellectual and affective coverings known as meuāvarana and kleśavarana. These two obstructions lie in our way of attaining supreme enlighten-The intellectual one may not be so difficult to overcome as far as the intellect alone is concerned as it is detached altogether from the influence of the passions, but these passions constituting the very root of personality from the hardest knot to be untied by all earnest followers of Buddhism The Buddhists, however, have no desire to extinguish all the affective factors that make up the human heart. What they mean when they say that one should extirpate all the passions (kleśa) in order to attain perfect freedom is that our passions, as they are generally harboured, are deeply rooted in the idea of self and inseparably joined with all the egotistic impulses, and that therefore they should be disjoined and set free for the working of Mahākarunā (great compassionate heart), which, in conjunction with Prajiia, supreme wisdom. makes up the life of the Mahayana Buddhist.

Manas (from man), meaning "to think," "to imagine," "to intend." is that seat of intellection and connation, corresponding to the Western conception of mind. It is the one term in Buddhist psychology that has no vijāna attached at its end. It is often confused, and justifiably, with Manovijnāna which is one of the six Vijnānas recognised by all the schools of Buddhism In the Lankavatara Manas occupies a definite position and performs a specific function in the hierarchy of psychical activities, which will be described Manovijūana, like the other five Vijūanas, has a field of its own as the perceiving of the rationality of things internal as well as external The Cakshur-viinana is meant for the visibility of things, the Śrotra-vijñāna for their audibility, ad so on. The Manovijnana functions sometimes independently of the five Vijnanas and sometimes simultaneously and conjointly with them To a certain extent, it may be considered equivalent to the intellect, while Manas is conative and affective besides being intellectual Therefore, it is sometimes called Klishtamanas, meaning "Manas in defilement " The spiritual defilement starts nowhere else but in the Manas, the root of intellection and conation

Vāsanā is quite a new conception in the development of Mahayana Buddhism, and the knowledge of it is indispensable to the understanding of the Alayavijnana Vasana comes from the root vas meaning "to dwell," "to stay," or "to perfume," and in the Mahayana sutras it is used in the two senses combined, that is, in the sense of a perfuming energy that leaves its essence permanently behind in the things it has perfumed The Chinese translators generally have 智氣 hsi-ch'i, or 查智 hsun-hsi, for this term, hsi meaning "habit," "long usage," or "repeated experience" Vāsanā, therefore, is a kind of super-sensuous energy (acıntya-vāsanā-parınāma, 不思難董秘) mysteriously emanating from every thought, every feeling, or every deed one has done or does, which lives latently in the store-house called Ālayavıjñāna It is often qualified as daushtkulya whose Chinese equivalent is 惡 wu, or 過惡 kuo-wu, meaning "erroneous" or "evil" Vāsanā is morally evil and logically erroneous masmuch as it creates an external world and causes us to cling to it as real and final In modern psychology, we

. 1 -. •

n

t. 2. i

totality of the Vijñāna system. Indeed, when the Ālaya is separated from its company, it ceases to work, that is, to exist, and we have here nothing left but the name.

The doctrine expounded in the Lankävatāra and also in the Avatamsaka-sūtra is known as the Cittamātra and never as the Vijñānamātra or Vijñaptimātra as in the Yogācāra school of Asanga and Vasubandhu. Throughout the Lankāvatāra no mention is made of "vijñānamātra," but either "vijñaptimātra," or "prajñaptimātra," and they are used synonymously. The instances are:

- (1) prajāāptimātram trībhavam (p. 168, line 7; p. 274, line 10; p. 275, line 13);
- (2) vijnāptimātravyavasthānam (p. 169, line 5; p. 170, lines 9-10);
- (3) lokain vijnaptimātram (p 270, line 1);
- (4) vijnaptinamamatreyam (p. 96, line 4):
- (5) prajnaptimātrakam (p. 33, line 11);
- (6) praznaptimatram ca Latham (p. 26, line 17),
- (7) prajnaptinamamatreyam (p. 267, line 1).

Of these phrases quoted from the sutra, (1) and (2) are the more important: (3) appears in the "Sagāthakam" which evidently being a later addition I have not made much use of in the preparation of this book. Prajnapti, or Vijuapti is not here understood in the sense of IM (discernment) nor of 讀 (knowledge or cognition) as is rendered by the later translators, but it means "construction," or "elaboration" (族證 or 假證), or "provisionary name" (假 名). Where the triple world (tribhavam) is said to be nothing but vijnapti or prajnapti, it means that the world is mere subjective construction, having no reality or selfsubstance (svabhava). The doctrine of Cirtamatra, (mindonly, or pure-mind-only), as advocated in the Lankavatara, however, differs from this in that it does not deny the existence of mind itself, from which the objective world appears with all its forms of particularisation. The fault lies in our not recognising this truth and consequently in adhering to a world of particulars as final reality, instead of turning back into our own inner world where we can perceive the Tathagata-garbha in its unity and immaculacy. The Tathagata-garbha itself is free from the wrong judgments and discrimination which end in stirring up all kinds of defilements, passions, and outflowings. More will be said about the difference between the Lankavatara's position and that of the Yogācāra as regards the doctrine of Cittamātra when the subject is treated later on more specifically. As far as the idealistic way of looking at the world is concerned, both systems have something in common; especially the Lankāvatā may be interpreted more or less consistently by means of the Yogācāra psychology, and indeed this has been frequently attempted by scholars But as is the case with Aśvaghosha's Awakening of Faith, the Lankavatara differs from the Yogacara in one important point, i.e., that while the latter maintains that the Alaya is absolutely pure and has nothing to do with defilements and evil passions, the Lankāvatāra and Aśvaghosha maintain the view that the Tathagata-garbha or the Alaya is the storage of the impure as well as the pure, that it is both immanent and transcendental, both relative and absolute

The Evolution of the Vijnana System

The whole Vijñāna system is explained in the Lankāvatāra from various points of view which are very difficult to present adequately in another language in which there is no tradition of thought corresponding to the Indian or Buddhist way of thinking. I hope the following interpretation of mine has not altogether misrepresented the original conceptions of the Lankāvatāra

The Vijūāna system is describable from three points of reference its evolution (pravritts), its modes of being (lakshana), and its function (kaima) By evolution is meant the rise (utpāda), abiding (sthiti), and disappearance1 (nırodha) of the Vijnana. Of this there are two forms, Prabandha (相続), and Lakshana (相). Prabandha, meaning incessant continuation, is concerned with an uninterrupted activity of the Vijnana, while Lakshana, meaning external mark, refers to its manifested aspect the habit-energy (vāsanā) stored up in the Ālaya by the imprints left behind by thinking, feeling, willing, and acting, either good or had, is destroyed, there will be no visible signs This is called the destruction or disappearance of them left of the Viinana as to their Lakshana When not only the cause of the subject (āśraya) in dependence upon which the Vijūānas can function, but that which supports them (ālambana), or that which provides them with material, is removed, there will be no more continuation of activity in the This is the case of disappearance both with the Prabandha and with the Lakshana of the Vijnanas, and the same conditions will also hold good with their rise and continuance.

As the sutra, however, does not give any further explanation concerning the difference between, for instance, the disappearance of the Prabandha and that of the Lakshaṇa, the above statement is not enough to show why this distinction between the two is necessary, not only logically but psychologically, for the difference specified above does not seem to be sufficiently warranted. All that we can gather from this is that there is Vāsanā amassed in the Ālaya, which acts as cause to the other Vijñānas, and that there is another thing which serves as object to the latter, and, finally, that by the interaction that goes on between subject and object all the Vijñānas grow either active or dormant according to the case.

² P. 37 ff. But this does not mean that the Aleys itself disappears as is maintained by some philosophers. If this should take place, the doctrine of Cittamätra would not hold good, and there would be no such spiritual event as is known as "turning" (pardujitti).

The one most important conception in the system of VII nas is Vasana What is this? Psychologically, as was stated before. Väsanä is memory, for it is something left after a deed is done, mental or physical, and it is retained and stored up in the Alava as a sort of latent energy ready to be set in motion. This memory or habit-energy. or habitual perfuming is not necessarily individual: the Alava being super-individual holds in it not only individual memory but all that has been experienced by sentient beings. When the sutra says that in the Alava is found all that has been going on since beginningless time systematically stored up as a kind of seed, this does not refer to individual experiences, but to something general, beyond the individual, making up in a way the background on which all individual psychic activities are reflected Therefore, the Alaya is originally pure, it is the abode of Tathagatahood, where no defilements of the particularising intellect and affection can reach, purity in terms of logic means universality, and defilement or sin means individuation, from which attachments of various In short, the world starts from memory, forms are derived memory in itself as retained in the Alaya universal is no evil, and when we are removed from the influence of false discrimination the whole Vijnana system woven around the Alaya as centre experiences a revulsion toward true percep-This is the gist of the teaching of the tion (parāvritti) Lankāvatāra.

This revulsion marks the culmination of the practical psychology of the Lankāvatāra, for it is through this fact that the realisation of Pratyātmāryajñānagocara is possible, and this realisation is the central theme of the discourse. As this event takes place in the Alaya, or what is the same thing, in the Tathāgata-garbha, which is the basis of all things, it is known as āśraya-parāvritt, a revulsion at the basis. Aśraya a 重否 (hsiln-hst).

¹ 習氣 (hst-ch't)

s 单依 (chuan-s)

means that on which anything is dependent, and in this case the Alaya is the Asraya on which hangs the working of the Vijnanas and consequently the birth of the whole universe. The new orientation takes place when the ego-centric and evil-creating discrimination based upon the dualism of subject and object ceases by the realisation that there is no external world besides what is perceived within the self. and this realisation is effected by the cultivation of the intellect known as non-discriminative and transcendental (nirvikalpalokottara-nānam) As long as our ordinary understanding which is dualistically conditioned prevails, we cannot go beyond the realm controlled by the seven Vijnanas, and if we cannot go beyond this, we have no chance of penetrating into the reality of things (dharmata), which means an everlasting transmigration in the world of birth-and-death must look now in the opposite direction, towards the quarter where no Vikalpa takes place, and where no evolution (pravritti) of the Vinnanas has set in. An opening must be made to the non-discriminative and transcendental intellect. The opening is called revulsion. The eye that used to open to the external world thinking it was reality and got egotistically attached to it, now turns within to see what hes here. It is in this inner world that so many things we have been looking after are accessible now the Inner Perception,1 Nirvana,2 Tathatā,3 Emancipation,4 Prajňāpāramitā,5 the cessation of the seven Vijnanas.6. etc.

This sudden turning is in a sense re-turning, the Alaya or Tathagata-garbha returns by this to its original purity (śuddha), happiness (sukha), and eternal nature which is above pravritti and narvritti (rise and disappearance).7 The

¹ Svacittadrišyagocara, p. 62, etc.

Pp. 62, 98, 238, etc.

a P 108

^{*} Molska, p 238. * P. 238.

P. 221.

T P. 222,

Alaya has been contaminated by external impurities (agantukleśa) amassed by all kinds of philosophising (vitarhadarsana) bassed on the discrimination of subject and object. When the discrimination is in the right direction, it is right, for it points towards the returning; but when it goes astray as in the case with every one of the ignorant and unenlightened, it stirs up all sorts of trouble, not only intellectually but affectively, the latter being the worst of all trouble-makers As Buddhism like other Indian systems of thought puts the first emphasis on intellectual integrity, the right seeing into the situation performs the most important office in the whole programme of Buddhist experience When the intellectual outlook is distorted, the affective and conative disturbances follow, which in turn react upon the essential purity of the Alaya and contaminate it thoroughly. Incorrectness in every form is described by Buddhists in terms of chromatics. Hence the Alaya is dyed (upaklishia) by external impurities Kleśą is generally translated in Buddhism as 類似, "tormenting and afflicting," "causing vexations of spirit," but here in the Lankavatara it is stated as 應, "dust" or "impurity" as it spoils the immaculate Alaya And since this dust is not native to the Alaya, it is called āgantu, the "guest" who is uninvited 1

The Three Modes of the Vijnana

The Vijnanas may be described from their modes of being, that is, from the lakshana point of view there are three signs from which their being may be approached. The first is the Vijnana as evolving (pravriti), the second the Vijnana as producing definite effects (karma), and the third the Vijnana as remaining in its original nature $(j\bar{a}i)^2$. The Pravrittivijnana is a collective name for all the particular Vijnanas that evolve out of the Alaya, when they are considered from the point of view of evolution, while the

¹ P 222, also of p 77, and The Süträlamlära, p 88, w 18-19

P 37 ff.

Ālaya is the Vijnāna or Citta that remains undisturbed in its native abode. The Karmavijnāna describes the Vijnāna in its functioning capacity. The Vijnāna in itself does not show any signs of becoming; but these three aspects belong to one Citta; thus they are, as the sutra says, "neither different nor not-different." The following extract will show us the relation of the Pravritti-vijnāna to the other aspects of the Vijnāna:

"As atoms of clay and a lump of clay are neither different nor not-different from each other, so are gold and articles of ornament made of it. If, O Mahamati, a lump of clay is different from its atoms, nothing will be produced out of them, but as something is produced out of them, they are not different. But if they are identical, not different. no distinction is possible between atoms of clay and the lump. Likewise. O Mahamati, if the evolved Vijnanas are different from the Alava each in its original nature, the Alaya will not be their primary cause. If they are identical, the disappearance of the Vijnanas will be the disappearance of the Alaya, but there is no disappearance of their original nature. Thus, O Mahāmati, there is no disappearance of the original nature of the Vijnanas. but only the disappearance of the karma-aspect of the Viiñanas. If, however, their own original nature should disappear, the Alaya itself would disappear. With the disappearance of the Alaya, the distinction will cease to exist between the Buddhist doctrine and nihilism of some philosophers. According to the latter, when the comprehension of an external world ceases, the Vijnānas cease to continue, their uninterrupted activity since beginningless time will be broken. O Mahāmati, the philosophers may explain an uninterrupted evolution [of the Vijnanas] by a cause, and deny that the evolution (pragritti) is produced by the united action of the eye-sense with form and light. They assume another cause; the cause is Pradhāna (unevolved nature), Purusha (supreme spirit), Īsvara (supreme lord), Time. or Atom." (Pp. 38-39.)

Having thus roughly illustrated the relation of the Alayavijūāna to its evolute-vijūānas, the sutra after a while returns to the question of the actual stirring up of the sense-vijūānas which are uninterruptedly set in motion like waves in the ocean of Alaya, this being what constitutes the contents of the Dharmakāya ¹ The following quotation gives a glimpse into the working of the Vijūānas and the rise of the Manovijūāna though it is difficult to understand it clearly in details

"O Mahāmatı, the eye-sense (vijāāna) is awakened by What are the four? Being attached four causes (kārana) to the visible world, not knowing that it is mind-made (1), the tenaciously clinging to forms due to the habit-energy of unwarranted speculations and erroneous views from beginningless time (2), the self-nature of the Vijnana itself (3), and an eager desire for the multitudinousness of forms O Mahamatı, owing to these four and appearances (4) causes, the waves of the evolving Vijnanas are set in motion in the Alaya which flows like the waters in the midst of the O Mahamatı, as with the eye-sense, so [with the other senses, the perception of] the objective world takes place simultaneously and regularly [1e, constantly] in all the sense-organs, atoms, and pores, it is like the mirror reflecting ımages(vimba), and, O Mahāmati, like the wind-tossed ocean, the ocean of mind is disturbed by the wind of objectivity (vishaya) and the [Vijnana-]waves rage without ceasing (avyucchana) The cause and the manifestation of its action are not separated the one from the other, and on account of the karma-aspect of the Vijnana being closely united with the original-aspect, the self-nature of form [or an objective world, rupasvabkāva] is not accurately ascertained, and, 0 Mahāmatı, thus evolves the system of the five Vijnānas When together, O Mahamati, with these five Vijnanas, the objective world is regarded as the reason of the differentia-

¹ Pp. 43–44 udadhi-tarangālayavijāanagocaram tathāgatānugitam dharmakāyam prabhāshasva

tion (pariccheda) and appearances are definitely prescribed, we have the Manovijāna. Caused by this is the birth of the body [or system of the Vijñānas, pañcavijñānakāya]. They do not, however, reflect thus: 'we, mutually dependent, come to get attached to the visible world which grows out of one's own mind (svacittadriśya) and is discriminated by it.' They [1 e, the Vijñānas and Manovijñāna] rise simultaneously, mutually conditioning, and not broken up, but each taking in its own field of representations (vijñaptivishaya)

"The way the Alavavijūāna works in our system of Vijnānas is extremely subtle, and it is the privilege of the highly-trained mind of the Bodhisattva only that can fully grasp the inner significance of the Alaya.] Those who train themselves in tranquillisation are not always conscious of the subtlety of the working of their habit-energy. and they imagine that they enter into a perfect state of tranquillisation by annihilating all the Vijnanas But the fact 18, they have not annihilated the Vijnanas though they may be in a state of tranquillisation, for their seeds of habitenergy are not fully destroyed; what they have destroyed is simply the [habit of] grasping and discriminating the objective world of particulars So subtle indeed, O Mahamati, is the working of the Alayavijñāna that only the Tathagatas and those Bodhısattvas who are already advancing through the stages of Bodhisattvahood can penetrate into it, it is beyond the powers of the Samādhi and Prajñā acquired by Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers."1

The Functions of the Eight Vijnanas

From the functional point of view, there are eight Vijūānas. Ālaya, Manas, Manovijūāna, and the five sensevijūānas; but they may be grouped under two headings: Khyāti-vijūānas and Vastu-prativikalpa-vijūāna. Khyāti, from khya, means "to perceive," "to manifest," and this function of the Vijnana is to perceive or to reflect things that appear before it just as the mirror reflects all forms before it. This is the function of the Alaya. It looks into itself where all the memory (vāsanā) of the beginningless past is preserved in a way beyond consciousness (acmiya) and ready for further evolution (parinama); but it has no active energy in itself, it never acts. it simply perceives. it 18 in this sense exactly like a mirror; it is again like the ocean, perfectly smooth with no waves disturbing its tranquillity, and it is pure and undefiled, which means that it is free from the dualism of subject and object. For it is the pure act of perceiving, with no differentiation yet of the knowing one and the known The waves, however, will be seen ruffling the surface of the ocean of Alayavijñana when the principle of individuation known as Vishaya (境界) blows over it like the wind. The waves thus started are this world of particulars where the intellect discriminates, the affection chings, and passions and desires struggle for existence and supremacy

¹ Pp 44-45.
1 現獎 (hsion-shih) and 分別事議 (fon-preh-shih-shih).

This particularising agency sits within the system of Vijāānas and is known as Manas, in fact it is when Manas begins to operate that a system of the Vijāānas mamfests itself They are thus called "object-discriminating-vijāāna" (vastu-prativikalpa-vijāāna) The function of Manas is essentially to reflect upon the Ālaya and to create and to discriminate subject and object from the pure oneness of the Ālaya The memory accumulated (cīyate) in the latter is now divided (vicīyate) into dualities of all forms and all kinds This is compared to the manifoldness of waves that stir up the ocean of the Ālaya. Manas is an evil spirit in one sense and a good one in another, for discrimination in itself is not evil, is not necessarily always false judgment (abhūta-parikalpa) or wrong reasoning (prapaāca-daushthulya) But it grows to be the source of great calamity when it creates desires based upon its wrong judgments, such as when it believes in the reality of an ego-substance and becomes attached to it as the ultimate truth. For Manas is not only a discriminating intelligence, but a willing agency, and consequently an actor.

¹ P. 37

In these activities Manas is always found in company with Manovijnana In fact, it may be more proper to say that Manas and Manovijnana conjointly working produce the world of particulars, and when reference is made to Vastu-prativikalpa-vijnäna it includes both Manas and Manovijūāna The function of Manovijūāna is by hypothesis to reflect on Manas, as the eye-vijnana reflects on the world of forms and the ear-viinana on that of sounds: but in fact as soon as Manas evolves the dualism of subject and object out of the absolute unity of the Alaya, Manovijnana and indeed all the other Vijnanas begin to operate 1 It is like a complicated machine now, the whole system of the Vijnānas, each singly and also conjointly with others, is set When the system is thus in full swing, we cannot distinguish one Vijñāna from another, they so intimately interact, and the mirroring Alaya is not distinguishable from the discriminating Manas and from the other Vinanas, reflecting, reasoning, desiring, and acting The Khyāti and the Vastu-prativikalpa have now no differentiating marks (abhunnalakshana),2 they re-act upon each other, the one acting in turn as the cause to the other (anyonyahetuka)

In the beginning there was the memory amassed in the Alaya since the beginningless past as a latent cause, in which the whole universe of individual objects lies with its eyes closed; here enters Manas with its discriminating intelligence, and subject is distinguished from object; Manovijna reflects on the duality, and from it issues a whole train of judgments with their consequent prejudices and attachments, while the five other Vijnanas force them to become more and more complicated not only intellectually but affectively and conatively ¹ All the results of these activities in turn perfume the Ālaya, stimulating the old memory to wake while the new one finds its affinities among the old — In the meantime, however, the Ālaya itself remains unmoved retaining its identity

¹ P 44.

^{1.} P. 37, 1 18; p 44, 1 18

The following extracts from the Lankāvatāra elucidate for us the relation between the Ālaya and the other Vijnānas and also that between Manovijnāna, including Manas, and the remaining part of the Vijnāna system

When the Buddha said that Buddhist Nirvana consisted in turning away from the wrongfully discriminating Manovijnāna, Mahāmati asked, "O Blessed One, dost thou not establish eight Vijūānas?" Being assured of this, Mahāmati proceeded. "If this be the case, why dost thou not speak of one's turning away from the seven Vijnanas instead of Manovijñāna?" The Buddha answered to the following effect "With Manovijñāna as cause (hetu) and support (ālambana), there takes place the evolution of the seven Vijfianas Further, O Mahāmatı, when Manovijūāna discerns and clings to an external world of particulars, all kinds of habit-energy (vāsanā) are generated therefrom, and by them the Alays is nurtured Together with the thought of 'me and mine,' taking hold of it and clinging to it, and reflecting upon it, Manas thereby takes shape and is evolved In substance (śarīra) [however, Manas and Manovijñāna] are not different the one from the other, they depend upon the Alaya as cause and support And when an external world is tenaciously held as real which is no other than the presentation of one's own mind, the mentation-system (citta-kalāpa), mutually related, is evolved in its totality. Like the ocean waves, O Mahāmatı, [the Vijñānas] set in motion by the wind of an external world which is the manifestation of one's own mind, rise and cease Therefore, O Mahāmati, the seven Vijnānas cease with the cessation of Manovijfiana Thus it is said

¹ P. 235

"My Nirvana has nothing to do with Substance (bhāva), nor with Action (kriyā), nor with Appearance (lakshana). With the cessation of the Vijāāna which is caused by discrimination, there is my cessation [i.e., Nirvana].

"Depending upon it as cause and support, the whole system of mentation finds its refuge here, the Vijñāna supplies cause to the mind (citta) and is its dependant.

"As when the great flood runs its course there are no more waves, so with the extinction [of Manovijnana] all the V_{11} nanas cease to rise "2"

The above shows the importance of the Manovijñāna in the body of Vijñānas including the Ālaya; let us now proceed to see what rôle the Ālaya, besides supplying material to the activity of the Manovijñāna, plays, or rather how it stands by itself especially in connection with the idea of the Tathāgata-garbha. The following will be of great help to our understanding the significance of the Ālaya, which is needed in the bringing about of an inner experience known as Pratyātmajñānādhigama

"O Mahāmatı, the Tathāgata-garbha contains in itself causes alike good and not-good, and from which are generated all paths of existence. It is like an actor playing different characters without harbouring any thought of 'me and mine.' From not comprehending this, there arises the union and interaction of three causes producing results. The philosophers not understanding this become attached to the fixed idea of a creator. Infused with the habit-energy of various kinds of speculations and errors which have been carried on since beginningless time, the name of Ālayavijnāna obtains, [as ālaya means all-conserving]. It is in company with the seven Vijnānas which are generated in the dwelling-house of ignorance. The body [of the Vijnānas] is stirred uninterruptedly and all the time like the waves of the great ocean,

¹ These are the views held by the non-Buddhist philosophers of the time.

³ Pp. 126-127.

but [the Alaya itself] is free from the fault of impermanence and devoid of the thought of ego and is in its ultimate substance perfectly immaculate As to the other seven Viinanas beginning with Manas and Manovijnana, they originate and come to an end and are characterised by momentarmess. This is due to our erroneously discriminating things that are not, they are intimately related to and dependent upon an external world of forms and images, tenaciously attached to names and appearances, they fail to comprehend that forms and appearances are manifestations of the mind, they do not realise what is pain and what pleasure, they are no producers of emancipation; firmly standing on names and appearances [as realities], they are begotten of the desire to have (raga) and further beget the same desire, [the desire and the Viinanas are] thus mutually conditioning. When what are known as the perceiving senses are destroyed and disappear, others [Vijfiānas], immediately following this, cease to function There is [still] a self-discriminating knowledge, and seeing that no pain, no pleasure is felt, that there follows the extinction of thought and sensation, and the attainment of mental tranquillity and the four Dhyanas, together with skilfulness in [the understanding of] truth and emancipation, the devotees (yogm) think that they have [really] attained emancipation But as long as the Alaya-vijñāna known by the name of Tathāgata-garbha is not set in motion and differently oriented, the cessation of the seven evolving Vijnanas will never take place. Why? Because, depending on the Alaya as cause, the Vijnanas are evolved; because this is not within the reach of all Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, philosophers, and yoga-devotees; because [while] they understand that there is no ego-substance in a person, they are [still] attached to the ideas of individuality and generality as really existing in the Skandhas, Dhätus, and Ayatanas The Tathagata-garbha is awakened and grows quiescent as one perceives what is meant by the five Dharmas, [three] Syabhāvas, and the non-existence of ego-substance in particular objects, and when there takes place the revulsion [in the Alaya] by gradually ascending the steps [of perfection, ie, Daśabhūmikā], a man will never be led astray by the methods and views held by the philosophers.....

"The Tathāgata-garbha is found united with the seven Vijnānas from attachment duality sets in, from knowledge (parijāna) it disappears.

"The mind is to be regarded as mirror-like, perfumed by speculation [-habit] since the beginningless [past] when things are truly (yathābhūtam) observed, they are not as they appear.

"As the ignorant see the finger-tip and not the moon, so those who are addicted to letters understand not the thatness (tattvam) of the things I teach

"The mind (cstta) dances like the dancer, Manas resembles the jester [or companion actor], the Vijnana, in company with the five, imagines the visible [world] as a stage."

The Function of Manas

The question may rise now. What is the significance of Manas? Cannot the other Vijnanas do without this one acting, as it were, between the Alaya and the other particularısıng sıx Vıjñānas? This seems to be quite a natural question to ask, seeing that the Manoviñana can directly deal with the Alava without the interference of Manas. According to my way of interpreting the Lankavatara. which may not be correct, the Alaya is a sort of universal consciousness, and Manas individual empirical consciousness. In the Alaya everything is stored, good and bad, in a state of quiescence and potentiality, but no discrimination, which latter, however, appears with the initiation of Manas. Manas is the active source of all the mental activities we ordinarily experience in this world of particulars. The possibility of consciousness lies in its dualistic nature, for without that which grasps (grāhaka) and that which is grasped (grāhya),

¹ Pp. 220-224.

there will be no conscious life. The duality of subject and object is fundamental, but this dualism is impossible without assuming behind it something which is not dual. Therefore, at the back of the six Vijounas there must be Manas, the principle of individuation, and also the Alaya, which goes even beyond the foundation of consciousness. When we admit that the six Vijaanas are fundamentally conditional by the principal of individuation, we admit the existence of Manas And when Manas is admitted, we inevitably go on to the Alaya which allows itself to be reflected by Manas as its condition and yet at the same time transcends it because the Alaya is not an individual object of experience but universal in its nature. And it is owing to this universal nature of the Alaya that all the individual Manas are capable of reflecting one and the same universe and of engaging in discussion. The Alaya is thus most appropriately compared to the ocean

This ocean of the Ālaya is disturbed by the wind of the particularising principle, psychologically known as Manas and epistemologically as Vishaya. While Manas is conceptually separable from the other six Vijūānas, it is practically involved in them. In our psychological life itself the whole Vijūāna system is engaged and we cannot very well talk individually of its components. So the Lankāvatāra is always careful to guard us from getting confused about this point. the Ālaya and the Vijūānas are different and yet not-different, i.e., one. Without the Ālaya, the cause disappears and the whole mental apparatus collapses, and when that which makes the cause operative ceases to react, the cause itself ceases to act though this does not mean its disappearance or destruction

The Manas is the discriminating agency, but as this is possible only in the Alaya, on which Manas with all its retinue of Vijnānas is dependent, the Manas and the Alaya are in the closest possible relationship. For this reason, the Alaya is dependent upon Manas for consciousness of itself and its unity. On the other hand, the six Vijnānas cannot and reports gathered at Manovijūāna are here classified according to the categories of "me and not-me"—this being the function of Manovijūāna given by Manas. The authority of Manas thus increased by its faithful servant and backed inwardly by the presence of the Ālaya, gains strength in the conviction that there is an ego on the one hand and an objective world in all its reality on the other hand. From the disciplinary point of view the most refractory agent is Manas supported by Manovijūāna. When this pair, especially Manovijūāna, is put back to its proper function and made to see things in their true bearings inwardly as well as outwardly, the Vijūāna-system ceases to be an evil-creating machine and becomes the storage of things good and pure (Luśalānāsravāh).

Let us conclude this paragraph with a quotation on the Buddhist doctrine of momentariness (kshanikam) 1

"There are eight Vijūānas (1) The Tathagata-garbha, known under the name of Alayavıjñuna, (2) Manas, (3) Manovijūāna, and the five sense-vijūānas grouped together as is pointed out by the philosophers. This system of the five sense-vijnanas is in union with Manovijnana and this mutuality makes the system distinguish between what is good and what is not good, etc, and further being bound up together so closely and continuously, the Vijnana-system evolves as one solid undivided body. The evolution thus goes on, but when the nature of a visible world is not understood as Mind, there is a constant rise and disappearance of the Vijnanas, Manovijnana in union with the five sense-vijnānas grasps forms and appearances in their multitudinous aspect; and there is not a moment's cessation of activity. This I call the momentary character [of the Vijnanas]. There is this momentariness again, O Mahāmati, when the Tathagata-garbha known under the name of the Alayavijñāna, in union with Manas, is together with the memories of the evolute-vijnanas If, on the other hand, it is together with those free from [evil] outflowings, there is no momentariness. This is found hard to understand for the ignorant who are addicted to the doctrine of momentariness. As they do not understand what is meant by the momentariness and the not-momentariness of all things, they cherish a nihilistic view of existence, and are apt to regard things (dharma) belonging to the category of uncreates (asańskrita) as subject to destruction

¹ Po 235-236

"O Mahāmati, the body of the five sense-vijūānas is exempt from transmigration, is not susceptible to pleasure and pain, and has nothing to do with the attainment of Nirvana. It is the Tathāgata-garbha, O Mahāmati, that is affected by pleasure and pain, becomes the cause [of Nirvana], is subject to evolution and disappearance, and becomes stupefied by the four kinds of habit-energy (vāsanā). The ignorant do not understand this because they are infected by discrimination which is based on the view of momentariness.

"Again, O Mahāmati, gold, diamond, and the Buddha's sarīra [bony relics] equally pass through ages of existence and show the unique character of indestructibility. If the wise who have attained enlightenment have the nature of momentarmess they must be said to be lacking in wisdom. Gold and diamond, however long they may be in existence, remain the same; they show no sign of increase or decrease How can the ignorant be expected to understand my esoteric doctrine, who, discriminating in all things inner and outer, cherish the thought of momentariness?"

These long passages, occasionally deeply involved in obscurity, have been quoted partly to describe the relation between the various Vijñānas as a system, and partly, also, to present the Mahayana Buddhist view of momentarism as regards the Tathāgata-garbha or Ālaya-vijñāna The gāthās at the end of this chapter on "Kshankam" are to be replaced immediately after the above quotation and not after the account of the six virtues of perfection (pāramitā) as they stand now in the original texts, Sanskrit and Chinese.

¥

The Awakening of Prazna

How do we now get Prajnil awakened in order to see into the true state of things, yathābhūtam? Where does this Prajna come, and how do we attain self-realisation by directly experiencing the truth? And what is the truth? The sutra refers constantly to Prapanca. Parikalpa, Vikalpa,³ Abhiniveśa,⁴ Bhränti,⁵ Daushthulya,⁶ Väsanä,⁷ etc, which are tossing up the roaring waves over the Alaya-ocean, but when does Pratyātmāryajñāna get its start so that the stormy sea will grow calm and the world be perceived without discrimination or disturbance of any kind? Says the "The Bodhisattva who aims to be great in his spiritual discipline is required to be perfect in the following four (1) He must have a penetrating comprehention (vibhavana) as regards the nature of the manifestation of Mind, (2) He must be free (vivariana) from such notions as birth, abiding, and destruction; (3) He must observe (upalakshana) that external objects do not exist, and (4) He must earnestly desire (abhilashana) a state of realisation by directly seeing into the immost self "8 How can this be achieved?

If it were due to the appearance of the principle of particularisation or discrimination (vikalpa) that the Alaya ceases to be the seat of Tathagatahood, and if without this principle no sentient beings could ever come to the perception of the Alaya even in its disturbed, distorted, and altogether false reflections, it must be again this principle that will set us aright in the position that we may have a correct view of Alaya. In other words, if it were the work of Manas and Manovijūāna that an external world came to be recognised as external, it must be their work again, properly executed this time, that we come to look at the world as having evolved out of our own being. Formerly, the Vijūāna was wrongly attached to the principle of particularisation and thus to the undesirable part of the Väsanä, memory, in the Alava, There must be a turning of the waves, the course of Manas and Manovināna must be altered towards another direction than that which has been pursued hitherto. If we all thought of the Alava as external and subject to changes, we must now retrace our steps and look within ourselves and see if there is anything that transcends the principle of particularisation To transcend this principle, that is, for Manas and Manovijnana to transcend themselves, means the obliteration of themselves, their disappearance from the field of operation, the transcending of the dualism of grahya and grāhaka, of sat and asat, one and many, particularity and generality. When this is accomplished, where do we find ourselves? Where is the ultimate abiding place for us? This is the abode of Tathagatahood, and belongs to the realm of Alayavijñāna to be known as Tathāgata-garbha, and realisable only through immediate perception (pratyaksha).1 For this no more belongs to the sphere of logic and analysis, but is an experience attained immediately within oneself (pratyātmagatigocara). A knowledge that is not of particularisation and discrimination, must be one of direct experience in which the Alaya reveals itself in its original purity and not in its distorted and defiled forms as it ordinarily does to the Vijñānas

¹ 戴黛. 2 姿計. 3 分別. 4 執着 5 法感 6 過惡 7 薫智 8 Pp 79-80

When we thus come to have an immediate knowledge of transcendental nature, the Vijñāna system will cease to be treated psychologically. We have now to return to the chapter preceding this, where the so-called logical aspect of the inner experience is treated The awakening of Prajñā which is dynamic rather than non-discriminative knowledge (nirvikalpajñāna) beyond the realm of mentation (acintya or acitta), is a practical question in the Lañkāvatāra, and this will be treated in what is to follow.

¹ P 222; pratyaksha stands against vitarka, vikalpa, prapañca, etc.; see also p 41.

PART III

LIFE AND WORKS OF A BODHISATTYA

Self-discipline and Adhishthana

The logical and psychological equipment must be followed up by practical discipline without which the Bodhisattva could not be more than an idealistic philosopher "As all the sacred doctrines leave no room for option [and doubt as to the import of self-discipline let the Bodhisattva retire into a quiet and solitary place and reflect within himself by means of the intelligence (buddhi) which lies in his inmost mind, not to be led by anybody else. Then he will be able to free himself from views based upon discrimination and by degrees advance towards the state of Tathagatahood '11 This not depending upon another (aparapraneya) is emphasised not only in Mahayana literature but in the Agamas or Nikāvas, for Buddhism is emphatically the doctrine of enlightenment which is to be realised within oneself So, it is urged for the Bodhisattva who wishes to penetrate behind the screen of contrasts and dialectics that he should rid himself of all the hindrances (nivarana) that may arise from noisy confusion, from heaviness of mind, and from sleepmess, and also that he should assiduously engage in disciplining himself throughout the night, not at all mindful of the philosophies of other schools, including the Hinavanist 2

Can the Bodhisattva, however, reach his goal by his own effort and without any outside assistance? Is there really no "other power" that will come to his help? Here we have

¹ P 133, see also p 155, where the distinction between words and meaning is discussed

² Pp 49, 97-98

When the Bodhisattva-Mahäsattva is urged to exercise his own intelligence and not to be dependent upon another, this means that the truth of enlightenment must develop from within oneself and intuitively grasped, which being the ultimate object of the Dhyāna discipline recommended in the Lankdvatāra one of the special features of Mahayana Buddhısın distinguishing itself from the Hinayana The Lankavatara calls it the "Adhishthana of all the Buddhas which assues from their Pranidhāna." Without this Adhishthāna on the part of the Buddha, the Bodhisattva with all his assiduity and penetrating insight may be incapable of realising the highest truth in himself and may not finally be taken up among the community of the Buddhas of the past, present, and future. Adhishthana (adhi + stha) means "basis." "position," "power," etc, translated into Chinese by 加持力 (chia-chihb), "the power that is added to and sustaining" It is the power emanating from the will of the Buddha whose loving heart embraces the whole universe, and is added to that of a Bodhisattva to sustain him, to encourage him, and finally to carry him over to a state of self-realisation. Not only in the present sutra but in other Mahayana sutras we frequently come across the sentence. "Through the Anubhava or Prabhava [that is, power] of the Buddha, a Bodhisattva rose from his seat and asked thus of the Buddha, or preached thus" This is a form of authorisation, but in the case of Adhıshthana, it is more than that, for here the Buddha's power sustains the Bodhisattva throughout his long laborious career of discipleship Read the following.2

"And again, O Mahāmati, sustained in two ways by the power (adhishthāna) of the Buddhas, the Bodhisattva falls down at their feet and asks them to settle controversial points for him. What are the two ways? The one is the power by which the Bodhisattva is made to attain states of mental tranquillisation, and the other is that by which the Buddha personally appears before the Bodhisattva and anomts him with his own hands.

"It is thus due to the power of the Buddha that the Bodhisattva at the first stage attains the Samādhi known as the Light of the Mahāyāna, and that having attained this Samādhi the Bodhisattva finds himself now blessed by the personal presence of all the Buddhas from the ten quarters who will with their own body and speech accumulate their power upon him. It is like the case of the Bodhisattva Vajragarbha and others who are furnished with all these meritorious attributes

² Pp 49 f. ² Pp. 100 ff.

"O Mahāmatı, ın this wise the Bodhisattva at the first stage is sustained by the power of the Buddhas in his attainment of the states of tranquillisation. In virtue of a stock of merit accumulated for hundreds of thousands of kalpas, he will in succession ascend the stages, and qualifying himself with the virtues of perfect control, reach the stage of Bodhisattvahood called Dharmamegha (Cloud of the Law) Seating himself on a throne in the Palace of the Great Lotus, he is surrounded by Bodhisattvas like himself and wears a tiara adorned and embellished with all kinds of lewels The Buddhas will now come from all the ten quarters of the universe, shining like the brilliant full-moon with yellowish. golden, champaka-like rays, and with their lotus-like hands amoint the forehead of the Bodhisattva seated on the throne in the lotus valace He is like the crown-prince of a great sovereign, who, being thus anointed by the Buddhas personally with their own hands, assumes full This Bodhisattva and such others are said to be sustained, thus hand-anointed by the power of the Bud-These are the two ways in which the Bodhisattva is sustained by the power of the Buddha. and when he is thus sustained he will see all the Buddhas face to face In no other way are the Tathagatas, Arhats, the Fully-enlightened Ones to be seen

"And again, O Mahāmati, whatever the Bodhisattva accomplishes in the way of Samādhi, psychic attainments, or preaching, is thus done by being sustained in two ways by the power of the Buddhas If the Bodhisattva could at all preach intelligently without being sustained by the power of the Buddhas, the ignorant would also preach intelligently Why? It all depends upon whether or not one is sustained by the Buddhas' power. If it is sustained by the entrance of the Tathagata into it, [the whole universe with its] grasses, shrubs, trees, and even mountains, and also [with its] musical instruments of all kinds, utensils, towns, dwellings, palaces, and seats,—all will make music. How much more conscious beings! The deaf, blind, and mute will be emancipated from their defects. Such is the power of the Tathagata, so distinctive, and so full of great virtues.

"Mahāmati asked, Why do the Tathagatas sustain the Bodhisattva by their power when he abides in the state of tranquillisation as well as when he is at the superior stage? Said the Blessed One. It is to keep him away from the evil one and from evil passions, it is to let him not fall into the Dhyāna and stage of the Śrāvakas, but to make him attain to the self-realisation of the Tathagata-stage and grow in the virtues already acquired by him—For this reason, the Bodhisattva is sustained by the power of all the Tathagatas—O Mahāmati, if he is not thus sustained he may fall into the way of thinking as cherished by bad philosophers, Śrāvakas, and the Evil One, and will not be enlightened in the Supreme Enlightenment—For this reason, the Bodhisattva is favoured by the Tathagatas who are Arhats and Fully-enlightened Ones."

The Purification (visuddhi) of the heart

The conception of Pranidhana which is usually translated in Chinese as Ex (shih-yuan) or simply x (yuan), meaning "vow" or "prayer" is peculiar to the Mahayana A Bodhisattva as a rule makes a number of vows before he begins his career, for his desire to attain the final stage of Bodhisattvahood is not only for his own benefit but for all the worlds visible and invisible. The forty-eight vows of Dharmākara are one of such examples, who became Amitābha Buddha the world-saviour when his vows were all fulfilled. The Bodhisattva's universal vow or prayer or earnest desire

į

i

¹ Pp 100-103, abstract; see also p. 212 f.

is, therefore, that all his fellow-beings, inclusive of nonsentient beings, sooner or later, attain to the supreme enlightenment of the Buddha To accomplish this end, he begins with the preparation of the ground which consists in "maturing" the minds and hearts of all sentient beings. supported by the adhishthana of all the Buddhas He who is literally the embodiment of the yow to benefit others is thus ever bent on awakening them in enlightenment Hence m the Pranaparameta and other sutras the awakening of the thought of enlightenment (bodhicittotvāda) is constantly spoken of as the first step towards gaining access to the truth of Tathagatahood But the Lankavatara does not tell us so much about this awakening, in fact I think there is no reference to this idea in the sutra. When the Anuttarasamyak-sambodhi is mentioned, it refers to its attainment and not to the awakening of thought towards it Whatever this may be, there is a paragraph in the Lankovatara which is concerned with the purification by the Buddha of the hearts or minds of sentient begins from the effects of defilement that has been going on in them since the beginningless past due to their wrong discrimination regarding the signification of the objective world This process of purification to be carried on by the Buddha may be considered to correspond to the awakening of the thought of enlightenment in the Praniāpāramitā sutras.

Mahāmati now raises a question as to the time needed for the purification by saying. "Is the cleansing which is effected by the Buddha instantaneous or by degrees—the cleansing of all beings from the outflowings of the mind whereby they cling to the reality of an objective world?" To this the Buddha gives an answer as is quoted helow, according to which his cleansing or purification takes effect sometimes instantaneously, sometimes by degrees. This variation evidently comes from the workings of the individual habit-energy (vāsanā). The Buddha's statement here, however, seems to lack the word "sometimes" and I think we have to supply it in order to make the sense of the whole context not too glaringly contradictory. Indeed, the reading of the Lankāvatāra is not altogether an easy task as was already remarked elsewhere, and in many cases varied interpretations are possible

"Mahāmati asked," when the mind is cleansed by the Buddha of its own outflowings, it is done all at once or by degrees? Answered the Buddha "The cleansing is done by degrees, not all at once It is like the ripening of the āmra fruit which takes place gradually and not at once It is again like the potter's making pots, the work is done gradually and not at once The Tathagata's cleansing of all beings of their minds from which external manifestations flow, is carried out by degrees and not all at once. It is again like the shooting of grass, shrub, herb, or a thicket on

Mainly done after the T'ang version. Cf. pp. 55-56, of Nanjö Svacittadrisyadhard, for which the T'ang has 自心現故, means "that which perpetually flows out of one's own mind and is perceived as something external to oneself." This combination occurs in these passages only. Is "dhārā" in any way related to the idea of Asrāva (cozing or flowing-out) ? "That which flows" in the mind owing to our attachment to an external world must be thoroughly purified as it stams the entire fabric of our spiritual life. The process needed by the Buddha for the cleansing is sometimes gradual and sometimes abrupt. But the notion of revulsion or up-turning (parairitts) leads us to magine the process to be abrupt rather than gradual, while in our actual experience of life what the psychologist calls conversion takes place in either way, gradual or abrupt The fact may be ascribed to the maste construction of the mind, or, to use Buddhist terminology, to the working of individual karma. Still, one may say, when the process of purification is so gradual and quiet that the man in question never becomes conscious of the changes taking place in his spiritual life, would be ever experience what is termed in the Lankavatara as revulsion? Psychologically this is a phenomenon suddenly happening in the consciousness When a man was walking in a certain direction all the time, his steps are all of a sudden made to turn back; he faces now the North instead of the South This abrupt shift of the vista is a revolution, a revulsion; he is sure to be strongly conscious of the transformation. The unconscious process that preceded it may have been gradual, but as far as his conscious mind is concerned, the revulsion has taken place instantaneously. This is however a mooted question in the psychology of religion.

earth, it is gradual and not at once, so does the Tathagata cleanse all beings of their mental outflows. It is again like one's learning the arts of dancing, singing, writing, playing the lute, etc., it is mastered by degrees and not all at once, so does the Tathagata his purifying work

"[But sometimes the cleansing is done at once and not by degrees] as in the case of the mirror's reflecting all forms simultaneously and without discrimination In a sımılar way, the Tathagata cleanses the minds of all beings from their outflowing manifestations, making them at once pure and free from discrimination and leading them to a state of Again, as the sun or the moon illumines all no-images forms and appearances at once with its beams of light, so does the Tathagata reveal at once the spiritual state of Buddhahood which is the object of intuitive knowledge (acıntyajñāna) by freeing all beings of their self-imagined manifestations, errors, and habit-energy (vāsaņā) as the Alaya-vijfilna reveals simultaneously an external world of individual objects as manifestations of the individual mind, so that Nishyanda-Buddha,1 at once maturing all beings, enables them to discipline themselves as religious devotees at their abodes in the celestial palace of Akanishtha 2 Again, as the Dharmata-Buddha shines instantly with the light of the Nishyanda-Buddha and the Nirmana-Buddha, so does the unner realisation of the ultimate truth shine forth all at once superseding the wrong views based upon ideas of being and not-being "

The Will-body (manomayakaya)

No definite statement of the Triple Body dogma is found in the Lankavatara, but all the component ideas seem to be Dharmatā-Buddha, Nishpresent as is recognisable here yanda-Buddha, and Nırmāna-Buddha, which apparently cor-

¹ For the explanation of this, see supra (pp 142 ff)

See also gathas 38, 774, in the "Sagathakam", and pp 28, 83, 51, 215, etc

respond to the later trinity of Dharma-kāya, Sambhoga-kāya, and Nırmāna-kāya. It would be interesting to discuss here the development of the dogma1 if the author were not going to restrict himself in this chapter to such topics in the Lankāvatāra as are more or less directly connected with the absolute idealism developed in the sutra and with the intuitive knowledge of the truth which is its principal themethese being the foundation of Zen Buddhism however, to touch upon the idea of Nirmana-Buddha as it is closely related to that of Pranidhana, the Bodhisattva's vow. Being thoroughly idealistic, whatever is most vehemently desired by the Buddha or Bodhisattva whose interest extends over the whole field of beings, must take effect in one way or another in this world even of our ordinary life. To have, however, a wish realised successfully, one may have frequently to exceed the limitations of this physical body, which is tied to space-time relations. A body not so limited will be needed in this case,—a body that can be manifested anywhere and at any time as is wished. Buddha of Bodhisattva has this body known as Manomayakāya, which means "mind-made body," or simply "willbody."

The definition of Manomayakāya (意生身 or 意茂身), according to the Lankāvatāra, is this "By manomaya ['as willed'] is meant the power to move about as speedily and unobstructedly as is willed. Like the mind that moves unobstructedly over mountains, walls, rivers, trees, and other objects, even beyond many hundreds of thousands of yojanas, by merely thinking of objects seen and perceived previously, with its own thought continuously and uninterruptedly working regardless of the limitations of the body; so when the Manomayakāya is obtained in the realisation of the Samādhiknown as Māyopama [Māyā-like], one acquires the ten Powers (bala), the tenfold Self-mastery (vasīta), and the six Psychic Faculties (abhijāā), is adorned with the distinguishing marks, and born in the family of Holy Path, and, thinking of the objects of his original vow which is to bring all beings to full maturity, moves about among them as unobstructedly as the mind moves on "1"

The author discusses the dogma of the Triple Body later in this book as far as the Lankavatara can shed light on the subject.

The three kinds of Manomavakāya ("will-body") are distinguished in the Lankavatara somewhat foreshadowing the later systematisation of the Triple Body dogma the three are (1) the will-body attainable in the bliss of Samādhi,2 (2) the will-body born of the knowledge of the selfnature of the Dharma,2 and (3) the will-body whose deeds are not calculative, being born among the order of the holy ones.2 The first kind is the product of a perfect mental control which takes place as the Bodhisattva ascends through the third, the fourth, and the fifth stage of spiritual discipline, and realises that the mind in its true nature is above its evolved Vijnanas, and, seeing into the phenomenality of objects, is tranquil like the ocean undisturbed by waves The second form comes from a deep penetration into the truth of all things, which is enjoyed by the Bodhisattva above the eighth stage, for as he perceives that all things are mere appearances like māyā and non-entities, there takes place a revulsion in the recesses of his consciousness, and he enters into the Samādhı called Māyopama and then into other He is now adorned with flowers, with various attributes such as the tenfold Self-mastery and the six Psychic Faculties, etc., moves as quickly as thought itself, and the body attained now is like the lunar reflection in water or an image in a mirror, or a vision in a dream; it is not made of the four elements and yet resembles one so made, it is furnished with all the parts of the material body, he will now enter into all the Buddha-lands, their circles and as-

Cf p 81
 (1) samādhr-sulha-samāpattr-manomayalāya (三味樂正受賞生美), (2) dharma-svabhāvā-'vabhoda-m (臺接身性憲生身), (3) nilāya-sahajā-'samslāra-kriyā-m (禮類俱生經所作徵生身) T'ang sembles. As he has thus perfectly penetrated into the nature of the Dharma, he has the second form of the will-body. The third will-body comes from deeply experiencing the bliss of the inner realisation enjoyed by all the Buddhas."

Of the three kinds of Manomayakaya, the second is the most important, and when the Body is mentioned without qualifications, it generally means this, as we have for instance on pp 125-126 and pp. 80-81 We quote the statement on pages 80-81. "How does a Bodhisattva-Mahasattva keep himself above the view [that upholds the reality of birth, abiding, and disappearance? Let him regard all things as dreams or maya-created forms; they never have been born because self, others, and all of them are non-When things are viewed in conformity with the doctrine of "Mind-only," when external objects are seen as having no real existence, the Vijnanas do not revolve; when the idea of causal accumulation is done away with, the triple world is seen originating from wrong discrimination; when thus all things, external and internal, are viewed as having no self-substance and unattainable [i.e., unreal], a Bodhisattva can keep himself away from the idea of birth; he will acquire what is known as resignation to the idea that all things are unborn, as they have the self-nature of māyā, etc. Such Bodhisattvas have now reached the eighth stage, they know the significance of Citta, Manas, and Manovijñāna, the five Dharmas, the three Svabhāvas, the twofold Naırātmya (egolessness), and have realised a revulsion in their inner being, and because of this they now have the will-body Thus, O Mahāmatı, it is that the Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva keeps himself above the view that upholds the reality of birth, abiding, and disappearance."

In this connection let me notice that the Lankāvatāra makes reference² to two kinds of death (cyuts) which takes place in the life of a Bodhisattva The first is the natural death happening to his physical body which is acquired as the result of his past karma committed through his evil passions and outflowings In Chinese this death is called 分段 (fên-tuan), meaning "graded." because the end of life variously comes to individuals The other is "inconceivabletransformation-death'' (acintua-parināma-cijuti, 不思路器 This happens to the subtile body of a Bodhisattva which he assumes as the consequence of his karma and intellectual hindrance which has not yet been thoroughly destroyed The life-limit of this super-material body is indefinite as it depends upon the original vows of the Bodhisattva If his compassionate heart makes him wish to live eternally among mortal beings in order to save the last one, he may live in this body until then. And again he may have it in any size he desires, and he able to perform wonderful deeds of all kinds, and also go through as many transformations as required He achieves this spiritual existence when he enters upon the path of Bodhisattvahood

¹ Pp 136-137, abstract.

Pp 140, 134, 307, etc.

It will be quite an interesting study to inquire into the historical facts which prompted Buddhist scholars to conceive the idea of a spiritual body which could be acquired as the outcome of one's moral training. There is no doubt that the Manomayakāya is the forerunner of the Nirmānakāya as one of the Triple Body, and that all these conceptions were needed by early Mahayanists to interpret the religious significance of the historical Śākyamuni side by side with the conception of Dharmakāya

The inner realisation (pratyātmādhīgama) referred to in the third Manomayakāya is the common property of all the Buddhas, and when a Bodhisattva attains this minght into his inmost being, he has thereby attained the passport into the spiritual community of all the Buddhas, past, present and future. If a critic insists that this subjectivity ought to be verified objectively, 1e, must have some objective ground on which the experience is to be set up, the Lankāva-tāra says that there is what is to be called Paurāṇasthiti-dharmatā,¹ something that has been in existence from the timeless past, or thingness that abides eternally in things, or an absolute reality that exists regardless of the appearance or non-appearance of the Buddhas. This reality exists in the world as gold exists concealed in the ore, for it is this that makes things abide, makes them arrange themselves in order and establish a realm among themselves, and constitutes their essence. It is eternally there. It is the suchness of things.²

Therefore, when the Bodhisattvas or Buddhas attain to realisation, the experience is not something altogether new to them. It is an old story, as it were. It is like walking in an old city which one happens to discover in the midst of the desert. The streets are smoothly paved as ever. One enters into it, and quietly enjoys a peaceful life. The Buddha did not create these things, they have been there from the beginning. The Dharma he has an insight into is something enduring (dharmasthivitā), a regulative principle (dharmanyāmatā), and suchness of things (tathatā), it is reality (bhūtatā), truth (satyatā). And it was for this reason that the Buddha declared that ever since his enlightenment night he had not uttered a word. This is indeed, according to the Lankāvatāra, the esoteric teaching (samdha) of Buddhism.

The conception of Paurāṇasthitidharmatā, or Pūrvadharmasthititā⁶ is the doctrine of universal Ālayavijāāna ontologically stated. The Pratyātmagati consists in realising this originally-abiding Dharma, which is variously described as Tathāgatagarbha, the Ālaya, suchness of things. It is beyond the signs of speech, analysis, and description, and in it all the Buddhas, Bodhisattvas, and sentient ^{*} 本住法性.

P. 143. 本住、法位、英如、贾性、法性

Pp. 143, 144, 194, 240; see also above. P. 144. P. 241.

٠.

beings are united, and have an ever-enduring community—Nirvana But the function of the Bodhisattva is not to stay forever in this happy society but to come into a world of particulars. His vows are to be fulfilled, and in this he is said truly to be a Bodhisattva.

The Bodhisativa and Social Life

The central theme of the Lankavatara has been explained as being the attainment of an insight into the inmost consciousness, and to attain this we have seen that the sutra approaches the subject in two ways, logical and psychological. But as Buddhism is a religion and as every religion has its practical and social side, without which it will lose its reason of existence, the Lankavatara also prepares the Bodhisattva for his mission as one of the members of a cooperative life In fact, this is what distinguishes the Mahayana from the Hinayana, for the latter's object of spiritual discipline does not extend beyond his own interest, however exalted it may be in itself,—the object being the attainment of Arhatship, a solitary saintly life This is all well as far as it goes, but as we are all living within a most complicately organised communal body, not excepting even a Buddha or a Bodhisattva. we have to think of this side The conception of a Bodhisattva was thus inevitable If he attained to a state of self-realisation which he finds so full of peace, bliss, and strength, his natural desire is to impart it to his fellow-beings Technically, when he has finished benefiting himself (ātmahitam),1 his next step is to go out into the world and benefit others (parahstam)2 In reality, he cannot do good for himself without letting others share in it. The sutra, therefore, now proceeds to tell the reader what is the practical, ie, social life of the Bodhısattva It may be said that the object of gaining an insight into the inner truth of things is really to qualify meself for social work.

¹ 貞和. 9 利益

Before proceeding, a question may be raised as to the value of doing anything for others inasmuch as, according to the doctrine of Svacitamātram or self-mind-only, or to that of Sarvadharmānām śūnyatā-anutpāda-advaya-niḥsvabhāva-lakshaṇam,¹ there is nothing or nobody in the world that can be the object of salvation, or upon whom any kind of benefit may be bestowed. From the absolutely idealistic point of view, we may even ask if life is at all worth living. Is it not really much ado about nothing that the Bodhisattva should try to save the world when the latter is no more than the illusion of his own mind? Is it not really like a monkey trying to take hold of the moon in water?

This is what is called by the Mahayanists as Uccheda-darsanam or nihlism which does not understand yathā-bhātam the truth of things. That the world is like a mirage, that it is thus empty, does not mean that it is unreal in the sense that it has no reality in any sense. But it means that its real nature cannot be understood by a mind that cannot rise above the dualism of "to be" (sat) and "not to be" (asat). Therefore, the Sung translation of the Lankāvatāra opens with this stanza recited by Mahāmati: (1) "The world transcends [the dualism of] birth and death, it is like the flower in air; the wise are free from [the ideas of] being and non-being, yet a great compassionate heart is awakened [in them]."

The last sentence: "Yet a great compassionate heart is awakened in them" is repeated in the first four verses. This is the most important passage not only in the philosophy of the Lankāvatāra but in the whole teaching of Mahayana Buddhism. Therefore says the Ashtasāhaśrikā-prajāā-pāramitā Sūtra.² "Sāriputra asked Subhūti, If as you say the Bodhisattva is unborn, how is it that he works hard and suffers much for the sake of all sentient beings? To this answers Subhūti: I do not wish the Bodhisattva to think that he is working hard and suffering much. If he does, he is no Bodhisattva Why? If he does cherish such thoughts. he cannot except to benefit sentient beings whose number exceeds calculation Rather let him rejoice over his doings, and, towards all sentient beings, feel like mother or father, son or daughter, and let him, feeling like this among men and women, walk in the path of Bodhisattva-Further than that, let him feel towards all beings as if they were himself, and think, 'If I am to be completely free from all woes, let them also be so in the same measure I cannot leave them to their fate I must save them from the innumerable pains they suffer, and even if I were cut This I would not cherish up to pieces many times over? any uncharitable feeling toward them is the way a Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva should feel toward all beings and there will be no thought of hardship with him

¹ P. 73, 一切法空, 無重, 無二, 無負性相. Mitra edition, pp. 25-26.

The doctrine of effortless or purposeless deeds (anabhogacaryā) is rooted in the possibility of awakening as is here stated a loving heart for all beings even though they have from the metaphysical point of view no self-substance (nshsvabhāva) and are therefore only relative in existential value That is to say, the world is only a temporal phenomenon, and whatever evils and sufferings we encounter they have no finality as far as they go, but the pitying heart that transcends the cold and severe contemplation of the reasoning philosopher has no inclination to ignore the reality of particularisation, it is determined to eradicate all the evils that are in the world and to save all the suffering ones in the sea of transmigration This compassionate heart has no ulterior motive except that it moves spontaneously and universally like the sun that shines on the righteous and on the unrighteous. This heart is called pure and undefiled because it is above the relativity of being and non-being, and yet it never ceases to function out of its over-flowing goodness.

The Sanskrit text of the Lankavatara that we have now, reads somewhat differently from what we have here. We have taken it from the Sung translation which agrees with the T'ang. The Wei reading is in accord with the Sanskrit. This fact has already been noticed before. It shows that there must have been at least two original texts of the Lankāvatāra already at the time of the Wei translation. And, moreover, there were some reasons for the T'ang translation to adopt the first reading instead of the second (or Wei). What I would now like to know is the reason for this deviation from the Wei. What was really the reason that made the T'ang adopt the Sung rather than the Wei? To say that the texts varied is not enough. According to Fa-tsang's commentary notes on the Lankavatara, the T'ang is the outcome of five Sanskrit texts and the two Chinese translations being carefully collated by the best scholars of the time under the Imperial auspices. The Tang is, therefore, the result of mature scholarship and authoritative revision. The result thus attained in the T'ang reading is naturally in full accordance with the spirit of Mahayana Buddhism, whereas the Wei and the present Sanskrit text do not bring out the inner sense of the Lankavatara so clearly and adequately. That the world appears like the ethereal flower, etc, is only when seen by the transcendental eye of wisdom (prajāā) and not when felt by the compassionate heart of the all-loving Buddha. The heart particularises and feels pity for the sufferings of the world. This is the common teaching of the Mahayana. If the world is like a vision even when perceived in the love of the Enlightened One, where is the framework in which to build up the temple of universal salvation? The opening verses of the Lankavatara must be read as in the Sung and in the T'ang, and not according to the Wei and the present Sanskrit edition.

The Bodhisattva Never Enters into Nirvana

According to the Lankavatara there are five orders of beings from the religious point of view. (1) Those who belong to the Śrāvaka order. (2) Those of the Pratyekabuddha order, (3) Those of the Tathagata order, (4) Those who belong to no definite order, and (5) Those who are altogether outside these orders 1 Those belong to the Śrāvaka order who are delighted at listening to such doctrines as concern the Skandhas. Dhatus, or Ayatanas, but take no special interest in the theory of causation, who have cut themselves loose from the bondage of evil passions but have not yet destroyed their habit-energy. They have attained the realisation of Nirvana, abiding in which state they would declare that they have put an end to existence, their life of morality is now attained, all that is to be done is done, they would not be reborn These have gained an insight into the non-existence of an ego-substance in a person but not yet into that in objects. Those philosophical leaders who believe in a creator or in the ego-soul may also be classed under this order.

The Pratyekabuddha order comprises those who are intensely interested in anything that leads them to the realisation of Pratyekabuddhahood. They would retire into solutude and have no attachment to things worldly. When they hear that the Buddha manifests himself in a variety of forms, sometimes in group, sometimes singly, exhibiting miraculous powers, they think these are meant for their own order, and immensely delighted in them they would follow and accept them.

The Tathagata order may be again divided into three those who gain an insight into the truth that there is no individual reality behind what one perceives, those who know that there is an immediate perception of the truth in one's inmost consciousness, and those who perceive that besides this world there are a great number of Buddha-lands wide and far-extending. They may listen to discourse on such subjects as manifestations of mind, or transcendental realm of the Alaya, from which starts this world of particulars, denies himself this bliss. He yowed in the beginning of his religious career that until every one of his fellow-beings is led to enjoy the eternal happiness of Nirvana he himself would not leave this world of pain and suffering, but must strenuously and with every possible means (upāya) work towards the completion of his mission But as there will be no termination of life as long as the universe continues to exist, the Bodhisattva may have no chance for ever to rest himself quietly with his work finished in the serenity of Nir-The time will come even to those who speak evil of the Bodhisattvayana when through the power (adhishthana) of the Buddhas they finally embrace the Mahayana and by amassing stock of merit enter into Nirvana, for the Buddhas are always working for the benefit of all beings no matter what they are But as for the Bodhisattva he never enters into Nirvana as he has a deep insight into the nature of things which are already in Nirvana even as they are (Bodhısativecchantıko 'tra makāmate ādıparınırvrıtān sarvadkarmān vidstvā 'tyantato na parınırvātı)¹

¹ P. 63 et seq

Thus, we know where the Bodhisattva stands in his never-ending task of leading all beings into the final abode of rest So, says the sutra "He will through his ten never-ending vows bring all beings to maturity, and, manifesting himself in various forms in response to the needs of all beings, will never know where to rest from his task; and yet his mind is always abiding in the state of self-realisation and in the enjoyment of perfect meditation >22

Elsewhere³ we read again

"Agaın, O Mahāmati, when Śrāvakas and Pratyckabuddhas enter upon the eighth stage of Bodhisativahood, they become so intoxicated in the enjoyment of the Samadhi of Cessation, that they are unable to comprehend the doctrue that all things visible are due to "Mind-only", their habit-energy prevents their seeing beyond individuality and generality, they come to uphold the one-sided view of the ecoleraness of persons and things, their knowledge and understanding of Nirvana is based upon discrimination, and fails to penetrate into the truth of solitude 1 The Bodhisattvas, on the contrary, O Mahamati, who rejoice in the bliss of the Samādhi of Cessation are well furnished with the original vows and a pitying and compassionate heart, and, realising the import of the ten mextinguishable vows, do not enter into Nirvana They are already in Nirvana because their views are not at all beclouded by discrimination. To them no discrimination takes place as to things seized and seizing. As they understand what is meant by the doctrine of "Mindonly," they cherish no discrimination regarding existence: they are kept away from discriminating and attaching themselves to such ideas as Citta, Manas. Manovijñāna, the selfsubstance of things external, and their forms. They keep, however, the source of all things in action that belong to the Buddha, they put supreme wisdom (1ñana) forward as they thus attain the Tathagata stage of self-realisation."

² P 66, 大拳, 仏菩薩一順提。知一切法本來遐槃, 學究不入 (T^{*}ang)

P. 123

³ P 214

The Bodhısattva's Vows and His Effortless Works

According to his transcendental insight into the truth of things, the Bodhisattva knows that it is beyond all predicates and not at all subject to any form of description, but his heart full of Karunā (love) for all beings who are unable to step out of the dualistic whirlpools of sat and asat, he directs his intense vows towards their salvation and emancipation. His own heart is free from such attachments as are ordinarily cherished by the unemancipated, but that which feels persists, for his insight has not destroyed this, and hence his Pūrvapramdhāna, his Upāyakauśalya, his Nirmānakāya Yet all that he does for the maturity (parpācana) of all beings in response to their needs, is like the lunar reflection in water (jalacandravat), showing himself in all forms and appearances he preaches to them on the Dharma. His activity is what is in Mahayana phraseology called Anābhogacaryā, deeds that are effortless, affectless, and purposeless, which may be considered to correspond to the Christian love of God.

¹ Vwiktadharmamatibuddhi, 象读型(T'ang), p. 214, line 2; or simply viviktadharma (象读之法, p. 215, or 象辞法, p. 125)

When the Bodhisattva enters upon the first stage called Joy. Pramuditä, in the career of his spiritual discipline, he makes the following solemn vows. Pranidhāna, ten in number, which, flowing out of his most earnest determined will, are as all-inclusive as the whole universe, extending to the extremity of space itself, reaching the end of time, exhausting all the number of kalpas (ages), and functioning uninterruptedly as long as there is the appearance of a Buddha The first is to honour and serve all the Buddhas, one and all, without a single exception, the second is to work for the preservation and perpetuation of the teaching of all the Buddhas, the third is to be present at the appearance of each Buddha, wherever and whenever it may be, the fourth is to practise the proper conduct of Bodhisattvahood which is wide and measureless, imperishable and free from impurities, and to extend the Virtues of Perfection (pāramitā) towards all beings, the fifth is to induce all beings in the most comprehensive sense of the term to turn to the teaching of the Buddhas so that they may find their final abode of peace in the wisdom of the all-wise ones, the sixth is to have an inner perception of the universe, wide and inexhaustible, in all its possible multitudinousness, the seventh is to realise the most closely interpenetrating relationship of each and all, of all and each, and to make every land of beings immaculate as a Buddha-land, the eighth is to be united with all the Bodhisattvas in oneness of intention, to become intimately acquainted with the dignity, understanding, and psychic condition of the Tathagatas, so that the Bodhisattva can enter

¹ Pp 227, 193, 158, etc

pp 42, 43, 89, 161, 266, etc

life (prāyogskacaryā, 河行), he is now on the way to a life of Anābhogacaryā, where no efforts are made, no consciousness of strain is left though he is far from being a sleepy lithargic good-for-nothing fellow now.¹

So we read in the Avatamsaka-sūtra, or in the Dasabhūmika-sūtra.2 that up to the seventh stage the Bodhisattva has endeavoured not to be affected or contaminated by a life of evil passions (kleśa), but has not yet been able to go beyond it (samatikram). He is like a great king who goes about riding on a fine elephant He knows thus that there are many poverty-stricken people in his country, but he himself has no fear of becoming one of these unhappy He is quite free indeed from such contamination, but he cannot be said to be a super-man who has passed beyond the frailty of a mortal being He can attain to this transcendental state only by abandoning his kingly position and being born in the Brahman world, where, enveloped in the celestial light, he looks down at thousands of worlds The Bodhisattva, up to the and freely walks among them seventh stage, has gone through the world riding in the carriage of the Pāramitās (virtues of perfection), and due to these virtues he has been secluded from the contamination of this world though he knows well that there are defiled lives enough here But he cannot be called yet to be one who has gone altogether beyond evil passions and deeds following them If, however, he abandons all his conscious strivings or purposeful efforts, that is, if he finally passes from the seventh to the eighth stage, and, riding in the Bodhisattva's carriage of immaculacy, walks through the world, free from contaminations, he is really one who has altogether gone beyond

When thus the Bodhisattva, discarding all effortful works (sarväbhogavigata), attains to the effortless state of consciousness, he enters upon the eighth stage known as

¹ Of Rahder, p 57

^{*} Cf Rahder, p 58

Acalā, the Immovable. But we must remember that effortlessness is the outcome of intense effort, and that when the former is not preceded by the latter, it can never be realised. Save the Dasabhumika. It is like a man who in a dream finds himself drowning in a river; he musters all his courage and is determined at all costs to get out of it. And because of these very efforts and desperate contrivances he is awakened from the dream and when thus awakened he at once perceives that no further doings are needed now. with the Bodhisattva: because of the great determination and the constant strivings that he has put forward in order to save all beings from drowing in the river of ignorance and confusion, he has at last reached the eighth stage, and once here all his conscious efforts are set aside. his perception is not obstructed by dualistic considerations. nor by appearances.

The Lankavatara also has this dream illustration, but its application somewhat differs from that in the Daśabhūmika 1 "It is like a man's attempting to cross a great river in a dream. While exerting himself eagerly to cross to the other side of the water, he is awakened even before getting there Being awakened, he thinks, 'Is this real? or is it not real?' Then he recalls, this is neither real nor unreal. [That which took place in the dream] is due to the discrimination that has been going on since the beginningless past as regards forms and figures in their multitudinousness. -the discrimination that is the outcome of the memory expersenced in seeing, hearing, thinking, and cognition; it is not to be viewed by the categories of being and non-being: it is to be regarded as something that has been experienced during a dream by the Manovijñana. It is likewise with the Bodhisattva-Mahasattva, who, passing from the first stage on to the seventh, realises at the eighth that no discrimination has ever been proceeding in him, that all things as they are seen in full realisation are like māyā, etc., that all things are free from the imagination that longs for seizing and being seized, and that mind and what belongs to it appear as the result of discrimination. Seeing all this, the Bodhisattva strives to realise everything that belongs to the Buddha; he enlightens all who have not yet attained enlightenment. This is the Bodhisattva's Nirvana. It is not annihilation. As he is removed from Citta, Manas, Manovijūāna, and thoughts of discrimination there is in him an acceptance of all things as unborn. O Mahāmati, in ultimate truth (paramārtha) there is no gradation, no continuity, no imagery, no discrimination, and this is known as the truth of solitude (viviktadharma).

² Rahder, p. 64.

This effortlessness is again compared in the Daśabhi-mika² to a great seafaring boat. When the boat is not yet at sea, much labour is needed to make it move forward, but as soon as it reaches the ocean, no human power is required, let it alone and the wind will take care of it. One day's navigation thus left to itself in the high seas will surely be more than equal to one hundred years of human labouring while still in the shallows. When the Bodhisattva accumulating the great stock of good deeds sails out onto the great ocean of Bodhisattvahood, one moment of effortless activity will infinitely surpass deeds of conscious striving.

By these analogies, the reader will be able to form some idea as to the significance in Buddhism of a life of effortlessness. When the Bodhisattva reaches this stage of Buddhist life he is said, to be standing on the stage of immovability (acalā), for he has now realised Anutpattika-dharma-kshānti. This is defined in the following terms in the Dašabhūmika³ showing where is the spiritual background of the Anābhogacaryā, which is really the quintessence of Bodhisattvahood

"The Bodhisattva Vajragarbha said, O venerable sons

Rahder, p 63 f.

those just mentioned which is the one attained by the wise. its birth consists in not being born, and in this not being born, there is their Kshānti."1

"The triple world thus has nothing to depend upon, either inside or outside; seeing this existence unborn there is the Kshanti of no-hirth "2

All these quotations point to the correctness of my interpretation of the phrase, "Anutpattikadharmakshānti"

This may seem from the point of view of ordinary terminology almost too abstract, too metaphysical, but to those who are well acquainted with the Mahayanistic way of thinking and feeling, the definition of Anutpattika-dharmakshanti here quoted from the Daśabhumika is exact and adequately describes the highest object of the Buddhist life as far as this kind of phraseology allows In the Lankavatara, the same ideas are more concretely expressed from another angle by means of an analogy, though the sutra says that such analogies do not do justice to the true state of The truth as intuitively seen by the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas surpasses all symbolism and is beyond the understanding of ordinary minds, but when some indications are not given, the truth may forever be kept away from us, perhaps worse than that, vilified and denounced to our own spiritual rumation The analogy has already been quoted when Tathagatahood was compared to the sands of the Ganges

There are some other important points in the Lankavatara concerning which I intend to write in the following chapters, my object here has been to treat the sutra as most intimately connected with Zen Buddhism, and, therefore,

¹ P 203, gg 108-109

² P 273, g 67

Of Sylvain Lévi's French translation of the Sciralandere, p 123 footnote, and Asanga's remarks on the "eight unborn dharmas", (Sütrālamkāra, XI, 52)

⁴ See supra, page 148 et seq

as containing some of the most salient ideas of Zen fore, I opened this study with an account of Pratvatmagatigocara which forms the central thesis of the Lankavatara and also is the object of the Zen discipline No doubt all the schools of Mahayana Buddhism, (and for that matter the Hinayana, too), aim at gaining an immediate personal msight into the essence of Buddhahood, but this aspect of Buddhist life I find more clearly and emphatically and straightforwardly brought out in the Lankavatara than in any other sutra. But as all religion requires a philosophical background without which it limps. I have tried to show how the Lankavatara gives a logical and psychological account of the inmost experience called Pratyatmagatigocara, or Pratvātmārvanāna With this the theoretical side of Zen Buddhism finishes, while its active side is to be developed if it has to bear fruit in this practical life. Hence towards the end of this study I have tried to describe the disciplinary life of the Buddhist as far as it is presented in this sutra.

١

ļ

Buddhist nomenclature is frequently too intellectual and the Indians have their own peculiar way of presenting their ideas, for this reason one is apt to regard the Mahayana as a philosophy too abstract and too high-flying and not at all religious; but the fact is that the Mahayana stands firmly on two legs, Prajñā and Karunā, transcendental idealism and all-embracing affection for all kinds of beings. animate as well as inanimate. The former sees into the unity of things, and the latter appreciates their diversity. The Bodhisattva weeps with suffering beings and at the same time realises that there is one that never weeps, being above sufferings, tribulations, and contaminations. Buddhist life finds its perfect realisation in a harmonious blending of the two conceptions philosophically, the one and the many, sat and asat; religiously the pure and the defiled And this balancing is seen in the Bodhisattva's Pranidhana or vow "There are two worlds, the defiled and the immaculate, and between the two there is no way to cross from the one to the other, except by the power of the Bodhisattva's great vow. transcendental wisdom, skilful means, and psychic penetration (abhanã)."1

ŭ

The Ten Vows of Bodhisattva Samantabhadra

It may be appropriate to conclude this part of the study of the Lankavatara by quoting the ten vows of the Bodhisattva Samantabhadra which forms the concluding chapter of the Gandavyūha-sūtra The following abstract2 is taken from the Chinese translation by Prajñā, master of the Tripitaka, which is popularly known as the Kegon-Kyo (Avatamsaka-sūtra) in forty fasciculi 8

After praising the excellent virtues of the Tathagata, the Bodhisattva Samantabhadra said to all the Bodhisattvas assembled including Sudhana. The virtues of the Tathagata are so great that nobody, however long and however incessantly he may talk about them, cannot even begin to describe them adequately, and if you wish to perfect these virtues yourselves you must practise the following ten great vows (mahāpranidhāna) What are they? They are 1 To honour all the Buddhas; 2 To praise all the Buddhas, 3 To make extensively all kinds of offerings to the Buddhas, especially what may be termed "moral offerings" (dharmapūja); 4 To repent all sins ever committed by yourselves, 5 To be sympathetically joyful over whatever merits are acquired by others: 6 To ask the Buddha to revolve the Wheel of the Dharma; 7. To ask the Buddha to stay on hving in this world; 8 To be always learning from the life of the Buddha, 9 To look after the spiritual welfare of all beings, 10 To turn all your merits towards the promotion of goodness and

1 The Daiabhumika Sutra. Of Rahder, p 58

This prose part is lacking in the Sanskrit Gandavytha, where we find the verse only. Prof. Hoken Idsum, of Otam College, has lately collated various MSS containing this verse section and published it in the Journal of Otans College for the spring term this year An English translation together with the original text will appear in The Eastern Buddhist Vol. V, No 2, 1929 the suppression of evils. These are the ten,¹ and in the execution of them, a Bodhisattva will not know when to get rested from his work, for it will have to continue as long as there is space extending in the ten quarters, as long as there is one being left in the universe to be saved, as long as there is one evil desire to be destroyed, a Bodhisattva will thus work incessantly, continuously, without interruption, with his body, speech, and mind, to the very end of the world ²

Translated into Chinese in A.D 796-798

- (1) By the vow to pay reverence to all the Buddhas is meant this: There is an inconceivable number of Buddhalands filling up the ten quarters of the universe, their number is indeed inconceivable as the number of atoms composing the earth; and there is an inconceivable number of Buddhas residing in these innumerable Buddha-lands through the three divisions of time. And because of the virtue of Samantabhadra's life of vows a deep faith is awakened in a Bodhisattva's heart, and he will feel as if he were in the presence of all these Buddhas, whom he will salute with his body, speech, and mind that are pure; and dividing his one body into as many bodies as there are Buddhas in these innumerable Buddha-lands—innumerable as atoms composing the worlds, he will salute every one of them; he will not feel fatigued in doing so till the end of the universe.
- (2) By the vow to praise the Tathagatas is meant this: The number of the Buddha-lands filling up the entire extent of the universe and the three divisions of time is as numberless as that of atoms composing the earth, and in each one of these numberless Buddha-lands there is again as innumerable a number of Buddhas as that of atoms composing Something like this is repeated at the end of each of the ten your.

A comparative study of these ten vows of Samantabhadra and those to be made by a Bodhisattva in the beginning of his spiritual career will be very interesting. We can say that these two sets of vows sum up the contents of the Buddhist experience. The vows of Samantabhadra are known in the Lankdvatdra as Dasanishthapada (the ten inexhausthble clauses, 1225). Pp. 123, 160, 214, 227, etc.

, A

the earth The Buddha is found surrounded by an ocean of Bodhisattvas in every one of these Buddha-lands, and a Bodhisattva will present himself before each one of these Buddhas with a deep understanding and a clear perception. The ocean of the merits of the Tathagata will then be praised with a tongue far more exquisite and eloquent than that of Sarasvatī, each tongue expressing a sea of inexhaustible voices, and each voice articulating a sea of words in every form possible. And this praising will go on without cessation till the end of the world and as long as there is a being in existence, and yet a Bodhisattva will never feel tired of his work

The vow to make all kinds of offerings to the Buddhas consists in offering to every one of these innumerable Buddhas as above mentioned such things as flowers, wreaths, music, umbrellas, garments, and all kinds of incense and ointment, and many other things-and all these offerings in such a large quantity as is equal to clouds or to a mountain, and a Bodhisattva will also burn before every one of the innumerable Buddhas all sorts of oil in such a measure But of all the offerings one could as compares to an ocean thus make to a Buddha the best is that of the Dharma, which is to say, disciplining oneself according to the teaching, benefitting all beings, accepting all beings, suffering pains for all beings, nurturing every root of goodness, carrying out all the works of a Bodhisattva, and at the same time not keeping himself away from the thought of enlightenment None of those material offerings above mentioned begin to compare with this form of moral offerings (dharmapuja) The former are not equal even to an infinitesimal fraction of the latter Why? Because all Buddhas are born of moral offerings of this kind, because these are the true offerings, because the practising of the Dharma means the perfection of an offering one could make to a Buddha A Bodhisattva will make these offerings without cessation to every one of those unnumerable Buddhas till the end of the world and as long as there is one being in existence, and in doing so he will never feel tired.

(4) The vow to repent all the sins committed by oneself and thereby to get rid of one's karma-hindrance is usually expressed in this formula

> Whatever sins committed by me, They are due to my greed, anger, and folly, And done with my body, speech, and mind

All these I now make full confession and repent. According to the sutra, all these sms, if they were really substantial, are thought to have filled the universe to its utmost ends and even over-flowing, of which a Bodhisattva now vows to repent without reserve from the depths of his heart, vowing that such will never be committed again by him, for he will henceforward always abiding in the pure precepts amass every sort of merit. And of this he will never get tired even to the end of the world

- (5) To be in sympathy with all beings for whatever good things they think, or feel, or do, constitutes the fifth vow of the Bodhisattva All the Buddhas had gone through untold hardships before they attained full enlightenment, Since their first awakening of the thought of enlightenment, they never hesitated to accumulate all the ment that tended towards the attainment of the goal of their life, they never raised a thought of egotism even when they had to sacrifice their life and all that belonged to them The Bodhisattva now vows to feel a sympathetic joy for all these doings of the Buddhas Not only with the Buddhas does he this, but for every possible deed of ment, however insignificant, executed by any being in any path of existence, of any class of truth-seekers. The Bodhısattva with this vow will never be tired of putting it into practice till the end of the world and as long as there is one being in existence in this world
- (6) A Bodhisattva vows to ask every one of the Buddhas to revolve the Wheel of the Dharma, who are residing in these innumerable Buddha-lands filling up all the worlds which are indeed as inconceivably numerous as atoms of the earth

- (7) And further the Bodhisattva will ask every one of the Buddhas not to enter into Nirvana if any is so disposed, he will ask this even of any Bodhisattvas, Arhats, Śrāvakas, or Pratyekabuddhas, for he wishes these superior beings to continue to live in the world and keep on benefitting all beings. He will never stop in this request as long as there is one being left in this world
- (8) The Bodhisattva vows to learn from the life of a Buddha who in this saha-world ever since his awakening of the thought of enlightenment have never ceased from exercising himself ungrudgingly, not even sparing his own life, His reverential attitude for the sake of universal salvation towards the Dharma had been such as to make paper of his skin, a brush of his bones, and ink of his blood wherewith he copied the Buddhist sutras to the amount of Mount Sumeru He cared not even for his life, how much less for the throne, for the palaces, gardens, villages, and other external things! By practising every form of mortification he finally attained supreme enlightenment under the Bodhi-tree After this, he manifested all kinds of psychical powers, all kinds of transformations, ell aspects of the Buddha-body, and placed himself sometimes among Bodhisattvas, sometimes among Śrāvakas, and Pratyekabuddhas, sometimes among Kshatriyas, among Brahmans, householders, lay-disciples, and sometimes even among Devas, Nāgas, human beings, and non-human beings Wherever he was found, he preached with perfect eloquence, with a voice like thunder, in ordr to bring all beings into maturity according to their aspirations Finally, he showed himself as entering into Nirvana these phases of the life of a Buddha, the Bodhisattva is determined to learn as models for his own life
- (9) In this universe life manifests itself in innumerable forms, each one differing from another in the way of its birth, in form, in the duration of life, in name, in mental

ł

disposition, in intelligence, in aspiration, in inclination, in demeanour, in garment, in food, in social life, in the mode of dwelling, etc. However different thus they are, the Bodhisattva vows to live in accordance with the laws that govern every one of these beings in order to serve them, to minister to their needs, to revere them as his parents, as his teachers. or Arhats, or as Tathagatas, making no distinction among them in this respect. If they are sick, he will be to them a good physician; if they go astray he will show them the right path, if they are sunk in poverty he will supply them with a treasure: thus uniformly giving benefits to all beings according to their needs. Why does he do this? Because the Bodhisattva is convinced that by serving all beings he is serving all the Buddhas, that by revering all beings, by making them glad, he is revering and gladdening all the Buddhas Why? Because a great compassionate heart is the substance of Tathagatahood. It is because of all beings that this compassionate heart is awakened, and because of this compassionate heart the thought of enlightenment is awakened, and because of this awakening supreme enlightenment is attained It is like a great majestic tree growing in the desert that it spreads out so luxuriously its stems. branches, leaves, flowers in all direction, is due to the supply of water under the ground. So with the majestic tree of enlightenment growing in the wilderness of birth-and-death. the roots are deeply planted among all beings, while it blooms out and bears fruit as Buddhas and Bodhisattvas That these roots are well nourished is due to the pouring of the water of great compassion, without which there will indeed be no flowers and fruits of enlightenment as attained by Buddhas and Bodhisattvas Why? Because of the water of great compassion all beings are benefitted and perfected as to attain the highest supreme enlightenment Therefore, enlightenment is dependent upon beings If there were no beings, there would be no Bodhisattvas attaining supreme enlightenment Thus the Bodhisattva must have a good understanding in this. As he regards with impartiality the minds of all beings, he is able to perfect his great compassionate heart, and as he moves among all beings with this great compassionate heart in accordance with their modes of living and feeling and thinking, he is able to complete his offerings to the Tathagatas In doing this the Bodhisattva will know no fatigue even to the end of the world

₹.

(10) Whatever merits the Bodhisattva acquires by paying sincere respect to all the Buddhas and also by practising all kinds of meritorious deeds as already described, they will all be turned over to the benefits of all beings filling up this entire universe. He will thus turn all his merits towards making beings feel at ease, free from diseases, turn away from evil doings, practise all deeds of goodness, so that every possible evil may be suppressed and the right road to Nirvana be opened for the gods and men. If there be any beings who are suffering the results of their evil karma committed in the past, the Bodhısattva will be ready to sacrifice himself and bear all the pains for the miserable creatures m order to release them from karma and finally make them realise supreme enlightenment In this transference of merit onto another, the Bodhısattva knows indeed no fatigue to the end of the world, etc.

Then concludes the Bodhisattva Samantahhadra, "These are, O sons of good families, the Bodhisattva-Mahasattva's ten great yows"

Ш

SOME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES EXPOUNDED IN THE LANKAVATARA

SOME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES EXPOUNDED IN THE LANKAVATARA

When the Lankāvatāra is studied apart from its connection with the philosophy of Zen Buddhism, it is usually as one of the text-books of the Yogācāra school As was already stated in the first part of the present work(p 53), this was done very early in the history of the sutra when the Chinese Buddhist scholars belonging to the school of the Mahāyānaparisangraha-śāstra attempted to interpret the sutra according to Asanga's teaching Whether this view is correct or not is another question, but the fact is that the sutra contains the theories relating to the so-called psychological explanation of existence such as the doctrine of Cittamātra (mindonly)¹ and the system of eight Vijñānas, which also make up the contents of the Yogācāra philosophy. To complete, therefore, the study of the Lankāvatāra, these theories are also to be examined even though cursorily

Next, the doctrine of Emptiness (śūnyatā) or No-birth (anutpāda) is the foundation of Mahayana Buddhism, it is not necessarily confined to the Madhyamika school of Nāgārjuna, though this has been exaggerated too far so that some scholars are led to regard Emptiness as the exclusive property of this school. The fact as it stands is that it is a common possession of all the Buddhist schools psychological as well as logical The Lankāvatāra is thus insistent too on the doctrine of Emptiness, indeed as much as the Prajāāpāramitā-sūtras, only it uses the term "no-birth" or "unborn" (anutpāda or anutpattika) more frequently than "emptiness" or "vaccuty." Both connote the same thing

The distinction between the Cittamätra and the Vijfiaptimätra or Vijfianamätra has been noticed elsewhere in this book (pp. 181, 182), but for its specific treatment see p 278 et seq and are quite interchangeable. A chapter has thus been reserved in this book for the treatment of this idea as expounded in the Lankāvatāra

The question of Buddhahood is another important idea in a work claiming to elucidate the Lankāvatāra in its various aspects. Not only is its conception of the Tathagata to be examined but also that of the Triple Body (trikāya). Though these two are closely related—indeed they are two sides of the same shield—I think it best to treat them separately. The doctrine of the Triple Body is not yet formally systematised in the sutra, as is for example in the Suvarṇa-prabhāsa which has a special chapter devoted to the treatment of the subject. The adumbration of the theory is, however, clearly traceable in the Lankāvatāra. I have tried to make the point clear in the following pages apart from the notion of Tathagatahood.

The four topics have thus been chosen as requiring special consideration in the Lankavatara when it is dissociated from the teaching of Zen Buddhism, which are (1) The Doctrine of "Mind-only" (cittamātra), (2) The Idea of No-birth (anutpāda), (3) The Dogma of the Triple Body (trikāya), and (4) The Tathagata These, however, do not exhaust the whole range of thoughts finding expression in the Lankāvatāra, there is more material which may claim room in these Studies No doubt, what is left after the four topics just mentioned and outside its connection with Zen, is not so weighty as to require any extensive treat-The last ment, as far as the sutra itself is concerned (1) The chapter is then devoted to these minor subjects One Vehicle and the Three Vehicles, (2) The Five Fatal Sins, (3) The Six Pāramitās, (4) The Four Dhyānas, and (5) Meat-eating

Though this is missing in the Sanskrit MSS in our possession, it appears in the Tibetan as well as in the Chinese translation.

1. THE DOCTRINE OF "MIND-ONLY" (cittamātra)

One of the Principal Theories in the Sutra

Something about the doctrine of "Mind-only" has already been stated (pp 169 ff), but more will have to be written about it if the Lankavatara is to be treated as an independent Mahayana sutra, not necessarily in connection with the teaching of Zen Buddhism. There is no doubt that the purpose of compiling the sutra was, on the part of the author or editor, to emphasise the all-importance of the self-realisation of the truth (pratyatmadharma) in its practical bearing on the life of the Bodhısattva. But when selfrealisation is to be given its content so that the experience becomes communicable, that is, when it is made the subject of a philosophical discourse, something more has to be said. The mere statement of the fact that the truth realised in the mmost consciousness constitutes the reason of the Buddhist life, is altogether too inadequate to convince other people: the Lankavatara has to be more than an utterance of the inner experience. To be consistent with the general philosophical tradition of Mahayana Buddhism, it has to advocate the doctrine of "Mind-only." We may, therefore, say that the teaching of Zen Buddhism, philosophically stated, is a pure idealism. This chapter will now be devoted to an elucidation of the Lankavatara doctrine of "Mind-only" (cittamātra).

What is then meant by the "Mind-only"? Let me quote some gathas relative to the subject.

"When things existent are regarded as being free from [the bondage of] mutual dependence, there is decidedly nothing but Mind, I say, nothing but Mind (25).

"[Mind] is the measure [of all things], it is the abode of their self-nature, and has nothing to do with causation and the world; it is perfect in its nature, absolutely pure. This is the measure indeed. I say (26).

¹ Pp. 153-154, gg 25-33.

"The worldly way of thinking (projnaptisatyata) views [the Mind] as the individual self (ātman), but there is no such substantial reality. So with the substance (skandhatā) of the Skandhas, the worldly way of thinking views it as real, in reality it has no existence (27).

"There are four sorts of sameness for those who discipline themselves in religious life appearance, causation, coming into existence, and the fourth is egolessness (28) ¹

"[Mind] is beyond all philosophical views, is apart from discrimination, it is not attainable, nor is it ever born I say, there is nothing but Mind (29)

"It is not an existence, nor is it a non-existence, it is indeed beyond both existence and non-existence, it is Suchness, it is even released from mind I say, there is nothing but Mind (30).

"Suchness, emptiness, the limit, Nirvana, Dharmadhātu, variety of will-bodies—they are nothing but Mind, I say (31)

"Out of Mind spring innumerable things, conditioned by discrimination and habit-energy; these things people accept as an external world I say, there is nothing but Mind (32).

"What appears to be external does not exist in reality, it is indeed Mind that is seen as multiplicity, the body, property, and abode—all these, I say, are nothing but Mind (33)."

In the "Sagāthakam" we have the following stanzas (358-359, 366-370)

"When the "Mind-only" is understood, external objects are set aside discrimination ceases; and we have the Middle Way (358)

"There is the 'Mind-only,' there are no objects to be

It is difficult to know what these four sorts of sameness mean and in what connection they stand to the verses above and below and in what connection they stand to the verses above the mind which

For tathata T'ang has tatha, reading 'so it is with mind which is detached.''

 Gg 32-33 are placed between gg 28 and 29 in the Sung translation.

seen; when there are no objects to see, Mind is not born; and this is called by myself and others the Middle Way (359).

"Without being born they are seen as born; they are not dead but are seen as dead; they are simultaneously visible in myriads of countries even as the moon is reflected in many waters (366).

"One is seen as many, they make it rain, they ignite fires, as is willed by their minds; so they declare that there is the 'Mind-only' (367).

"To say the 'Mind-only' is by mind, is also born of mind; particular forms and figures in all possible varieties, when thoroughly understood, are no more than Mind itself (368).

"Of Buddhas, Śrāvaka-forms, Pratyekabuddha-forms, and other various forms, it is declared by them that they are nothing but Mind (369).

"Their forms, although really of no-form, are seen as having forms by all beings from the world of no-form down to the hells; they are nothing but the workings of Mind itself (370)."

From these quotations some of which are more shrouded m obscurity than others, the reader may gain a general idea as to what the doctrine of "Mind-only" means. The sutra sometimes makes summary statements like these:

į

- Cuttamātram lokam. (The world is nothing Mind.) P. 73, g. 136.
- Cittabāhyādaršanam. (Nothing is to be seen outside the Mind.) P. 42, lines 10-11.
- Svacittamātram traidhātukam. (The triple world is Mind itself.) P. 80, line 7; p. 42, line 12; p. 123, line 17; p. 213, lines 11-12; etc.
- Cittanhi traidhātuka-yonih. (Mind produces the triple world.) P. 268, g. 36.
- 5. Tribhavacıttamātram. (The triple existence is nothing but Mind) P. 208, line 13.
- 6. Cittam hi sarvam. (All is Mind.) "Sagathakam," g. 134.

 Sarvarūpāvabhāsam hi yadā cittam pravartate (When Mind evolves, all forms are manifested) "Sagāthakam," g. 93

Speaking in the modern way, the theory of "Mind-only" is a form of pure idealism. All that we habitually consider having an objective value, such as our own body (deha), property (bhoga), and the land (praishthāna) where we have our abodes, are no more than our own mind projected and recognised as externally extending and real. Even Nirvana, the truth of suchness, emptiness, reality—all these are but our mental creations, having no objective validity as far as they are forms of discrimination. We, ordinary mortals, see the Buddha in his multifarious manifestations, which, however, are the reflections of our ideas formulated in the mind by virtue of inherited memory (vāsanā) mysteriously working from time immemorial

Passages Quoted Relative to the Doctrine

The doctrine of "Mind-only" runs through the Lankāvatāra as if it were warp and west of the sutra. To understand it is to realise the ultimate truth, and not to understand it is to transmigrate through many a birth-and-death. The sutra lays much emphasis on the importance of the doctrine, so much, indeed, that it makes everything hinge on this one point, the salvation of the world, not to say anything of the individual. Read the following passages culled at random from the sutra

1 The "Mind-only" leads to the realisation of the ultimate truth (paramartha) "Language, O Mahāmati, is not the ultimate truth, what is attainable by language is not the ultimate truth. Why? Because the ultimate truth is what is enjoyed by the wise, by means of speech one can enter into the truth, but words themselves are not the truth. It is the self-realisation inwardly experienced by the wise through their supreme wisdom, and does not belong to the domain of words, discrimination, or intelligence, and, therefore, discrimination does not reveal the ultimate truth itself over, O Mahamati, language is subject to birth and destruction, is unsteady, mutually conditioning, and produced according to the law of causation, and what is mutually conditioning and produced according to the law of causation is not the ultimate truth, nor does it come out of such conditions, for it is above aspects of relativity, and words are meapable of producing it. and again as the ultimate truth is in conformity with the view that the visible world is no more than our own mind, and as there are no such external objects appearing in their multifarious aspects of individuation, the ultimate truth is not subject to discrimination."

- "O Mahāmatı, when a man sees into the abode of reality where all things are, he enters upon the truth that what appears to him is not other than mind itself "2
- The "Mind-only" is grasped by pure thought "Absolute intelligence (prajūā) does not belong to the two Vehicles, it has, indeed, nothing to do with particular objects, the Śrāvakas are attached to the notion of being; absolute intelligence, pure in essence, belongs to the Tathagata who has entered upon the 'Mund-only' ''s
- Bodhısattvas do not enter into Nirvāna because of their understanding of the truth of the "Mind-only" "All the various doings in the triple world (traidhātuka) such as the grading of stages in the discipline of the Bodhisattva and his steady promotion are nothing but the manifestations of Mind This is not understood by the ignorant, therefore all these things are taught by the Buddhas And again, the Śrāvakas and the Pratyekabuddhas, when they reach the eighth stage, become so intoxicated with the bliss of mental tranquility (nirodha-samāpatti) that they fail to realise that the visible is nothing but the Mind They are still in the realm of individuation, their insight into reality is not yet pure (wwikta) The Bodhisattvas, on the other hand, are alive to their original vows flowing out of their all-embracing loving hearts; they do not enter into Nirvana; they know that the visible world is nothing but the manifestation of Mind itself, they are free from such ideas as mind (citta), will (manas), consciousness (manovijāna), external world, self-substance, and distinguishing marks."

¹ Pp 87-88 ³ P. 112. ³ P. 158

The "Mind-only" and the dualistic conception of being and non-being, which is the outcome of wrong discrimination (vikalpa), stand opposite to each other, and are irreconcilable until the latter is absorbed into the former. Its teaching, intellectually speaking, is to show the fallacy of a world-conception based on discrimination, or rather upon wrong discrimination, in order to get us back into the right way of comprehending reality as it is "As the ignorant and unenlightened do not comprehend the teaching of the 'Mindonly,' they are attached to a variety of external objects, they go from one form of discrimination to another, such as the duality of being and non-being, oneness and otherness, bothness and not-bothness, permanence and impermanence, selfsubstance, habit-energy, causation, etc. After discriminating these notions, they go on clinging to them as objectively real and unchangeable, like those animals who, driven by thirst in the summer-time, run wildly after imaginary springs,"2

"To think that primary elements really exist is due to wrong discrimination and nothing else. When the truth of the 'Mind-only' is understood, there are no external objects to be seen, they are all due to the discrimination of what one sees in one's own mind."

5. Not to understand the "Mind-only" leads one to eternal transmigrations "As the philosophers fail to go beyond dualism, they hurt not only themselves but the ignorant Going around continually from one path of existence to another, not understanding that what is seen is no more than their own mind, and adhering to the notion that things external are endoved with self-substance, they are unable to free themselves from wrong discrimination."

¹ An abstract of pp 213-214

² Of pp 90, 104, 149, 208, 234, etc

³ P 123

- 6 As to the relation between the "Mind-only" theory and the conception of the Ālayavijūāna, mention will be made later, here let it only be remarked that the rising of the Ālaya is due to our taking the manifestations of the mind for a world of objective realities. "The Ālayavijūāna is its own subject (=cause) and object (=support); and it clings to a world of its own mental presentations, a system of mentality that evolves mutually conditioning. It is like the waves of the ocean, stirred by the wind; that is, a world made visible by Mind itself where the mental waves come and go" This ocean-and-waves simile is a favourite one with Mahayana Buddhists
- 7 Thus we see that there is nothing in the world that is not of the mind, hence the "Mind-only" doctrine. And this applies with especial emphasis to all logical controversies, which, according to the Lankavatāra, are mere subjective fabrications "The body, property, and abode—these are no more than the shadows of Mind (citta), the ignorant do not understand it They make assertions (samāropa, 建立) or refutations (apavāda, 影影), and this elaboration is due to Mind only, apart from which nothing is obtainable." The author of the Lankāvatāra does not stop here, he goes further on and declares that even the spiritual stages of Bodhisattvahood are merely the reflections of mind "The [Buddha-] abodes and the Buddha-stages are of Mind only in which there are no shadows; that is what is taught by the Buddhas past, present, and future"
- 8. Lastly, when all forms of individuation are negated, there takes place a revulsion (parāvritts) in our minds, and

¹ P 62

^{*} P 127

² Of. p 70 The reading of this gatha varies in all four of the texts, one Sanskrit and three Chinese I have followed the Tang.

we see that the truth that there is nothing but Mind from the very beginning and thereby we are emancipated from the fetters of wrong discrimination ¹

The Citta and its Evolution

Now the question naturally suggesting itself is what is really meant by cittamātram, or "mind-only"? It is often phrased, svacittadriśyamātram, meaning "own-mind-seenonly." What is the Citta that is nere rendered as "Mind"?

Let us see first what the Lankavatara means by Citta Citta as noticed elsewhere is used in two ways, general and specific Where it is used in a general way, it is the name given to the sum of all mental activities, including both the mind proper and its various functions But where the mind is divided into Citta, Manas, Manovijūāna, and the five Sense-vijnanas, (eye, ear, nose, tongue, and body), the Citta gains a specific signification. It is the principle of unification by which all the activities are understood as issuing from one centre The Manas is a discriminating agency by which the homogeneous, undifferentiated Citta is divided into two parts the one as the seer and the other as the seen, the one as the grasping ego and the other as an object grasped The Manas is not only an intellective but also a conative principle. The Vijnana, that is, the Manovijnana is separated from the Manas, only retaining the latter's intellective function, and may be translated as the intellect, in which case the Manas may be regarded as corresponding to the will and the affection The five Vijnanas are thus the five senses which discriminate a world of individual forms, each within its own sense-field

When the Citta is thus considered in its specific sense, it may seem to be an abstract principle devoid of content But, according to the Lankāvatāra, this is not the case for the Citta is rich in content, and just because of this inner richness, it is able to evolve out of itself a world of infinite multitudinousness. It is, indeed, an inexhaustible reservoir of seeds (bisa) which have been accumulated therein since the beginningless past. So the definition of Citta is as follows. Cittena civate karma 1 That karma is accumulated by Citta means that the latter takes in all that goes on in the mind and also all that is done by the body. Technically stated, every deed (karma), mental and physical, leaves its seeds behind which are deposited in the Citta, and the Citta has been hoarding them since time immemorial. It is the rich repository of all the thoughts, feelings, desires, instincts, ete, no matter how they have come to act, that is, whether merely stirred up in the immost recesses of one's consciousness, or carried out by the body into deed, or checked in the incipient stages of their activity Psychologically, the Citta may thus be regarded as corresponding to the Subconscious.

¹ The "Sagathakam," gg 275-282

This repository-Citta, so long as it remains contented in and with itself, is absolutely quiet and no waves are seen stirring on its cittam avyākritam nityam? It is in its nature non-discriminative, it does not pretend to divide and analyse itself. It may dance like the dancer (natavannrityate cittam).3 but if there is nobody to keep company with her and no audience to applaud her, what is the use of her dancing? A solitary dance is the same as no dance whatever. the dancing is the same as no dancing; but it gains significance as soon as there appears some one beside the dancer.

This somebody is at hand who keeps company with the Citta; not only that, it calls up an audience and creates the stage on a grand scale. The panoramic world of particular objects now comes up into view, the manager's name is Manas.

"Citta dances like the dancer, Manas resembles the jester. The Vijnana, in company with the five, imagines What is presented [i.e. an external world] to be the stage."74

P. 244. See also p 195 of the present work.

Pp 158, 38 "Mind eternally quiescent," The mind dances like a dancer," p 224, l. 2. ² "Mind eternally quiescent," p 278, L 3.

The Manas is not, however, an independent agent acting on the Citta from the outside, it is indeed the creation of the Citta itself. "Depending upon the Alaya [=Citta1], the Manas arises: allied with the Citta and Manas, the Viinana arises "3" Again, "[with the Citta] as its cause and supporting it, the Manas walks along depending on the Citta. the Citta is caused to move by the Vijnana, and there is an interdependence among them."3 From this it is evident that the Manas depends on the Citta for its existence, and at the same time Citta takes Manas for the object of its activity Without Manas there will be no mentation, and without mentation Citta's own existence will not be known The one, thus, gives support to the other, and at the same time is supported by the other

The business of Manas is thus twofold (1) to reflect on the Citta, and (2) to make Citta visualise itself as object This is called "arranging" (vidhivate), or "putting in order" (viciyate),5 or "reflecting" (manyati),6 which is the function of the Manas It is again described as "walking in two ways" (mano hyubhayasamcaram)," which means the dualistic character of the Manas, as against the absolute unity of the Citta One Citta has now been differentiated into Citta and Manas, and this latter particularised Citta is no more neutral, non-discriminative, and non-functioning; for all the karma-seeds hitherto lying dormant in the absolute Citta have now begun to sprout out in full vigour germinating seeds are now distinguished or discriminated (chindati), by the Vijnana known as Manovijnana, by the aid of the five senses, wherewith creating a world of indivi-

- ¹ Cittam-ālayavijādnam, p 278, g 102
- ² P 300, g 269
- * 'Tad hetukam tad dlambya manogatisamdérayam, hetum daddir cittasya vijäänam oa samäšritam" (p 127, g 180).

 - P 158, 1 3
 P 46, 1 17 One MS reads, vidhtyate
 - P 323, g 461, p 278, l 1, p 48, g 116
 - 7 P 278, g 103
 - ⁸ P 323, g 461

duals The latter is called "the seen," or "what is presented" (drisya), which is now imagined (kalpets) as real and substantial, and from this arise all kinds of spiritual tribulations

The distinction between Manas and Manovijñāna is that Manas is conative and Manovijñāna is intellective (vijānāti, or manyate).¹ While intellection is not lacking in Manas, what predominates is the will, especially since the intellective function has more or less effectively been surrendered to the Vijñāna, i.e., Manovijñāna. In fact, however, all these function together and simultaneously, as we have seen in the simile of the theatre ² Further quotations from the "Sagāthakam" will be helpful

"Depending upon the Alaya there evolves the Manas; and depending upon Citta and Manas there evolves the Vijnana (869).

"There are the maturing and development of Manas and Vijnānas, that is, Manas is born of the Ālaya and the Vijnānas of the Manas (870).

"From the Alaya are stirred up all the mental activities like waves; with habit-energy as cause they are born in accordance with [the law of] origination (871).

"Grasping mind as their objects and bound by a chain of successive moments, the Mano[-vijnana], eye[-vijnana], etc. are evolved to create forms, signs, and figures (872).

"Bound by bad habit-energy of the beginningless past, something resembling an external world is produced, and the mind is seen in the aspect of multiplicity—this is what blocks the understanding of the philosophers (873).

"With that [i.e., vāsanā] as eause and depending on it, other things [1 e vijnānas] are evolved, and thus there take place various views of existence and a revolving cycle of birth and death (873)."

To be exact, the Citta is more than the mind as the psychologist understands it it has more of a metaphysical connotation; it is not merely an empirical mind. The Citta when it is understood in its absolute aspect is transcendental; it denotes something at the back of the mind of the psychologist, who, depending on his scientific methods, may fail to reach. It implies more than the sum-total of the Citta, Manas, Manovijāāna, and the Vijāānas. When the Lankāvatāra speaks of the "Mind-only," therefore, its foundation lies much deeper than the ordinary form of idealism. Otherwise intuition into the truth of Cittamātra cannot result in the spiritual emancipation which is the object of Mahayana discipline

¹ P. 48, g. 116

² Pp. 224, 19 (g. 433).

The "Sagathakam" (g 459) gives the following as synonyms of Citta.

Cittam vikalpo vijāaptir mano vijāānam eva ca,

Alayam tribhavasceshta ete cittasya paryapah 1 Except Alayavijnana, the rest should be regarded as quite different from what the Citta is, unless we take them to mean that all these functions of the mind issue from the Citta, or that originally they lie quiescent in the Citta the gatha following this, another puzzling statement is made. "Life, warmth, Vijnana, Alaya, life-force, Manas and Manovijnina—they are synonyms of discrimination "2 This is a grand mixing-up When the two verses are put together and examined to draw something conclusive and definite about Citta, we get completely lost in the maze thus created The only way to understand them intelligently will be to regard Citta as the container of all things, contradictory or For is it not said that there is "Mind itself" otherwise (citia-māira)? But coming down to the ordinary plane of reasoning, why did the writer of these verses in the "Sagathakam" specially refer to such ideas as vikalpa, vijnapii, Citta, discrimination, representation, manas, and the vijfina, alaya, the wish for the triple existence,—these are citta's other names.

Ayurushmātha vijfianam ālayo jīvitendriyam, manas ca manotijfianam vilalpasya višeshaņam (g 460).

intendring, and tribhavasceshtā in connection with Citta? No doubt the Lankavatara has been found very difficult to understand systematically by all scholars, not only literally but philosophically.

Whatever this may be, the Citta is considered to be pure and immaculate (parisuddhs) in its essential nature1 in the Lankavatara, 1e, it is good and free from evil flowings (kuśala-anāsrava) 2 "The Citta is not separated from habitenergy (vāsanā), nor is the Citta together with habit-energy though it is enwrapped with the latter; there are no marks in it of differentiation. Habit-energy being with the Manovijnana is soiled, and the Citta which is like a robe that is perfectly white does not shine out on account of habitenergy. As it is declared by me that the sky is neither a reality nor a non-reality, so is the Alaya in the body8 not limited by [the dualism] of being and non-being. When a revulsion (vyāvritti, generally parāvritti) takes place, the Citta is disengaged from turbidity; as it understands all existence, I state that the Citta is the Buddha '4 Being pure or good does not always mean morally pure and good, it means rather logically pure, that is, absolutely free from the dualistic way of reasoning. Therefore, the sutra never tires of repeating that in order to realise the fact of the "Mind-only" the realm of dualities which is the product of false discrimination (vikalpa) must be transcended. False discrimination is the principle of turbidity which hides the truth from being clearly perceived. Buddhahood consists in removing this turbidity of discrimination, for the removing is emancipation and the restoring of the Citta to its original purity. This is known in the Lankavatara as ınner realisatıon (pratyātmādhıgama).

į

¹ P. 221, L 1, 222, L 16; etc

² P 235, l. 5.

^{*} Kaya; this is missing in the Tang translation; the addition does not seem to clarify the context. ⁴ P. 296, gg. 236-239; cf. also p. 358, gg. 750-756.

The Citta and the Alayavijnana and the Atman

Along with the conception of Citta there was that of the Viinana system, and also the deepening of the ego-idea. Early Buddhists denied the reality of an ego-substance. which was in accordance with their psychology, but the idea of ego was not necessarily the same as the assertion of selfwill or egotism, even when self-will was destroyed, the idea remained What was destroyed was the lower self and not the higher self, the smaller self and not the larger self; for the annihilation of the lower and smaller self was only possible through the assertion of the higher and larger one Buddhists never thought of putting an end to whatever might go under the name of self The idea of ego-substance (ātman) was inimical to the development of the higher centre of the individual, nor was it in harmony with the experience of their religious life How is the question of the higher life to be solved, then? Where is it to be placed in the system of the Vijnanas? With this question an absolute Citta came to be separated from the empirical ego, and this absolute Citta to be identified with the Alaya, which was now made the foundation of the whole Vijnana group we have "cittam-ālayavinānam" and this then furnishes the reason of the inner realisation as taking place in the Tathāgata-garbha 2 The philosophers take the Tathāgatagarbha, or the Alayavıjñāna3 for the ego, that is, the lower, narrower, empirical ego, which is, however, far from the teaching of the Buddha The real immaculate ego, suddhisatyātman, going beyond the grasp of relative knowledge, cannot so easily be understood and so readily be asserted as is done by the ignorant We thus read (gg 757-771).

P. 278, g 102 P. 357, g 746

The following equations hold true. the transcendental Citta= Alayavijūāna = Tathāgata-garbha (pp. 278, 225, 223, etc.). Alaya is a psychological term belonging to the Vijūāna system, Tathāgata garbha has a religious connotation; and Citta has been in use since the early days of Buddhism as denoting a certain function of the mind.

"Born or unborn, the Mind always remains pure: those who reason about the existence of an ego-substance—why do they not prove it by illustrations? (744).

"Those who vainly reason without understanding the truth are lost in the jungle of the Vijnanas, running about here and there and trying to justify their view of egosubstance (745).

"The self realised in your inmost consciousness appears in its purity, this is the Tathāgata-garbha which is not the realm of those given up to mere reasoning (746).

"When the Skandhas are analysed, there is that which apprehends and that which is apprehended; by understanding this aspect of relativity, true knowledge is born (747).

"The philosophers think that the Alaya or where the Garbha is oriented, is the seat of thought and one with the self. but such are not the teachings declared [by the Buddhas] (748)

"When these are well discriminated, there is emancipation and seeing into the truth; by moral cultivation and intellectual training the evil passions are abandoned and made pure (749).

"The Citta, pure in its original nature and free from the category of finite and infinite is the undefiled Tathagatagarbha, which is wrongly apprehended by sentient beings (750).

"As the beautiful colour of gold and the brilliancy of a [precious] stone are revealed by purification, so is the Alaya which is hidden in the Skandhas revealed to sentient beings (751).

"The Buddha is neither an individual soul nor the Skandhas, he is the wisdom of non-outflowings (jñānam-anāsravam), and knowing that he is eternal quietude I take refuge in him (752).

"The Citta, pure in its original nature, is united with the minor impurities, Manas, and others, and with the ego this is what is taught by the best of preachers (753). "The Citta is in its original nature pure, but the Manas and others are not, and by them various karmas are accumulated, and as the result there are two sorts of impurities [or defilements] (75±)

"On account of external defilements from the beginningless past the pure self is contaminated; it is like a soiled garment which can be cleansed (755).

"When the garment is unsoiled, or when gold is freed of its defects, they are restored and will not be destroyed; so it is with the self when remedied of its defects (756).

"As an unintelligent man seeks for the abode of sweet sound in the body of the lute, conch-shell, or kettle-drum, so does he look for a soul within the Skandhas (757)

"Inke the gems in the treasure-house or like water under the ground, which are invisible though known to be there, so is the soul in the Skandhas (758).

"While the whole system of the Citta-activity with its proper functions is in union with the Skandhas, the unintelligent fail to comprehend it, so it is also with the soul in the Skandhas (759)

"Like the contents of the womb whose existence is known but invisible, so is with the soul in the Skandhas which is likewise not perceivable to the dull-minded (750).

"As the essence of medicinal herbs, as fire hidden in fuel, so the soul in the Skandhas is not perceived by the dull-minded (761).

"As the unwise fail to see that in all things existent there is the nature of eternity and emptiness, so they do not see the soul in the Skandhas (762)

"If no real self exists, there will be no stages [of Bodhisattvahood], no self-mastery, no psychic power, no anointment of the highest order, no excellent Samādhi (763)

"If the nihilist come and ask, 'If there be the self, show it to me,' the wise one's answer will be 'Show me your own discrimination' (764).

"Those who deny the self are the opponents of the Buddhist teaching, their views are one-sided advocating either 'It is,' or 'It is not'; they are to be rejected by a general session of the Bhikshus (765).

"The doctrine of the self is illuminating, it releases one from the faults of the philosophers, it burns up the forest of selflessness like the fire arising at the end of the world (766).

"In sugar, sugar-cane, candy, honey, dadhi (curd), or tala-oil, there is its own taste; but one who has not tasted it does not comprehend it (767).

"In five different manners the ignorant may search for the self by lifting up the Skandhas, but they fail to see it, while the wise one sees it and is thereby released (768).

"Even by means of knowledge, illustrations, and other things, one is unable to gain an insight just into the Citta; how can one then gain an insight into the signification accumulated in it? (769).

"Not understanding that individuation is due to one mind (citta), the reasoning ones cling to the view that there is no cause, there is no evolving (770).

"The Yogin sees into the mind (citta) and the mind is not seen in the mind, the seeing is born of what is seen, and of what cause is the seen born? (771)."

These passages are to be carefully weighed, for if otherwise they dangerously verge on the doctrine of an individual ego-substance which is persistently denied by Buddhists, Mahayana as well as Hinayana. The main idea is that there is a principle of consciousness from which the whole Vijñāna system evolves and is set in operation, but which is not to be regarded as something individual residing in the five Skandhas Ordinarily, this principle unknown, invisible, and beyond the grasp of the sense-vijñānas is taken for an ego, and unenlightened people try to locate it in the body just as they try to take hold of the pleasant notes that issue from the lute, or of the effective, curative agency that is hidden in a medicinal herb. Apart from the lute, the sound is non-existent; so with the curative quality, it does not exist outside the herb itself. The presence of the principle is to be realised inwardly by intuition and not by a process of analysis. This intuition, in other words, the "wisdom of non-outflowings" (jñānam-anāsravam), constitutes the original nature of the mind which is described in the above quotations as "originally pure" (prakrit-prabhāsvaram). If this is considered something concrete and individual, something separable from and capable of being picked out among objects of particularisation, saying, "Here it is!" this will be resorting to dualistic discrimination which is condemned so much in the Lankāvatāra. At all events it is evident that there was historically a close connection between the ego idea and the evolution of Ālayavijāāna

The following noted stanza quoted whenever there is an allusion to the philosophy of the Yogācāra is taken from the Chinese Sandhanismocana-sūtra.

"The Adana-vijnana is deep and subtle,
Where all the seeds are evolved like a stream,
I do not elucidate this for the ignorant,
For they are apt to imagine it an ego-substance"

When Citta among early Buddhist scholars came to denote "accumulation," Vijnäna, "discrimination," or "representation," and Manas, "deliberation" or "reflection," it was natural for the later psychologists to designate Citta as Alaya or Alayavijnäna as belonging to the general body of various Vijnänas Alaya means "storage" or "treasurehouse," where all the results, called "seeds" (bija), of one's mental and physical activities are hoarded, i e, accumulated, and it does not stand outside the Vijnäna system it is one of them though in the most fundamental sense of the expression. And for this reason the Alaya is liable to be regarded as the ego-substance—the very idea against which Buddhism has been fighting ever since its inception. The Lankāvatāra is thus quite anxious to dispel this confusion

Addna is another name for the Alayavijūdina, meaning "grasping" or "receiving."

In what follows the Buddha answers the question of Mahāmatı as regards the identity of Ātman and Tathāgata-garbha which, as was mentioned before, is the same as Ālayavijūāna.

There is no doubt that this idea of Alayaviñana or Ādānavijnāna or Tathāgata-garbha or Citta caused confusion in the minds of some Mahavana Buddhists who have been brought up in the teaching of Anatman (non-ego). Hence the following question proposed by the Bodhisattva Mahamati.1 "The Tathagata-garbha is mentioned in the text of a sutra and described as thoroughly pure and undefiled in its essential nature, as endowed with the thirty-two marks,2 entering into the physical body of a sentient being, and enveloped within such matter as the Skandhas, Dhatus, and Ayatanas, and soiled with the dirt of greed, anger, folly, and discrimination, [but really] described by the Buddha as eternal, permanent, auspicious, and unchanged. If so, is not this Tathagata-garbha something of the same order as the Atman in the teaching of the philosophers? They teach the Atman as eternal, creator, devoid of attributes, mighty, and ımperishable "

To this question raised by Mahāmati and also cherished by most Bodhisattvas and scholars, the Buddha gives the following answer. "O Mahāmati, the doctrine of Ātman by the philosophers is not the same as my teaching of the Tathāgata-garbha. For what the Tathagatas teach is emptiness (sūnyatā), limit of reality (bhūtakoti), Nirvana, no-birth, no-appearance, no-desire (apranduta), and such other conceptions, with which the Tathāgata-garbha is characterised, and by which the ignorant are saved from the occasion of cherishing a sense of fear about the Buddhist teaching of non-ego, and they are thus finally led by the Tathagatas to the realm of no-discrimination and no-imagery, that is, to the entrance of the Tathāgata-garbha O Mahāmati, Bodhisattvas-Mahāsattvas of the present and the future are warned not to entertain any idea of ego-substance here . ''1

¹ P. 77 et seq.

How did this notion of the Tathagata-garbha being endowed with the thirty-two marks of a great personality get in here? It is all right in the case of a personal Buddha or Tathagata, but how can we make this an attribute of the Tathagata-garbha itself?

This explains how the Buddha came to talk about the Tathagata-garbha and how it differs from the ordinary notion of the ego With the philosophers the ego does not rise above the level of empiricism. The existence of the transcendental ego as maintaind by Buddhists, which apparently contradicts their traditional view of non-ego. is hard to understand for the ignorant as well as for those of the two Vehicles, for especially the latter are used to interpret existence in terms of transitoriness or momentariness This leads to the question how the Alaya or Tathagatagarbha is to be conceived in relation to the doctrine of universal transitoriness Is not the Tathagata-garbha, however skilfully it may be expounded, after all a sort of egosubstance? It now becomes necessary for the Lankavatara to discuss the problem of momentariness in relation to the hypothesis of Tathagata-garbha. This has partially been touched elsewhere, and let it suffice here to quote the following stanzas2 which are by the way wrongly placed after the paragraph on the six Paramitas instead of before it in all the texts of the Lankāvatāra

"Existence (samskrsta) is discriminated by the ignorant as empty, transient, and momentary, and the nature of momentariness as they discriminate is illustrated by a stream, lamp-light, and seed (9)

"[But really] nothing is seen working at any moment, all is solitary, there is no [birth and] destruction, nothing is ever born—this is the Buddha's view of momentariness (10)

"Birth and death follow each other without interruption—this is not the teaching of the Buddha for the ignorant,

* Pp. 238-239.

¹ For the continuation of this passage, see pp. 138-9 of the present work.

[that birth and death] are uninterruptedly successive in all things is due to discrimination moving on in all the paths of existence (11)

"With ignorance as cause there is the evolving of all mental activities; [but] where do they get their anchoring while there is no birth of form $(r\bar{u}pa)$? (12)

"An uninterrupted continuity breaks and there evolves another mind; while form has not yet been set up, depending on what will it [mind] be evolved? (13).

"As long as the mind is evolved depending on it, the cause is not the true one, not being sufficient in itself [as a cause] how can one know of anything that suffers destruction momentarily? (14).

"The attainment of the Yogins, gold, the Buddha's relies (śarīra), and the mansions in Abhāsvara Heaven,—these are indestructible from any worldly cause (15).

"Permanent are the truths attained and the knowledge realised by the Buddhas; [permanent is] the Bhikshu-nature and his attainment; how is momentariness seen here? (16).

"Visible objects ($r\bar{u}pa$) are like the Gandharva's eastle, māyā, and other [suchlike non-entities], and no momentariness is here the elements are not realities, and how can we speak of their power to create? (17)."²

I have said that the Alaya and the Tathagata-garbha are one and the same thing, and that the one is more of psychological significance than the other, but the Lankavatāra sometimes seems to distinguish one from the other, that is, to consider the Alayavijāna as presenting the impurity-phase of the Tathagata-garbha Read the following which also sheds a side-light on the question of the ego

"Mahāmati asks. Tell me, O Blessed One, concerning

 1 The gathas 13 and 14 are obscure, and the translation is after the T ang which gives the best rendering.

The definite meaning of the last gaths is difficult to get at, and the translation is only tentative. It seems to mean that things existent and the so-called elements being like phantom creations as they have no reality in themselves, we cannot even speak of their momentary nature.

the evolution and disappearance of the Skandhas, Dhātus, and Āyatanas If there is no Ātman, what is it that is evolved and disappears? The ignorant who, stationing themselves on things that are evolved and disappear, do not think of extinguishing pain, may not seek after Nirvana [They must therefore be enlightened on the subject] Whereupon the Buddha answers The Tathāgata-garbha contains in itself causes both good and not-good, and from which are generated all the paths of existence 1.

"When there takes place a revulsion [in the Alayavijnal by gradually ascending the steps of Bodhisattvahood. a man will no more be led astray by the methods and views of other philosophers Then stationing himself on the stage of Bodhisattvahood known as the Immovable, he gains the passage leading to the bliss that accrues from the ten kinds of Samādhi. Supported by the Buddhas in Samādhi and reviewing the wonderful truths taught by the Buddhas as well as his own yows [which he made in the beginning of his career], he does not abide in the limit of reality (bhūtakoti) absorbed in the bliss of Samadhi, he has realised the supreme state in his own consciousness, and by the methods of discipline that do not belong to Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas and philosophers, he gains the path belonging to the holy family of Bodhisattvas at the tenth stage, and also the willbody of knowledge which is above all [conscious] strivings after a Samādhı For this reason let the Tathagata-garbha known under the name of Alayavııñana be purified by those Bodhisattvas who are seeking after something distinctive

"O Mahāmati, if there is no Tathāgata-garbha known under the name of Ālayavijāāna, no evolution, no disappearance will ever take place. But there is, both among the ignorant and the wise, evolution and disappearance While abiding in the bliss that accrues from the enjoyment of the actual life and supreme state realised in their consciousness, the Yogins do not abandon their discipline and hard labouring O Mahāmati, this realm of Tathāgata-garbha-Ālayavijñāna is pure in its original nature indeed, but appears devoid of purity because of the false views and reasonings entertained by all Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers, which defile the light by their external defilements. This is not the case with the Tathagatas. As to them, they see [the Tathāgata-garbha] as if it were an āmalaka fruit in their own palm

For the passage following, see p 193 et seq of this work

"O Mahāmati, I inspired Queen Śrīmālā" and also other Bodhisattvas who are endowed with a fine, subtle, pure intelligence to expound in a text of discourse the meaning of the Tathagata-garbha known under the name of Alayavijuana, so that the Śravakas, who are attached to the [Alaya's] evolution with the seven Vijnanas, might see into The realm of the egolessness of things (dharmanairātmya). Tathagatahood which was elucidated by Queen Śrimālā under the inspiration of the Buddha is not the domain of reasoning which belongs to Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers. The realm of Tathagatahood indeed belongs to another realm where [the teaching that] the Tathagatagarbha is the Alayavijñāna is understood, and this is meant for the Bodhisattvas-Mahāsattvas who like yourself being endowed with a fine, subtle, penetrating intellect and understanding, know how to conform themselves to the meaning, and not for those other philosophers, Śrāvakas, and Pratyekabuddhas, who are attached to words and texts of instruction. Therefore, O Mahāmati, may you and other Bodhisattvas-Mahāsattvas have a thorough understanding as to the realm of all Tathagatahood and [the teaching that] the Tathagatagarbha is the Alayavijnana so that they may discipline themselves in this and not remain contented with mere listening [to the teaching]."2

²There is a sutra bearing her name in the Chinese Tripitaka, in which the doctrine of Tathägatä-garbha is explained more fully. Prince Shōtoku wrote a fine commentary on it as early as a.d. 609.

Pp 221-223 The whole passage is concluded with the gathas which appear on p 195 of the present work.

False Discrimination, No-birth, and Causation

Enough has already been said about the Lankāvatāra's conception of habit-energy or memory (vāsanā) and the principle of individuation (vishaya). Let us now proceed to see what is meant by discrimination (vikalpa) and in what relation this stands to the doctrine of "Mind-only," and also to the Buddhist idea of no-birth (anutpāda) which is characteristic of the transcendental Citta The following quotation may be illuminating

"Inspired by the spiritual power of the Buddha, Mahamati asked him again What is the distinctive feature of the Buddhist doctrine of no-birth and no-annihilation? For do not all the philosophers teach also that the creative agents are neither born nor annihilated, which corresponds to the Buddhist teaching that Akāśa, Apratisamkhyānirodha, and Nirvāna-dhātu1 are not subject to birth, nor to annihilation? The philosophers too describe the world as having been produced by causation in the hands of creators, while the Buddha describes the world as being born depending upon ignorance, desire, karma, and discrimination Whether creation by causation, or dependence, the difference is in names only. Thus both the Buddha and the philosophers proceed to teach the birth of external objects by external causation, and thus there is no distinction to be made between the Buddha's and the philosophers' theory. The philosophers assert that the nine substances containing such as atom (anu), Pradhāna, Iśvara, and Prajāpatı are neither born nor annihilated, while according to the Buddha all existence is

These are what is known as the three forms of Asamskinta, "things not-made" in contradistinction to Samskinta, "things made" Akäśa is space or vacuity, Apralisamkhyānirodha, hterally meaning "fanishilation effected without premeditated efforts," is a state of pure nothingness due to the want of proper conditions, while Nirvāna is an annibilation purposely effected by intellect and will, which is therefore Pratisamkhyānirodha subject neither to birth nor to annihilation, and neither being nor non-being is attainable. The elements again, according to the Buddha are said to be indestructible, and their substance is neither born nor annihilated, while they circulate through the various paths of existence, they retain their sale nature. But this distinction concerning the elements and their transformations is also uphald by all the philosophers as well as by the Buddha himsel. For this reason, the Buddhist doctrine has nothing distinctive. If there is anything distinctive, pray tell me this distinguishing point as unlike the doctrine held by the philosophers. If there is nothing distinctive in the Buddhist doctrine. The philosophers may also be said to belong to the group of Buddless because of their doctrine of causes that are neither born nor armihilated. It was stated by the Buddha that not more than one Tarhagata would appear in the world at one time and at one locality; but if what goes before obtains, there are Tathagatas more than one because there is no distinctive point in the Buddha's own doctrine."

To this answers the Buddha: "O Mahamati, my doctrine of no-birth and no-annihilation is not the same as that held by the philosophers, nor as the doctrine of birth and impermanence. For what reason? According to the philosophers, the theory of self-substance is upheld, and there really obtains something that is neither born nor transformed. But mine is above the category of being and non-being, and abandoning [the notion of] birth and destruction, I talk of that which is neither existent nor non-existent, that which has no more existence than the multitudinousness of things that appear like maya or in a dream. What is meant by 'not existing'? It is meant that the self-nature [or self-substance] of things existent with individual marks

The Sansinit text has here, "because of being-non-being-work-grasping," which is missing in Trang and Strag. Wei has: "Why? Because there is no difference according to the doctrine, as to the causes that are and those that are not, and there is no inlacked in what the Buddha teaches."

and graspable [by the senses] has no reality (bhāva), because they are perceived and not perceived, they are grasped and not grasped For this reason, all things existent are [really] neither existent nor non-existent. When, however, it is realised that what is presented to one's view is no more than the Mind itself, one knows how to establish oneself where discrimination ceases to rise, and the world stops its labour-The ignorant make effort to discriminate, but the wise [The ignorant] because of discrimination commit the error of taking non-existent things for realities world is like the Gandharva's castle or a magically-created It is like the case of a childish-minded person who. seeing magically-created people, a multitude of beings, and merchants going in and out of the Gandharva's castle, take them for realities, imagining, 'They are going in, they are coming out,' though in fact there is no going-in or coming-This is indeed due to their discrimination out whatever which leads them to the erroneous viewing of existence, and so with the ignorant, their view of birth or of no-birth is an error. Whether things are created (samskrita) or uncreated (asamskrita), they are no more than magicallycreated figures, and of magically-created figures neither birth nor annihilation may be predicated, for no [category of] existence and non-existence is applicable to them all things in the world (sarvadharma), they have nothing to do with birth and destruction Only the ignorant cherishing the ideas grown out of falsehood imagine their birth and By falsehood It is not so with the wise annihilation (vstatham) it is meant that the self-nature of existence is not discriminated as it is in itself. It is no other than this. When it is discriminated in any other way [than yathabhūtam], there is an attachment to what is taken for the self-nature of existence, and one fails to see the Solitary (vivikta), and because of this failure there is no release from discrimination For this reason, O Mahāmati, the view based on no-appearance (animita) is superior to that of appearance, for the latter causes birth (jamahetu) and is not preferable. Noappearance means the ceasing of discrimination, and I state that Nirvana means no-birth. O Mahāmati, by Nirvana I mean the seeing into the abode where the meaning [of existence] is understood in its truthfulness, the abandoning of all discrimination which takes place in the mind and what belongs to it, and the realisation of the supreme wisdom which lies in the immost consciousness of the Tathagata: this I call Nirvana."

Proofs for the "Mind-only"

So far no special efforts have been made to prove why there is Mind itself and no external realities. The Lańkāvatāra is not a philosophical treatise and naturally does not profess to prove anything specifically in connection with the teaching or statement it propounds. But as we peruse the sutra, we cannot help coming across certain attempts at advancing proofs for its main thesis: svacittadriśyamātram. We will try to gather up these attempts already alluded to, though sporadically in previous pages, and present them in a more systematic way

1. That things are not what they seem is proved from the analogy of a dream and magical creations 2 When Rāvaṇa, king of Lankā, saw images of the Buddha all around him, which later disappeared, he thought, "Could this be a dream? or a magical phenomenon like the castle of the Gandharvas?" He reflected again, "This is no other than the projection of my own mental creations." As we do not truly understand things as they are, we separate the seen from the seer, thus producing a world of dualities. "Where there is no false discrimination, one really sees the Buddha." As long as we are in the dream, we do not realise that we are all dreaming, that we are slaves of false discrimination. For it is only when we are awakened from it that we know where we have been The analogy of dream is quite a strong argument against the reality of an external world, but it is not at all effective for them who are actually dreaming

¹ Pp 197–200

Allusions to this analogy abound throughout the sutra, but see PP 9, 56, 85, 90 110, 199, 214, etc.

So it is with magical creations. The Indians have been noted for their skill in the art of conjuration, and there are no people among whom the use of mantrams and dharanis is so universal. Hence the frequent allusions to magic in the literature of Mahayana and Hinayana Buddhism. The magician is so wonderfully proficient in making the spectators see objects where there are none whatever. As long as they are under his spell, there is no way of making them realise that they are the victims of hypnotism.

The favourite analogies besides the dream and magne that are resorted to in the Lankāvatāra to show the imreality of objects seen externally and internally are ¹ (1) paintings, (2) a hair-circle to the dim-eyed, (3) a revolving fire-wheel, (4) a bubble looking like a sun, (5) reflected trees in water, (6) images in a mirror, (7) an echo, (8) fata morgana, (9) a mechanical man, (10) a floating cloud, and (11) lightning

All things are relative and have no svabhāva (substance) which would eternally and absolutely distinguish Things are nothing but relations, one from another analyse them into their component elements and there will be nothing left And are not all relations the constructions of the mind? Thus the Citta seeing itself reflected is due to reflection and discrimination. so far no harm is done, for the mental constructions are perceived as such and there are no The trouble begins at once wrong judgments about them when they are adhered to as externally real, having their own values independent of the valuing mind itself why the sutra emphasises the importance of looking at things yathabhutam, as they really are When they are thus looked at yathabhutam, they are no more than the mind itself. The principle of relativity creates a world of individuals, but when it is transcended, there is Mind itself.

¹ P 92 et seq

3. Names and images are mere signs (samketa)1 and have no reality whatever (abhāva) in themselves, for they belong to the imagination (parikalpita). Imagination is another name for false discrimination, which is the mischievous agency of creation. The fact of One Mind (ekacittam) is thus buried in the differentiation of individual existences 2 Hence salvo hi tradhātukaduhkha-vonsh. 8 Again. "according to words they discriminate wrongfully and make statements concerning reality; and because of these statements they are burned in hell." How much we owe in our daily intercourse to words! and yet what grave consequences, not only logically but spiritually, we suffer from words! The light of the mind is altogether beclouded in and with words The mind has, indeed, created words, and now taking these words for realities independent of their creator, it gets entangled in them, and, as the sutra says, is swallowed up in the waves of transmigration.

"The ignorant take what is presented by the mind itself for objective realities which do not really exist, and because of this wrong representation, discrimination is falsified. This, however, is not the case with the wise. The latter know that names and signs and symbols are to be taken for what they are intended from the beginning, while the ignorant cling to them as if they were realities and let their minds blindly follow up this clinging. Thus, they get attached to a variety of forms and entertain the view that there are really 'I' and 'mine', and, by so doing, hold fast to appearances in their multiplicity. Because of these attachments, their higher wisdom is obstructed; greed, anger, and infatuation are stirred up, and all kinds of karma are com-

¹ P 225

º P 770.

Words are the source of pain in the triple world. P. 186, l. 9. P. 156, lines 3-4.

As these attachments are repeatedly committed, the ignorant find themselves hopelessly enwrapped within the cocoons woven out of their wrong discriminations are swallowed up in the waves of transmigration, and do not know how to go ahead in the work of emancipation for they turn round and round like the water-wheel. It is owing to their ignorance, indeed, that they fail to realise that all things, like maya, the shining mote, or the moonlight on water, have no self-substance, that there is nothing in them to take hold of as 'me' and 'mme', that all things are unreal (abhūta) born of wrong discrimination; that [ultimate reality is above the dualism of marked and marking, and the course of birth, staying, and disappearance, that all that is manifested is due to the discriminating by one's own mind of what is presented to it. Imagining that [the world] is born of Isvara, Time, Atom, or Universal Soul, the ignorant are addicted to names and forms thereby allowing themselves to be swayed by them '11

4 "[That which is unborn] has nothing to do with causation, there is no creator, all is nothing but the construction (vyavasthāna) of the mind, as I teach that which is unborn "2" That there is no creator such as Iśvara or Pradhāna or Brahma is one of the principal theses of Mahayana Buddhism According to the Lankāvatāra, the notion of a creator is due to discrimination, which always tends to lead the mind in a wrong direction. When it is seen that all is cittamātra, that which is unborn will present itself instead. Mahāmati was somewhat sceptical about this, wondering if the Master's teaching was not after all similar to that of the philosophers, as was quoted a few pages back, and after this quotation the Buddha goes on to repeat more or less the same idea in the gāthās as usual 4

"In order to remove [the idea of] birth and to attain

² P. 225, after the sense

P. 201 g 96.

³ See supra, p 264 et seq

⁴ Pp 200-201.

[that of] no-birth, I teach the doctrine of no-cause which is not comprehended by the ignorant (86).

"That all is unborn does not mean that things do not exist, but that they are like the Gandharva's castle, like a dream, and māyā, and that their existence is without cause (87).

"Tell me how things are in their self-nature unborn and empty. When existence is freed from aggregations, no intelligence will take hold of it, and therefore I declare that it is empty, unborn, and without self-substance (88).

"Each individual aggregation is seen [as real], but it is no [real] existence as is maintained by the philosophers, for when analysed there is no aggregation (89).

"Dream, hair-circle, māyā, Gandharva's [castle], and mirage—they are seen without causal reality; so with the world of particulars (90).

"By suppressing cause-theory, the no-birth is accomplished; when the no-birth is accomplished, my eyes do not perish; when no-cause theory is announced, the philosophers are horrified (91).

"How, by what cause, why, and where is birth [to be regarded as] without cause? When existence (sainskrita) is regarded as neither causal nor non-causal, we turn away from the view of those who hold that there are [actual] birth and destruction (92)

"Do we speak of no-birth because of non-existence? or because it is to be regarded as mutually dependent? or because of existence being mere name with no reality [behind it]? Pray tell me (93).

"No-birth—not because of non-existence, nor because existence is to be regarded as mutually dependent, nor because there is a name for existence, nor because name has no reality [behind it] (94)

"That all is unborn does not belong to the realm of Śravakas, Pratyekabuddhas, or philosophers, or of those Bodhisattvas who are still on the seventh stage (95). "I state that all is unborn, because [such predicates as] cause or dependence are mapplicable here, because no creatorship is to be assumed here, the no-birth is constructed on [the truth of] the 'Mind-only' (96) "

The logical necessity of reaching the ultimate notion of unity has made the author of the Lankavatara accept the doctrine of "Mind-only" instead of that of "matter-only" When no creator is recognised and all forms of dualism are set aside as not in accord with the real state of things. there remain two ways for achieving the unification of thought, realism and idealism, and as the Lankavatara denies the reality of an external world (vishaua), or outside objects1 (bāhyabhāva) that are characterised with multitudinousness (vicitrata), the doctrine of "Mind-only" seems to be the natural conclusion The philosophical thesis of the present sutra is thus an absolutely idealistic monism take cognisance of the manifoldness of an objective world is relative knowledge (viinana), while to rise above this cognisance is transcendental knowledge (iñāna or prajītā) "2 Again, this transcendental knowledge is not within the reach of the two Vehicles, as it, indeed, goes beyond the realm of beings, the knowledge of Śrāvakas moves by attaching itself to beings which they take for realities, while the pure transcendental knowledge of the Tethagata penetrates into the truth of the "Mind-only"3

Thus it is evident that as far as the Lankāvatāra is concerned the mind (citta) or self-mind (svacita) is the principle of unity, while the objective world disturbs this unity and makes the mind, thus disturbed, perceive manifoldness within its own body. It then clings to these individualising disturbances as real, thus losing its original

į

ı

١

² Asangalakshanam jäänam vishaya-vaioitrya-sanga-lakshanam oo vijäänam (p 157, l. 14)
⁸ P 158, g 43

¹ Na ca bāhya-bhāva-lakshana-varcitrya-patitam anyatra svacitam eva (p 212, II 9-10) Bāhya-bhāva-'nabhyupagamāt tribhava-citamātro-'padeśād vicitra-lakshanā-'nupadeśāt (p 208, 1 13) This idea appears throughout the sutra

purity or unity altogether in them. This is the source of spiritual tribulations.

6. The strongest of all the proofs that can be advanced for the statement that the world is Mind itself (tribhavasvacitamātram), is that of intuitive knowledge (pratyaksha). While this is what is final in all form of conviction, speculative or practical, the force is especially strongly felt in religious truths, which are not founded upon reasoning but upon immediate perception So with the Lankavatara, its thesis is derived from its immediacy and not from its intellectual precision Paramartha, the ultimate principle of knowledge, is not dependent upon anything logically reasoned it is "I see and I believe." Paramartha is what is realised within oneself by means of the supreme wisdom (āryanāna) of the Tathagata, or rather it is the supreme wisdom itself, for the awakening of this wisdom means the grasping of the ultimate principle, which is the same thing as the realisation within one's inmost consciousness of the truth that there is nothing in the world but Mind. This truth is beyond the realm of discursive knowledge.1 This special knowledge which may be called intuitive is variously referred to throughout the Lankavatara. To mention just a few: parijāā,2 abhisambodha,3 svapratyātmabuddh. vicārāparapraņeya, adhigamāvabodha, yāthātathya-mudrā, nirābhāsabuddhi, samatā-jñāna, etc., etc., all go to describe the kind of knowledge which sees into the truth of the "Mind-only." "The wise do not cherish in that which is confused any thought either perverted or not perverted; O Mahamati, if they form any notion at all about it, there will be no supreme wisdom (āryaīnāna) taking hold

¹ Paramārthas tu mahāmate āryazāāna-pratyātmā-gati-gamyo na vägvikalpa-buddhi-gocarah tena vikalpo nodbhävayati paramärtham. P. 87, n. 12-13.

P. 49, 1. 7.

³ P. 79, l. 5. P. 133, 11, 10-11. ⁶ P. 133, l.11.

P. 138, 1 14. P. 123, 1, 1,

⁷ P. 166, L 3. P. 135, 1. 7.

of reality (vastu) "By this we know that knowledge that takes hold of the ultimate cannot be brought into a system of categories, for if anything is to be said about it, it turns into an idea of it and the real thing is no more there, and what is left behind is nothing but confusion or delusion (bhrants). "Attachment to realities as having self-substance is produced from not knowing (anavabodha) that there is nothing but that which is [projected and] perceived by one's own mind "2 Avabodha is really "awakening", something is awakened within the consciousness, and it is at once recognised that The awakening is above the dualism of "to be" all is Mind (sat) and "not to be" (asat), the latter being due to false The awakening is, therefore, the discrimination (vikalpa) sight of the ultimate principle of existence as it is in itself and not determined by any form of confusion or otherness This is what is meant by "to see yathabhūtam"

It is by this awakening which takes place in the immost consciousness, not as the result of logical inference but as self-realisation, that the Buddha makes the following statement "Between my enlightenment and my Nirvana I have not uttered a world Indeed, not to say a word is the teaching of the Buddha"

The Lankāvatāra goes on further to state that there is a twofold hidden meaning in the teaching of the Buddha, and when this is understood all is understood. What are the two? Reality as realised in one's immost consciousness (pratyātmadharmatā), and reality as abiding since eternity (paurāṇasthitidharmatā) These two realities are not two but one, which is to say, the truth subjectively perceived is the truth in objective existence, and the "Mind-only" is meant to designate this fundamental unity and purity of all things, uncontaminated by bhrānti, vikalpa, viparyāsa (perversion), etc. In this unity and purity all the Buddhas are

P 107 P 100, ll 4-5

<sup>Pp 144, 240
P 143
See for instance p. 106, hne 15.</sup>

one, and also all sentient beings if they are only enlightened and awakened to this fundamental truth.

The following from the Lankavatara is the most significant passage in this connection where the logic and the psychology of the present sutra are perfectly synthesised in the intuitive knowledge or the inner realisation of all the Tathagatas of the past, present, and future.1

"What is meant by reality as abiding since eternity? It is reality that is in me since eternity; it is like gold or silver or pearl that lies buried in a mine. O Mahāmati gardless of the appearance or the non-appearance of the Tathagata, the realm of the Dharma endures, the reality [or that which constitutes the essence] of all things endures, there is the continuity of the Dharma, there is the fixedness of the Dharma. It is, O Mahāmati, like unto a passage-way leading to an ancient city. O Mahāmati, suppose there is a man roaming about in the wilderness, who descries a perfect passage-way leading to an ancient city. He proceeds to go into that city, and entering there and resting there he enjoys all the pleasant doings that are going on in the city. Now do you think, O Mahamati, that the passage-way leading to the city and its manifold affairs were constructed by that man? Said Mahāmati, No, sire, O Blessed One And the Blessed One continued, Just so, O Mahamati, the reality innerly attained by myself and the Tathagatas endures; it is the continuity of the Dharma, it is the fixedness of the Dharma, it is the so-ness (tathatā), real-ness (bhūtatā), and true-ness (satyatā), of things."

There is a reality (dharmata) that endures, it is the realm beyond the ken of discrimination (vikalpa); it is the mind itself but freed from the entanglements of speculation and imagination; it reveals itself through our empirical consciousness when our empirical consciousness goes beyond itself, that is, when it transcends dualism Dharmata or reality, then, is no other than the supreme wisdom (arya-jāāna) realised inwardly by and in oneself (pratyātmā-dhigama). When this realisation comes to one, no proofs are now needed for the doctrine of "Mind-only" As Zen declares, it is like drinking water yourself you know without being told by others whether it is cold or warm

¹ Pp. 143-144.

Some Concluding Remarks

Having enumerated these considerations in the Lankavatara that lead to the thought of the "Mind-only," let us make this remark in the way of concluding this part of the present chapter. It is this. The Lankavatara was not written with the view of establishing a philosophical thesis to be called pure idealistic monism. its central motive was to make us realise that enlightenment comes when we are detached from the tyranny of language and discrimination, when we enter into the realm of anasrava (non-leakage or non-outflowing),1 when, going beyond all philosophical reasonings, we stand on the inner ground of consciousness and shine out in This being the case, as I have our own inner brightness already remarked elsewhere, it would be unreasonable of us to expect anything systematically or logically thoroughgoing in the Lankāvatāra Even when all the threads of logic are found in confusion, the Lankavatara will still insist on the doctrine of "Mind-only," saying that it is a fact of immediate perception and that enlightenment or spiritual freedom comes upon one after realising this fact within one-It will then be the business of the philosophers to self.

'leakage' according to the Chinese translators It has a technical sense in Buddhism and denotes anything intellectual or affective that cozes out of one's mind having corrupted its purity. Where there are no such defiling outflows, the mind enjoys its native scienty and transcendental unity. This is the realm of the wise. When on the contrary there is a constant oozing of discrimination and attachment, one has no hope for emancipation. The object of the Buddhist life therefore is to dry up this source of evil filterings, which are generally enumerated as four Lama (desire to have), bhava (will to live), dyight; (intellection), and avidya (ignorance) logically demonstrate that fact and not to deny it or reject it. If we feel cold when it snows, the scientist will have to explain the fact and not reject it as being empirically impossible. The rejection or denial in such a case means intellectual suicide.

It is evident that the mind regarded here as the unitive principle of experience is not our empirical mind, and, naturally, it is variously designated by the author of the Lankavatāra as it is observed from various points of reference. Besides those already mentioned such as paramārtha, paurānasthitidharmatā, pratyātmadharmatā, Buddhatā, etc., we give, below, some more synonyms and descriptive notions of the ultimate ground of existence

- 1 Vikalpa-vivikta-dharma, truth that is detached from discrimination.
- 2 Pratyātmādhigama-višesha-lakshana, an excellent state of consciousness attained inwardly by oneself,²
- 3. Jäänam subhamsamudäcära-varjitam, pure knowledge possessed by the Tathagata, which is free from all [consciousness of 1 action:³
- 4 Svabhāvam ekam dešemi tarka-vijāapti-varjitam, I teach one self-nature that is beyond the ken of reasoning and representation 4
- Svoyam evädhigata-yāthātathya-vivikta-dharma, solitary truth of "thus-ness" realised by oneself.⁵
- 6. Arya-jñāna-svabhāva-vastu, the supreme wisdom constituting the ultimate fact of existence.6
- 7. Tathāgata-svapratyātma-āryajñāna-adhegama, realisation by the Tathagata of supreme wisdom in his own immost consciousness.

This phrase appears throughout the autra. Very frequently it is not prefixed with tathagata, nor with sea (own), but simply pratyatmaryajiana

- 8 Tattva, "thatness," or tathatā or tathātva, "thusness" or "suchness"
- 9 Yathābhūtārthasthānadarśana, the view established on the truth of suchness 1
- 30 Samyagjñā, right knowledge which is one of the five categories (dharma)
- 11. Narābhāsa-gocara, realm of no-shadows 2

I cannot conclude this study without referring, though casually, to the difference between the doctrine of Cittamātra and that of Vijnaptimātra (or Vijnanamātra), the latter being the thesis of the Yogācāra school of Buddhism which was founded principally by Asanga and Vasubandhu In 1925, Professor Sylvain Lévi published Sthiramati's commentaries on the Vijnapti-mätratäsiddhi by Vasubandhu, which were discovered by him in Nepal, and we have at present two Japanese translations of it one by Dr Junjiro Takakusu and the other by Dr Unrai Wogihara Besides these two most important texts of the Yogacara, Professor Lévi sometime ago (1907) published another Yogācāra text known as Sūtrālamkāra with his French translation This is ascribed to Asanga Thus furnished with the principal text-books of the Vijnanamatra doctrine of Mahayana Buddhism, scholars are now able to ask How is the Cittamatra of the Lankāvatāra to be distinguished from the Vijnānamatra? Or are they the same, only differently designated? The following is given more to elucidate the Lankavatara position than to give a definite answer to the question. It is a most significant question deserving a fuller treatment than we may discuss here 8

The doctrine persistently maintained in the Lankāvatāra is Cittamātra or Cittadriśyamātra, and not Vijūāna- or Vijūapti-mātra, which, according to Asanga and Vasuban-

¹ P 200, 1, 6

P. 226, 1, 13

The subject was cursorily touched upon elsewhere (pp 181-182) in the present Studies

dhu, is "Idam sarvam vijnaptimātrakam," meaning by idam that which is discriminated as "This is the self" and "That is an external reality," that is, this world where the subject is distinguished from the object, or, to use Buddhist terminology, the triple world including both samskrita and asamskrita. It is true that Citta is quite frequently identified with Vijūāna or Vijūapti as in the following gāthā, in which this identification is explicitly referred to:

"Mind(citta), discrimination, representation(vijflapti), the will (manas), consciousness (vijnāna), the storage (ālaua), that which makes the triple world.—all these are synonyms of mind (citta)."2 But when the word "Cittamātra" is used, this Citta has a specific sense to be distinguished from the empirical mind which functions as Manas and Vijnana. As I have reneatedly remarked, the Citta in the Lankavatara is the principle of mentality, and when it is said that there is the "Mind-only." this mind includes not only the empirical mind but that which constitutes the very basis of discrimination. The mind is what is left behind when all forms of discrimination are rejected as leading to spiritual bondage and defilement. It is thus something that has been here even prior to all discrimination, that is, even before the duality of subject and object had come to exist. The Lankavatara does not advocate nihilism pure and simple; it trues to take hold of somewhat beyond this world of particularisation. When one has actually taken hold of it by sheer act of intuition which is made possible by the working of non-discriminative wisdom (avikalpa-jñāna),3 or supreme wisdom (āryajñāna),4 or superior knowledge (prajnā) in the inmost recesses of consciousness (pratyātmagocara), the Lankāvatāra calls it the Mind (citta). And as there is nothing subjective or objective besides this Mind, the Cittamatra or "Mind-only" theory is now positively

Trimsikāvijāapti-kārikāh, verse 17.

^{* &}quot;Sagāthakam," g 459. 每分別智 * 建每 established. The philosophy, if there is any such thing in the Lankāvatāra, is ontology and not epistemology Whereas the doctrine of Vijnaptimātra is epistemological.

The Yogācāra school is regarded as advocating indiscriminately the Vijnanamatra or the Vijnaptimatra, as if the two terms meant the same thing Exactly stated, however, it seems to me that the Vijnaptimatra is not to be confused with the Vijnanamatra; for, in the first place, the Trimsikavijnapti-kārikā which is the main text of the School, written by Vasubandhu, speaks of Vijnaptimatra and not of Vijnanamatra In the Chinese translation 點 (shih) is often used for both vijnapti and vijnana. which causes confusion. Both terms come from the same root $1 na, to know, and vijnapti means "made known." "indicated." "named," "represented"; while vijnana is "knowing," or "act of knowing," or "knowledge" Thus vijapti is something marked, named, designated, represented, and one can most logically infer that "he who sees that all is 'name-only' sees that In the Chinese Lankavatara all is vijāaptimātra." (T'ang), the word is rendered as 說 (talk), 表示 (indication), 施設 (construction), 假名 (unreal or provisionary name), 假說 (provisionary talk), from which we can see that the Vijnaptimātra is not the Vijnanamātra. So we have in the Trimśika (26), "So long as the Vijnana does not abide in Vijnaptimatratva, there is no ceasing of the remorse [which arises from] the twofold grasping 122 Again, "His mind abides in names because he then sees that all is name only; and as he abides in names, what is attained by means of representations (vijfiapti) is cut off Then he reaches the realm where there is no attainment as he goes on in his reflection; when he is [thus] liberated from all his hindrances, he attains supreme sovereignty."3

The main contention of the Vijnaptımātra theory 1s that

¹ Sütrālamkāra, edited by Lévi, p 67.

² That is, a dualistic view of existence

² Quoted in Trimsika, p. 42

all that is thought of as reality, as having self-substance, is no more than name, that names are our own subjective creations and have no corresponding realities, that because we have so particularised and so named, or so "indicated," or so "labeled," or so "made known," we see all these particularised, individual objects, mental as well as physical, and yet we fail to realise this, imagining all the time that the world of particulars is final reality and worth while getting attached to and made the object of desperate longing. Verse 28 of the Trimśika, therefore, declares that "when the Vijnāna takes no hold on an objective world' it abides in the Vijnāptimātratva, for when there is nothing to be grasped, there is no grasping." This is the gist of the theory of Vijnāptimātra as presented by Asanga and Vasubandhu.

In the Lankavatara no reference is made to the Vijnapti2 except probably once, but rather to the Prajuaptimatra view of the world: and even in the latter case the reference is negligible, considering that the weight of the whole discourse in the Lankāvatāra falls on the Cittamātra and not on the Prajūaptimātra or Vijūaptimātra or Nāmamātra or Vikalpamātra.3 The sutra does not linger long on the question of the world being merely a name or a representation, but it exhausts its powers of persuasion to convince the reader that the world is Mind itself, and that it is only by realising this truth in one's own inner consciousness that enlightenment ensues. The transcendental mind, or Mind itself, or "Mind-only" is thus made the chief subject of the text. In this it varies from the teaching of the Yogācāra: the latter emphasises the process of transformation which takes place in the Alayavijūāna, and it naturally makes most of the

Laterally, "that which is taken hold of."

Excepting the "Sagathakam" which we have reason to suspect is a later production than the main text. In the "Sagathakam" there are references to the Vijūsptimātra, for instance, in verses 44 and 77.

Vikalpamātram tribhavam (p. 186); Vijāaptimātra-vyavasthānam (p 169); prajāaptimātram tribhavam (p.168); prajāaptimātram katham (pp. 26, 33). See also p. 181, of the present Studies.

aspect of existence which is to be considered merely idea-It does not go further on to say that there is the "Mind-only" as the principle of unification in which all representations (vijāapti). cogitations (manana), discriminations (vikalpa), and a world of particulars (vishaua), leave no traces According to Sthiramati's commentary, the Trimśika is regarded as written for those who do not understand truthfully (uathābhūtam) what is meant by Cittamatram, but this does not mean that the Cittamatra is the Viinaptimatra The former may be based on the latter, or we can say that when the Cittamatra is declared as a fact of intuitive knowledge, the doctrine of Vijnaptimatra logically follows from this realisation The Trunsika may thus form a part of the Lankavatara's philosophical foundation, but we must not overlook the fact that there is a conceptual difference between the theme of the Lankavatara and the Yogācāra's psychological or rather epistemological interpretation of existence

The natural course of procedure here on the part of the writer would be now to write about the relation between the Lankāvatāra and The Awakening of Faith in the Mahāyāna, which is usually ascribed to Aśvaghosha, as the latter almost seems an attempt at systematising the philosophy of the Lankāvatāra But as the writer expects to publish a second revised English translation of this most important Mahayana text-book, he passes by the opportunity of touching upon the subject in this chapter.

2 THE CONCEPTION OF NO-BIRTH (anutpāda)

The Prajnaparameta and the Lankavatara

The Prajūāpāramstā-sūtra (ashtasāhasrikā) opens with a chapter on the life of the Bodhisattva, which is based on the realisation of transcendental knowledge (prajūā), and a gist of it reads something like this.

Subhūti is asked by the Buddha to teach the Bodhisattva how to attain the perfection of Prajūā, to which Subhūti answers. There is no such being as a Bodhisattva on whom a man can lay his hand, nor is there anything to be known as Prajūā (transcendental knowledge); hence to talk about the attainment of its perfection is meaningless. In fact, to think or imagine that there is something doing or going on is against the true notion of Mind (citta) which is pure, that is, absolutely beyond all forms of functioning. That which is known as mind in discursive reasoning is no-mind (acitta), though without this, Mind cannot be reached. In any event there is Mind that is no-mind, and that is neither being nor non-being, neither to be perceived nor to be grasped

Further, the Bodhisattva, so called, has no abiding place; therefore when Prajñā is realised by him he is not abiding anywhere, not in any of the five Skandhas, that is, he is not to be located in a world of matter and form, nor in a world of consciousness. Again, there is nothing in Prajñā that gives one a clue to its being grasped. When we say that a Bodhisattva has realised Prajñā we may imagine that there is a Bodhisattva, that there is Prajñā, and that the latter has entered into the consciousness of the former; and, further, that he takes hold of it as if a mother is tenderly cherishing her baby. But this altogether misses the mark. For the Bodhisattva is now in a Samādhi called sometimes Sarvadharmāparigrihīta (i.e., Samādhi of not grasping anything), sometimes. Sarvadharmānupādāna

(1 e, Samādhi of not getting attached to anything) Here he has gone far beyond the five Skandhas and has no consciousness whatever of doing or not doing anything, because he is not at all conscious even of the Samādhi itself, because such Samādhi is non-existent (avidyamānatva), does not present itself to his consciousness. Why? Because in his no-mind-ness (acittatva) he has no cravings, cherishes no attachments of any sort. In his mind, which is no-mind, that is, when he is abiding in his transcendental consciousness, he is not conscious of a world of particulars where things are always conceived in opposites

Further, Subhūti goes on, the Bodhisattva while disciplining himself to attain an enlightened mind, an all-knowing mind, a mind with no outflowings (āsrava), an incomparable mind, and a mind which is beyond the attainments of Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas, knows no such mind to eling to as one that is to be grasped by him Why? Because an all-knowing mind has no outflowings, because what is known as an all-knowing mind is indeed without outflowings and is beyond the reach of one's grasping. Therefore, in this mind there is no possibility of being grasped. Why? Because there is what may be termed no-mind-ness (actitatā) in which mind and no-mind are merged as one, and which cannot be designated as either being nor non-being, and which is thus altogether beyond our perception and apprehension.

When these statements are read for the first time by those who have not been initiated into the Buddhist way of thinking, they may appear as the climax of absurdity. Think of a man who is a no-man seeking after a mind which is a no-mind, and, further, think of him as not knowing of anything being grasped by him when for all we can guess he seems to be in the midst of so-called enlightenment itself. What could be more nonsensical than this? And we are asked not to get alarmed (uttrāsta) nor terrified (samtrāsta). The Mahayana teaching according to the Prajūā-pāramitā seems to be navigating over a stormy ocean where the boat has lost her compass and all her sailing paraphernalia Can this really be the case with Mahayana Buddhism?

The one most important thing that students of Buddhism have to realise at the very outset of their study is that Buddhism is not a system of philosophy, has nothing to do with speculations as such, has no intention to present a logically-coherent formula of thought. What the Buddhist teaching professes to do is to get us truthfully (yathābhūtam) acquainted with the ultimate facts of existence. It requires us firmly to grasp facts based on personal experience, for when this is attained all the rest, including intellection, theorisation, or philosophising, will follow by itself according to the requirements of a mind in which the experience takes place. It will, therefore, be a great mistake to take the Mahayana sutras, such as the Prasnaparamita or the Lankāvatāra for a series of "Discourses on the Metaphysics of the Mahavana School of Buddhism" as Rajendraläla Mitra puts it The Madhyamika school or the Yogācāra may have their own "metaphysics" in their sutras, but as far as the Mahayana sutras are concerned, perhaps excepting a very few, they have nothing to do with metaphysics or epistemology; what they contain are plain statements of facts experienced by the Indian Buddhist minds, that is, they are most direct statements based upon the intuitive knowledge these minds have gained regarding the religious life. Their statements may be logically untenable or impossible, but they have not lost sight of the facts or experiences that have flashed through their minds All their paradoxes, contradictions, incomprehensibilities, and even all their apparently nonsensical utterances must be reduced first of all to their intuitions. Buddhist students are, therefore, requested to dig patiently down to the bedrock which forms the basis of these utterances if they desire to make them reveal their inmost secrets wrapped up in these uncouth or

"terror-inspiring" (samtrāsamāpta) phrases and propositions of the Prajāāpāramitā

It will be interesting to see how this Acittata (no-mindness) view of the religious experience in the Prashāpāramstā turns into the Cittamatra (mind-only) theory, so called, Both start from the untenability or of the Lankāvatāra unknowability (anunalabhyamānatva) of ultimate reality which is beyond the dualism of being and non-being, of birth and death, and while the one ends in a form of negativism, the other comes to an affirmation, saying that there is nothing but Mind, that the mind alone is the last word one can say about the world At the bottom of these two propositions, however, there is but one experience, for both arm at the realisation of one and the same fundamental truth As we have already treated of the Lankavatara view of Cittamatra, let us proceed to see what the sutra has to say about what may be termed the no-birth view of existence (sarvadharmānām anutpāda) This will clear up not only the position of the Prainanaramita but also of the general Mahayana attitude towards the problems of ontology

While in the Prajnaparamita we are impressed with the idea of emptiness (śūnyatā). the Lankāvatāra does not make so frequent references to it True, there are statements concerning existence being like maya with no reality or substance, but one can trace in the latter sutra a more manifest effort to bring out the self-realisation which will reveal to us a realm of no-birth-and-death, or, rather accord-"When there is no actual ing to the sutra. of no-birth perception (pratyaksha) of the truth, no actual seeing of the origin of things, all these philosophical views end in nihilism '" "All these views" melude such notions as "continuity, birth, work, destruction, existence, Nirvana, path, fruit of action, truth, etc " This being the case we must be always in touch with the Buddhist experience itself when what seems to be a philosophical theory such as the subject of this chapter, the no-birth view of existence, is being discussed.

¹ Pp. 40-41

SOME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES 287

What is meant by no-birth (anutpāda)?

It is one of the most fundamental ideas of Mahayana Buddhism, and is closely associated and almost interchangeable with such terms as emptiness (sūnyatā), no-self-substance (asvabhāva), non-duality (advaita), ultimate limit (bhūtakots), Nirvana, no-form (animitta), no-yearning (apranihita), etc In the Lankavatara it is frequently mentioned together with the first three of these terms Because of emptiness there is no-birth, and as there is no-birth there is no world of particulars in which the notion of selfsuistance obtains, and also that of duality or opposition or pairs of opposites, and when this is realised one has what is technically known as "compliance with reality not born" (anutpattikādharmakshānti). This already has been treated in one of the previous chapters of the present work 1 The following quotation from the Lankavatara2 may help us to understand the close relation existing between the four terms, śūnyatā, anutpāda, advaya, niksvabhāva:

"At that time the Bodhisattva Mahāmati asked the Buddha saying Pray tell me concerning the four characteristic features of existence. When they are understood by myself and other Bodhisattvas, we shall speedily abandon the discriminating of being and non-being and attain the realisation of the highest knowledge (anuttara-samyak-sambodhi).

"Then the Blessed One said Listen, O Mahamati, to what I tell you. The idea of Sūnyatā belongs to the domain of imaginative contrivance (parikalpita), and as people are apt to cling to the terminology of this domain, we have the doctrines of Sūnyatā, Anutpāda, Advaya, and Niḥsvabhāva [1e, with the view of freeing them from the clinging].

¹ See pp 125 f and 226 f

Pp. 73 ff.

"Briefly, there are seven sorts of Emptiness (śūnyatā)
(1) Emptiness of Appearance (lakshaṇa), (2) Emptiness of Self-substance (bhāvasvabhāva), (3) Emptiness of Nonaction (apracarita), (4) Emptiness of Action (pracarita), (5) Emptiness by which is meant the Unnamability of Existence (sarvadharma-nirabhilāpya), (6) Emptiness of the highest degree, by which is meant Ultimate Reality (paramārtha), 1 e, Supreme Wisdom (āryajñāna), (7) Emptiness of Reciprocity (itaretara).

"What is meant by Emptiness of Appearance? Existence is characterised by mutual dependence; individuality and generality are empty when one is regarded apart from the other, when things are analysed to the last degree, they are to be comprehended as not existent, there are, after all, no aspects of individuation such as 'this,' 'that,' or 'both', there are no ultimate irreducible marks of differentiation For this reason, it is said that self-appearance is empty. [By this is meant that appearance is not a final fact]

"What is meant by Emptiness of Self-substance? It is because there is no birth of self-substance by itself [That is to say, individualisation is the construction of our own mind, to think that there are in reality individual objects as such, is an illusion; they have no self-substance, therefore they are said to be empty.]

"What is meant by Emptiness of Non-action? It means that harboured in all the Skandhas there is, from the first, Nirvana which betrays no sign of activity [That is, their activities as perceived by our senses are not real, they are in their nature quiet and not-doing]. Therefore, we speak of the non-acting of the Skandhas, which is characterised as emptiness

"What is meant by the Emptmess of Action? It means that the Skandhas are free of selfhood and all that belongs to selfhood, and that whatever activities are manifested by them are due to the combination of causes and conditions [That is, they are not by themselves independent creating agencies, they have nothing which they can claim as belonging to their 'self' (ātman), and their karmic activities are generated by the conjunction of many causes or accidents.] For which reason there is what we designate the Emptiness of Action

"What is meant by the Emptiness of the Unnamability of All Things? As this existence is dependent upon our imaginative contrivance (parikalpita), there is no self-substance in it which can be named and described by the phraseology of our relative knowledge. This unnamability is designated here as a form of emptiness.

"What is meant by Great Emptiness of Ultimate Reality, which is Supreme Wisdom When the supreme wisdom is realised in our inner consciousness, it will then be found that all the theories, wrong ideas, and all the traces of beginningless memory (vāsanā) are altogether wiped out and perfectly empty This is another form of emptiness

"What is meant by Emptiness of Reciprocity? When whatever quality possessed by one thing is lacking in another, this absence is designated as emptiness. For instance, in the house of Śrigālamātri there are no elephants. no cattle, no sheep, etc., and I call this house empty. does not mean that there are no Bhikshus here. The Bhikshus are Bhikshus, the house is a house, each retaining its own characteristics As to elephants, horses, cattle, etc. they will be found where they properly belong, only they are absent in a place which is properly occupied by somebody else In this manner, each object has its special features by which it is distinguished from another, as they are not found in the latter. This absence is called Emptiness of Reciprocity

"O Mahamatı, these are the seven forms of Emptiness, and of these the last-mentioned one is the lowest kind and is to be avoided by thee.

ł

"Further, O Mahamati, there is no-birth by itself, nor are things said to be unborn, except when a man is abiding in a Samadhi Therefore, we say that there are no-births.

"O Mahamati, when we say that there are no selfsubstances, it means no-birth, according to the deeper sense of the word. All things have no self-substance, seeing that there is only an instantaneous uninterrupted continuation, and that changes from one state to another are observed throughout existence. [If there is self-substance which does not yield itself to changes and transformations, this universal flow of becoming will never take place.] This is what is meant by the non-existence of self-substance.

"What is the meaning, O Mahāmati, when we say that there is no duality? All things exist in pairs like light and shade, long and short, black and white, the one cannot be separated from the other. So are all things like Samsara and Nirvana, they are not two
It does not mean that where there is Nirvana, there is Samsara also, or that where there is Samsara there is Nirvana, for they issue from different causes Yet they are not two, and so are all things, like Samsāra and Parınırvāna. [Duality is only possible by postulating something that is not dualistic. Nirvana and Samsāra are evidently two, they are not to be merged indiscriminately, but so long as we cling to this dualistic thought we are unable to reach the unifying centre of thought where is the realisation of the Buddhist life. This transcending the duality of existence is called here nonduality | For this reason, O Mahamati, thou shouldst discipline thyself in Emptiness, Birthlessness, Non-duality, and Non-substantiality of Self

"This was then expressed by the Blessed One in the gathas

"I have always been preaching Emptiness which is above eternality and extirpation, Samsāra is like a dream, like māyā, and yet there is no disappearance of karma

"So are the sky and Nirvana which are two forms of Nirodha (annihilation); the ignorant wrongly discriminate where there is no action, but the wise go beyond being and non-being.

"At that time the Blessed One said to Mahamati: O Mahāmati, Emptiness. Birthlessness. Non-duality, and Nonsubstantiality of Self-this is what is taught by all the Buddhas in all the sutras, indeed there are no sutras in which this teaching is not to be met with. But, O Mahāmati, what is expressed in the sutras is in accordance with the way of thinking cherished by all beings. It deviates from the right path, it is not the talk directly established in the truth of suchness For example, O Mahāmati, the thirsty deer taking the mirage for water and abiding by it, does not realise that there is no water here. In like manner, the teaching of all the sutras is an appeal to the discriminating habit of mind on the part of sentient beings. It is not the talk on the truth of suchness as established by supreme Therefore, O Mahāmatı, conform thyself to the inner meaning and do not allow thyself to be engrossed in words of teaching."1

From this quotation we can see that these four terms, śūnyatā, anutpāda, nihsvabhāva, and advaya mean the same thing, or rather express so many aspects of the same fact. When it is said that all things are empty, it does not mean that all is void, but that particular objects as such have no ultimate reality Particularisation is the construction of mind, it has no birth in the objective world, that is to say, nothing has been created in this world which can claim to be absolutely real, that is, to be in possession of self-substance For existence is forever becoming, there is nothing in the world of particulars that retains its self-substantiality or self-identity or unchangeable and unchanging selfhood throughout eternity The idea of becoming presupposes relativity, that is, duality, and as long as this duality or multiplicity is adhered to as final reality, this solid, hardshelled world will resist the penetration of our intuition.

¹ Abstract, pp. 73-77.

As the result there will be no fusion of subject and object. this and that, self and not self, which means an eternal quarrel between the two, and consequently eternal unrest When emptiness, no-birth, and non-substantiality are accepted, non-duality or non-multiplicity must be recognised as true also All these are related ideas.

In the "Sagāthakam" we have 1

"No-birth and Suchness, Ultimate Limit of Reality and Emptiness—all these are different names for one thing?, do not wrongly discriminate and regard them as non-existent

"As in the world hasti (hand) is also called kara, and Indra is also called Sakra or Purandara, so with all things there are many names [for one and the same thing] wrongly discriminate and regard them as non-existent

"Form (rūpa) and emptiness are not different, nor does no-birth differ Do not wrongly discriminate, all erroneous views arise from asserting difference "

"Suchness means no-birth"

The Buddhist conception of Immortality

Relatively speaking, no-birth implies no-death, and when the Mahayana philosopher declares that existence has the nature of no-birth, does he mean that the world as it stands is immortal and not subject to the law of causation? How does this view vary from that of the other Indian philosophers who uphold the hypothesis of a creator and his immortality? In short, in what respect does Buddhist immortality differ from other forms of immortality? This was the question proposed by Mahāmati who puts it in the following form .

"The doctrine of immortality (anirodhānutpāda) advocated by the Blessed One seems to me not different in any way from that of all the philosophers For the latter

1 Gg 683-685

i

ť

The Sanskrit text has here rapasya, to which T'ang has nothing corresponding, while Wei has # (fa) which equals dharma or bhave 5 G 675 too talk about the immortality of the causal agencies as much as the Blessed One himself who affirms the immortality of space, Apratisamkhya-Nirodha, and Nirvana The philosophers explain the rise of the world from a creator and the law of causality, while the Blessed One too explains it as caused by ignorance, desire, and karma. Both uphold causality, the difference being in name only. This also applies to external objects which are conditioned externally. Seeing this, there is no difference between the views held by the Blessed One and those of the philosophers The latter have atoms, primary germ, Isvara, Lord of Creation, etc., and assume the immortality of these nine objects; whereas the Blessed One says that all things are neither born nor pass away, to which the categories of being and non-being do not apply. And then the elements are not destructible; their self-nature is neither born nor passes away, moving through the various paths of existence they retain their self-identity. Though the discrimination upheld by thee is somewhat different, all is recognised by the philosophers. For this reason, thou hast shown no deviation from the doctrine of the philosophers If there is anything in thy doctrine distinguishing it from theirs, pray tell me As far as the conception of immortality is concerned, thine and theirs do not betray any dissimilitude According to the Buddha, many Tathagatas do not appear m the world at one time and at one place. If the philosophers make the same assertions as the Buddha himself, we must say that there are [more than one Tathagata] "

This was the way Mahāmati presented his doubt as to the sameness of the Buddhist position with that of their opponents. In the following the Buddha attempts to define his doctrine against the so-called philosophers' as regards the problem of immortality or that of "no-birth" and "nopassing-away"

"O Mahamati, my view is not the same as that of the philosophers, not only as regards immortality, but as regards birth and impermanency. Why? According to them, there is a self-substance about which they assert mamortality and unchangeability My position is not that, for it does not fall into the categories of being and nonbeing. It goes beyond the categories of being and nonbeing, of birth and disappearance, it is not existence nor is it non-existence. How is it not non-existent? Because it is like unto a diversity of forms appearing in a dream How is it not existent? Because the self-substance of forms is not to be asserted as existent. We see them as appearances which are not realities, we grasp (grahana) them as before us yet they are not really graspable this reason, all existences are to be regarded neither as existent nor as non-existent. If we know that what we see before us is no more than the manifestation of our own mind and abide within ourselves where no dualistic discrimination takes place, we see that there is nothing astir in the world. The ignorant assert themselves in their doings, discriminate therein, but the wise do not

"O Mahāmati, this is due to the discrimination of unrealities whereby the ignorant get altogether confused in their judgments. It is like the Gandharvas' palace or magically-created figures. O Mahāmati, it is like the child's observing the various magic-created trades-people who appear going into the Gandharvas' palace and again coming out of it, he imagines in his confused mind that all this is real and asserts to that effect. So it is with the ignorant who are confused in the judgment of birth and no-birth, and of the created and of the uncreated, there is really no appearance, no disappearance of the magical figures, of which we can assert either as born or as passed, because they are unpredicable as being or as non-being. The ignorant falsely assume birth and disappearance, but the wise do not

ļ

ì

ŧ

"O Mahāmatı, by being untruthful it is meant that the self-nature of things is not truthfully discerned as it is in itself When however an untrue view prevails, there is an attachment to the self-substance of things, failing to see them in their solitary quietude, and as long as this quietude fails to be seen, there will be no disappearance of wrongful Therefore, O Mahāmati, a view based on discrimination formlessness of things is superior to that based on form, because form is the cause of birth When there is formlessness, it puts a stop to the rise of discrimination, and there is a state of immortality, which is Nirvana O Mahamati, one finds Nirvana where one sees the abode of reality in its truthful signification and abandons the discrimination of all that is mind and all that belongs to mind. Then there is the realisation of supreme wisdom which lies in the inmost consciousness of the Tathagata this I call the Solitary (vwikta) and Nirvana '11

No-birth Means Transcending Relativity

As is manifest throughout the Lankavatara, one of its main contests is that ignorance and consequently the state of always being in bondage is due to discrimination wrongfully made concerning the self-nature of existence. That is to say, because we are so addicted to the categories of being and non-being, birth and disappearance, creation and destruction, etc., which are the products of discrimination, we cannot look into the truth and reality of things; we must disentangle ourselves from this bondage of the so-called logical necessity of opposites and return to the primary experience if there be any such and see and interpret things from the knowledge revealed therein and thereby primary experience which is not logical but issues from a discipline, existence is taken in its truthful signification, all the intellectual scaffoldings and constructions are thus done away with, and what is known as non-discriminative knowledge

¹ Pp 197-200, according to the Trang For an abridgment see above, pp 124 f; and for a translation from the Sanskrit see under the "Mind-only," pp. 264-267, of these Studies.

(avikalpaniána) in Mahayana terminology shines out, and as a result we see that all things are unborn, uncreated, and never pass away, and that all appearances are like magicallycreated figures, or like a dream, like shadows reflected on a screen of eternal solitude and tranquility. The Mahayanist eye is always gazing at the screen itself, but it will be conscious of the screen as long as it is discriminated from the shadows which in turn are themselves discriminations This is not yet perfect attainment, the Lankavatara wants to go on further declaring that the screen of eternity too must be abolished, for it is only thus that ignorance is forever dispelled leaving us perfectly free and unhampered in When we come to this culminaall our seeings and doings tion of intellectual perspicuity we realise what is meant by all things being unborn and conform ourselves to the Anutpattika-dharma-kshānti.

When the following gāthās¹ are seen in this light, the doctrine of no-birth, no-causality, etc., will grow quite intelligible, and, as the Prajūāpāranitā warns, will not frighten us any longer.

- 97 "That all things are causelessly evolved, as they are not to be described in terms of relativity, such as being and non-being, discriminating and discriminated—this is what I call no-birth
- 98. "The mind disengaged from objectivity and free from the twofold Svabhava," the mind that is obtained by a revulsion (paravritis) at the basis of consciousness—this is what I call no-birth.
 - 99 "It is no external existence, no non-existence,

The Parikalpita and the Paratantra view of existence

Pp 200-204, freely translated For gg 86-96, see above, pp 270-272 I may add that this whole series of gathas 86-117 is repeated bodily in the "Sagathakam" with some variations See pp 337-341, gg 581-513. The reappearance of so many gathas in the "Sagathakam" properly belonging to the main text is provocative of interesting problems concerning the textual composition of the Landatatar indeed, it is beyond the grasp of the mind and transcends all philosophical views—this is what is characterised as no-birth.

100 "All such terms as 'empty,' 'having no self-substance,' etc, are to be thus understood. We talk of being empty not because of emptiness but because of no-birth'

The idea is that the Buddhist doctrine of emotiness is not absolute annihilation but the denial of a relative world as final reality where birth and death actually take place. This, however, does not mean that there is behind this world of appearance something which contrasts with the former and which is what is really real as distinguished or discriminated from the phenomenal According to the Mahayana, the outside world of form-and-name and the mner world of thought and feeling are both no more than the construction of mind, and when the mind ceases, the weaving-out of a world of particulars is stopped. This stopping is called emptiness or no-birth, but it is not the wiping out of existence, it is on the contrary viewing it truthfully unhampered by discriminative categories Buddhism, therefore, upholds causation on the ground that things actually come into view and pass out of view, only it rejects the view that causation has its first term, has started from a primary cause or causal agent which is a fixed final reality The following is to be interpreted in this light

101 "There is a concatenation of causal chains (kalāpah pratyayānām), whereby things come into existence and pass out of it—If this linking is loosened, there will be no birth, no disappearance

102 "As soon as there is any loosening at all in the chain mutually conditioning, there will be no existence; oneness and separateness are the ideas by which the philosophers discriminate [causation]

103 "There is nothing really born—being, non-being, and the negation of both, there is only a concatenation in which one sees things coming into existence and passing out of it.

- 104 "It is only owing to conventional ideas that we speak of a mutually-linked chain of causation. When a dislocation takes place in the chain there is no birth, so called, whatever.
- 105 "As there is absence of birth, we call it no-birth, in fact there is nothing but a continuity of chain; and thus we avoid the faults of the philosophers. The ignorant do not understand it
- 106. "Apart from concatenation there is nothing to be regarded as born, if one says there is, he commits a sin against the doctrine of causation; he is the destroyer of the causal chain.
- 107 "If the causation-chain is [something external to things subject to it], like a lamp shining on a variety of things, there must be something somewhere [which is known as chain, but] altogether different from what it [truly] is.
- 108. "[Such things, if there be any, have] no self-substance, are unborn, and are by nature like the sky, such chains are realities that are different from true reality, they are what is cherished by the unwise.
- 109 "There is another kind of birthlessness which is the truth itself realised by the wise, they abide in conformity with this unborn truth whose birth is [what really constitutes] no-birth.
- 'Ignorance, hankering, working, etc., are internal causation-chains; the tree, lump of clay, utensil, wheel, seeds, elements, and suchlike constitute an external chain
- 112. "If there is born anywhere anything outside these and yet determined by causation-chain, this goes against the view which upholds causation-only, and is not in accord with the right teaching
- 113. "If birth, so called, is really non-existent, whose intelligence is there that is chained to concatenation? [But as far as our conventional senses go] there is mutual-conditioning and birth, and this is the reason for our maintaining the doctrine of causation-chain

114. "Such categories as heat, fluidity, motion, solidity, etc., are discriminated by the ignorant; such are concatenations, they cannot be designated as categories, hence they have no self-substance."

No-birth, Transcendental Truth, and Eternity Unthinkable

We know that there are two positions usually taken up by the Mahayana thinker who attacks problems of ontology. Unless we know which of the two positions is being upheld by him at the moment. we shall find him quite frequently contradicting himself The one is that of conventionalism, and the other if we put it so is a highly metaphysical one we designate the first as a relative position, we may call the latter the absolute one From the relative or conventional point of view the Mahayana admits that there is causation and the world moves on from one state to another in conformity with the law, but it refuses to give this continuance an absolute value, for it is real only as far as our senses are concerned Conventionalism or naive realism does not after all give real satisfaction to the deeper demands of the religious consciousness So the Buddhists ask us to go beyond this world of appearance where supposedly all births and deaths are objectively real. A realm beyond the senses. however, must be opened from within ourselves. When we pursue our objective course they would say we come to no end, one chain leads to another, the concatenation has no beginning and no conclusion. We now make a retreat and dig deeper and deeper down into the very foundation-rock of consciousness When we do this, as the Lankavatara says, there finally takes place a revulsion (paravritta) apparently within our own minds. There opens up a new vista where we never expected anything religiously or spiritually convincing In the beginning we supposed that we could not get down deep enough to come in touch with anything transcendental But the new experience now inspires us with a conviction hitherto altogether unknown. This is the new position super-sensual and absolute, this is the supreme wisdom (āryajñāna), the realisation of which within ourselves is so emphatically reiterated in the sutra. And it is from this point of view that the world is now describable as unborn, with no self-substance, and unconditionally empty and not at all limited by causation. Birthlessness (anutpada) or emptiness does not belong to the domain of our The sutra in this respect is quite relative consciousness explicit lest the unwary should slip at this point The development and definite assertion later in the Madhyamika school of the conception of twofold truth. Samvritti and Paramartha, or worldly and transcendental, is the natural consequence of the positions taken up by the Lankavatara

² Pp 200-204

In order to show, though somewhat over-repeatedly, that the birthlessness of all things (sarvadharmānāmanutpādam) refers to a world not filled with sense-data, I quote the following.1

"Again, O Mahāmatı, it is taught by the Tathagatas of the past, future, and present that all things are unborn Why? All things2 are unborn because they are the manifestations of our own mind and have no reality of their own, of which one can say that they are existent or non-existent, or that they are born O Mahāmatı, all things are like the horns of a hare or a horse or an ass or a camel As they are discriminated erroneously owing to the wrong judgments that are cherished by the ignorant and confused, they seem to exist but in fact they are unborn That all things are never born in their nature—this is realised only by supreme wisdom deeply buried in the inner part of consciousness, and is not to be grasped by the discriminative and dualistic intelligence of the ignorant and confused. The realms of supreme wisdom and relative knowledge are not on the same plane. The world in which our bodies are nourished, works of utility are carried on, and where we have our habitation—this world so characterised rises from the Alaya-vijūāna when the latter divides itself into that which is grasped and that which grasps; whereby the ignorant are attached to the dualistic view of things, thinking that there is birth, abiding, and final passing away, and further they imagine that there really is the birth of all things to be subsumed under the categories of being and non-being. Therefore, O Mahāmati, in this thou hast to discipline thyself assiduously."

Throughout the text, sometimes sarvabhāsa, sometimes sarva-Aharma.

The reference to the hare's horns requires some explanation. As our common-sense experience tells us, the hare has no horns, and this supplies one of the well-known analogies or illustrations for the Indian philosophers and logicians to their reasoning on non-existence and emptiness. Thus the Lankavatara makes frequent allusions to this illustration when the discourse turns on the problem of no-birth and other kindred subjects. What the sutra contends about this is that the doctrine of no-birth must not be understood in the same sense as the absence of horns on a hare's head In the latter case the absence belongs to the field of relative knowledge, while the no-birth is one of the utterances directly issuing from the highest religious experience in the Buddha's life, and it naturally transcends a world of mere sense-data. That the hare has no horns gains its meaning when it is contrasted with a cow which is adorned with a pair of horns. Therefore, this kind of non-existence or birthlessness is a relative one and no analogy exists between it and the Buddhist doctrine of no-birth. There is another sense in which this analogy fails to illustrate the no-birth: for the notion that the cow has horns is a product of illusive discrimination, as such horns have no reality like other objects in this world of particulars. When that with which a thing is contrasted no more exists, the contrast itself loses its sense There is still another aspect to this analogy which makes it irrelevant to the proper comprehension of the Buddhist doctrine of no-birth That is to say, when the hare alone is considered in its absolute aspect, with no reference whatever to anything outside, we cannot make any statement whether affirmative or negative as to its horns. This is what the Lankavatara-sutra means when it says that the absolute truth transcends the relative categories of being and non-being as in the case of the hare's horns. Not only the absence of horns on the hare is a relative assertion, but the idea itself is a result of discrimination. When the hare alone all by itself with no reference to anything is set before us, what argument, what inference, what relationship, and what discourse can we advance on it? Here is, indeed, the birthlessness of all things as maintained by the Mahayanists 1

When this idea of no-birth or birthlessness (anutpāda) is expressed in a more positive form it is eternity unthinkable (nityam acintyam). The truth being above the category of causation and not subject to birth and disappearance, it has no other way to be described but as eternity, and as this eternity is an absolute one and not contrasted to impermanence or transiency, it may most fittingly be qualified as unthinkable. So we have here the "intyam-acintyam" as the realm of supreme wisdom realised in one's innermost consciousness, as of the ultimate signification stamped with the seal of suchness (yāthātathyamudrā) 2 In what sense this is will be shown in the following pages

Mahāmati wants to know what difference there is between the Buddha's own view of what is "unthinkably eternal," and that of the philosophers who also talk about the makers (kārana) or creative agents being such. To this the Buddha answers. "What is so regarded by the philosophers, cannot be established as such because their idea of a cause is not sufficient, because their causer has no reason in itself to be established as eternal. What is considered by them as eternal is in its nature something not eternal. Their view is based upon an irrelevant analogy for their eternity is contrasted to things not eternal, that is, transient things of a relative world. Their eternity is a conditioned one, and not the unthinkable or transcendental Theirs has no value of reality. It is like the hare's horns It is only talked about, it exists in our language it is true, but with no corresponding reality The philosophers fail to comprehend the meaning of svahetulakshana (self-cause-character) by which the Buddha makes his assertion about eternity unthinkable. This is a state realised by all the Tathagatas in their inmost consciousness and aimed at by all the Bodhisattvas as the finality of a life of the usual discipline Depending on this experience which is not conditioned by the logical categories of being and non-being but which is a self-realisation requiring no external proofs, the Buddha's position is unassailable It is quite unlike the philosophers' conception of a maker; it is something un-made and unmaking, [we may say something un-born], it is like space, Nirvana, and Nirodha, and therefore it can most becomingly be designated as eternity unthinkable (mtyācintyatā)."

This is an abstract of the argument concerning the hare's horns (śaśawishāna) as somewhat subtly made out on pp 51-53 ff 2 P 59 ff, and p. 166.

This something, "eternity unthinkable," is also known as the truth such as it is. or supreme wisdom realised in the immost consciousness of the Tathagatas. Nityācintaiveyam tatkāgatānām pratyātmāryajnānādhigamatathatā.2 The unborn has a positive connotation which is comprehensible through an experience only But as our everyday life is so encumbered and warped by moral and intellectual prejudices. the Lankāvatāra makes desperate attempts to relieve us of this fatal inconvenience Hence its untiring reiteration concerning the significance of transcending every form of dualism, and this by experience and not by intellectualism.

¹ Abstract, pp. 59-61. ² P 60, ll. 8-9.

Why? Because the latter is another name for discrimination (vikalpa), and discrimination is the builder of a world of particulars. As long as a man is thus in fetters, there is no hope of liberation for him

The Positive Conception in No-birth

"Why are all things unborn?

"Because they are unpredicable as made or making, because they have no creator

"Why have they no self-substance?

"Because when they are reviewed with the interior intelligence (svabuddhi), the categories such as individuality and generality are mapplicable to them.

"Why are all things neither departing nor coming?

"Because though they are characterised with the marks of individuality and generality, these marks, coming and departing, neither come nor depart.

"Why do all things never cease to exist?

"Because their not having self-substance makes it impossible to take hold of them.

"Why are all things impermanent?

"Because as soon as they take forms [or appear with individualised marks] they assume the nature of impermanence.

"Why are all things permanent?

"Because though they take forms [or appear with individualised marks], they take [really] no such forms, and in leality there is nothing born, nothing passing away"

When it is declared that there is no birth of anything,

¹ Also called "pratyātmādhigatabuddhi," p 166, line 4

² Pp 115-116 Cf p 166, where the Buddha refutes the proposition, "All things are unborn" as established by the philosophers, because the latter try to ground it on the logic of discrimination. The Buddha makes the same assertion, but in his case it grows out of his own experience, being an intuitive knowledge not determinable by discursive reasoning. Besides, no Buddhist knowledge is stained with egotistic motives.

that all is empty and has no self-substance, we are apt to come to an erroneous conclusion which is this the case what is the use of our disciplining ourselves for the cleansing of defiling passions and the realisation of supreme wisdom? Is not all a dream, a magically-created phenomenon, with no reality underneath? For this way of reasoning, Buddhism, especially Mahayana Buddhism, has been censured But as we have stated over and over again, those who take this view are still under the bondage of wrong judgments and discriminations. The main thesis of the Lankāvatāra, aside from its practical message of self-realisation, may be said to dispel this form of erroneous inference. Therefore, announces the Buddha,1 the doctrine of nonexistence (abhāva) is, in fact, a means by which the ignorant rid themselves of erroneous imagination (parikalpita) and discrimination (vikalva); and when they are ridded of these and get into the society of the wise (ārya), they would realise that there is indeed something really subsisting and endowed with self-substance The eye that sees into the truth is an eye of wisdom (pramācakshus) 2

This something unborn and now so positively asserted is Tathatā, Suchness, as was above referred to, but Tathatā has still an intellective odour. If it is preferred, here is one with an ontological connotation, by which I mean the expression, āryajāāna-svabhāva-vastu, or ārya-vastu-svabhāva * Vastu generally means "a really existing thing" or "essence of a thing," but in Buddhism it quite frequently denotes an individual object in the world of individuals and is not necessarily understood in a metaphysical sense. This is especially important because Buddhism being a form of idealism does not itself take kindly to terms savouring of a realistic interpretation of existence. Whatever this is, the

¹ P. 163 et seq

See also p 40, 1, 4

P. 165, see also p. 50, where Mahamati asks the Buddha to discourse on dryo-jadac-vastu which is the basis of distinguishing the one hundred and eight terms.

existence of a Vastu is affirmed by the Lankavatara, whose self-substance is supreme wisdom as residing in the depths of our consciousness

Vastu is generally rendered as 44 (shih) in the Chinese texts, and this is what the Sung has here; but the Wei adopts 本者 (nén-uu) meaning "original being, or existence," and the T'ang then (migo-wu) "mysterious thing." in the translation of the following gatha. I manifestly showing that vastu has here a special connotation

"Being and non-being-between these two limits the mind moves, with the disappearance of this field the mind properly ceases to operate (9).

"When an objective world is no more grasped, there is neither disappearance nor non-being [as all these belong to a realm of relativity), except something absolute known as Suchness (tathatāvastu),2 which realm belongs to the wise (10) "

Viewing the world from this point of view, 1e, from the point of Eternal Suchness unthukable (acentya) and unattamable (anupalabdhya), it is quiet and unborn, cannot be characterised either as being or as non-being, it is above coming and going; and in this sense it is empty like the hare's horns, like a dream, like the barren woman's child, and like magical creations From the idealistic understanding of existence, there is Mind itself (cittamātra), which when asserted divides itself into subject and object, and therefrom issues an eternal concatenation of causal chains. The philosophers take these transformations (parmāma) for

P. 147

These two gathas with the others on this page (147) are repeated in the "Sagathakam," p 268, gg 176-177, g 180, p 290, gg. 194-196, with slight variations; for instance, instead of tathetavastu, it rends here tathatavastha, "abode of suchness". The gatha (g 175) immediately preceding these in the "Sagāthakam" is illummating to read in connection with them "Words belong to the realm of thought (outa), they are musleading, Prayis is truth and non-discriminative, thought falls into dualism, hence Prajūž is not of discrimination."

reality and cling to them with egotistical motives and evil designs. Nine transformations are recognised by the philosophers, as regards form (samsthana), appearance (lakshana), cause (hetu), combination (yukti), opinion (drishis), birth (utpāda), existence (bhāva), manifested condition (pratyayābhwyakts), and manifested work (krivābhivuakts).1

Whatever one may say about the phenomenal world given to our senses, the Lankavatara insists that all things are unborn because they are found so and for no other reason. Here we return to the position from which we made our start, that is, that all the metaphysical and epistemological statements made in this sutra are finally resolvable into self-realisation (pratyatma-vedua-aati-dharma).

¹ Pp. 158-159 Except the transformation of form (samsthana), no explanation is given here of the other eight.

3. THE TRIPLE BODY OF THE BUDDHA

The Doctrine Outlined

The dogma of the Triple Body (trikāya) as now accepted by all Mahayana schools of Buddhism in China and Japan is a late development in the history of Mahayana. The dogma, before it was fully formulated, was only adumbrated here and there in the earlier Mahayana sutras It was, probably, not until the Yogācāra philosophy began to be crystallised into a system by Asanga and his predecessors that the conception of the Triple Body came to form a part of their programme

According to the Yogācāra philosophy, the Triple Body is Dharmakāya (法身, fa-shên), Sambhogakāya (報身, paoshên), and Nirmanakaya (44.13, hua-shên). Dharma here may be understood in either way as "reality." or as "lawgiving principle," or simply as "law" Kāya means "body," or "system" The combination, dharmakaya, is then literally a body or person that exists as principle, and it has now come to mean the highest reality from which all things derive their being and lawfulness, but which in itself transcends all limiting conditions But Dharmakāya is not a mere philosophical word, as is indicated by the term "kāya," which suggests the idea of personality, especially It belongs to the Buddha, it as it relates to Buddhahood is what inwardly and essentially constitutes Buddhahood, for without it a Buddha loses altogether his being We may regard the Dharmakaya as corresponding to the Christian The Dharmakāya is also known as Syaidea of Godhead bhāvakāya, meaning "self-nature-body" (自性身, tzǔ-ksmgshên), for it abides in itself, it remains as such retaining its self-nature It is in this sense the absolute aspect of the Buddha, in whom perfect tranquillity prevails

The second Body is the Sambhogakāya, which is ordinarily translated as Body of Recompense, or Enjoyment

Laterally, "enjoyment" is a better word for sambhoga, for it comes originally from the root, bhuj, "to eat," "to enjoy," to which the prefix sam, meaning "together" is added Thus Sambhogakāya is often done into the Chinese 共用身 (kungyung-shên), 受用身 (shou-yung-shên), or 食身 (chih-shên). When we have 報身, Recompense or Reward Body for it, the Chinese seem to point to another Sanskrit original, or else it is not quite a literal rendering, but given according to its derivative sense. For this Body of Enjoyment is attained as the result of or as the reward for a series of spiritual discipline carried on through so many kalpas. The Body thus realised is the Sambhogakāya, Body of Recompense, which is enjoyed by the well-deserving one, i.e., Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva

The Buddha as the Body of Enjoyment is generally represented as a figure enveloped in all the glory of Buddhahood, for in him incarnated there is everything good and beautiful and holy accruing from the perfection of the spiritual life. The particular features of each such Buddha may vary according to his original vows; for instance, his environment, his name, his form, his country, and his activity may not be the same; Amitābha Buddha has his Pure Land in the West with all the accommodations as he desired in the beginning of his career as Bodhisattva; and so with Akshobhya as described in the sutra bearing his name.

This second Body of the Trinity is sometimes known in Chinese as Ying-shên (概身), instead of Pao-shên (報身). The original Sanskrit term for ying might not have been the same as the one for pao Ying means "to respond" and it is at present quite difficult to ascertain what its original was, for we have not yet recovered, if this were possible, any Sanskrit sutra in which this term is used. From sambhoga or sambhogya, Ma (ying) cannot be deduced, while the chapter on "The Trikāya" in the Suvarņa-prabhāsa is missing in the Sanskrit text in our possession, evidently this being a later addition. The two Chinese translations of the Suvarṇa-prabhāsa, one by I-tsing (海洋) and the other by Paramārtha contain this Trikāya chapter where both translators have ying-shên for the second Body. As to the original of pao-shên reference will be found later on

¹ In Asanga's Mahāyāna Sūtrālamkāra edited by Sylvain Lévi,

The third Body is the Nirmanakava, usually translated as hua-shên (程身), which means "Body of Transformation," or simply "Assumed Body" The Dharmakava is too exalted a body for ordinary mortals to come into any conscious contact with As it transcends all forms of limitation, it cannot become an object of sense or intellect. We ordinary mortals can perceive and have communion with this absolute body only through its transformed forms. And we perceive them only according to our capacities, moral and spiritual. They do not appear to us in the same form We thus read in the Saddharma-nundarika that the Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara1 transforms himself into so many different forms according to the kind of beings whose salvation he has in view at the moment The Kshitigarbha-sūtra also mentions that the Bodhisattva Kshitigarbha takes upon himself a variety of forms in order to respond to the requirements of his worshippers The conception of the Nirmanakaya is significant, seeing that this world of relativity stands contrasted with the absolute value of Suchness which can be reached only by means of the knowledge of Suchness (tatha-The essence of Buddhahood is the Dharmakaya, but as long as the Buddha remains such, there is no hope for the salvation of a world of particulars The Buddha has to abandon his original abode, and must take upon himself such forms as are concervable and acceptable to the inhabitants of this earth. The Holy Spirit emanates, as it were, from Absolute Buddhahood and is seen by those who are prepared by their previous karma to see him

¹ Chapter XXIV. Kern's English translation p 406 et seq.

Nirmana comes from the root ma, "to measure," to "form," "to display," to which nir, meaning "out of," is prefixed; and the whole term, Nirmanakaya, is generally rendered as Body of Transformation (ALB, hua-shên) in most sutras and śastras. Sometimes, however, Ying-shên (確 (A). Response Body, is used for this third member of the Trinity, causing confusion with the second member, which is occasionally also designated as Ying-shên. It is suspected that Ying-shên as the third Body is not Nirmanakaya in Sanskrit, perhaps it is Samyriti, as can be gathered from Tibetan sources. Samvriti is contrasted with Paramartha when truth is regarded as having a double aspect, one as absolute truth, and the other as relative (paramārthasatya and samuratisatua), in concession to or in response to the worldly way of thinking. The Samvriti-kaya, therefore, may mean the Body of the Buddha which he assumes in response to the requirements of his followers. In this the Buddha appears transformed and not in his original aspect as he is in himself.

The Suvarna-prabhasa on the Triple Body

There is a chapter, as was stated above, in the Chinese Suvarṇa-prabhāsa¹ devoted to the exposition of the Trıkāya dogma It is entitled "The Trıkāya Distinguished." The following is an extract from it The Buddha addressing the Bodhısattva Ākāśagarbha said, "O son of a good family, the Tathagata has a triple body, Hua-shên, Ying-shên, and Fashên. When the Triple Body is attained, unparalleled supreme enlightenment is attained. How does a Bodhisattva understand Hua-shên (Nirmāṇakāya) f O son of a good family, when the Tathagata was of old disciplining himself, he practised all kinds of virtues for the sake of sentient beings The discipline reached its perfection, and by virtue of the discipline he attained the state of freedom, and because of this freedom he knows how to follow up the minds of all beings, how to be in accord with their conduct, and how to enter into their worlds. He understands all the multifarious ways in which they are living, and for this reason he appears to them in a variety of forms precisely when and where it is most opportune for them to come into his presence. He never makes mistakes in this respect, not only in time and space, but in conduct and discourse. The Body he there assumes in such multiple forms is called the Body of Transformation (hua-shên)

¹ I-tsing (634-713) translated the sutra after his return from India in 695. Paramärtha's translation came out in the first year of Ch'êng-shêng (552). The earliest translation is by Dharmarakaha of the Northern Lang (397-439) and does not contain the Trikäya chapter.

"O son of a good family, all the Buddhas and Tathagatas preach the ultimate truth to the Bodhisattvas in order to make them thoroughly conversant with [the nature of things], to make them see into the oneness of Nirvana and Samsāra, to make the hearts of sentient beings rejoice by wiping them clear from all fears arising from the thought of an ego, to lay down the foundations for the teachings and doings of the Buddhas, which must have no boundaries to be truly in accordance with the Suchness of things, as well as with the knowledge of Suchness and also with their The Body of the Tathagata appears bearing original vows the thirty-two marks of a great personality, accompanied by the eighty minor marks of excellence, and enveloped in a light around the shoulders and back. That body is the Ying-shên-the Body of Response

"O son of a good family, in order to clear away all the possible hindrances arising from the evil passions and other things, and to conserve all good things, there is nothing but the Suchness of things and the knowledge of Suchness this is known as the Dharmakāya (fa-sh n)

"The first two Bodies are temporarily discriminated, while the third one is true reality being the root of the first two For when severed from the Suchness of things and from the knowledge of non-discrimination, all the Bud-

COME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES 313
SOME OF The state
Texts: graha-sastra chuang gupta ti fi ii ann.budd
a the Defferent Teats: Meddydnasamparigralia-sdastra Meddia- Dharma- gupta gu Defferent Anasampa Anta- fanta fir A the A (pao shan, (yang-sha gata, Tabl ihe Driffere shadha- Buddha- Budha- Budha- Buddha- Budha-Suscript Suscri
Litter Prounting Party Care Prounting Prountin Satra- Early as For- larned and and and and and and and and and an of the Trikâys of Parth laydan (Sakahā- nanda) (ta-shān) (ta-shān) (ta-shān) (ta-shān) (ta-shān) (thus shān) for a the Transmitting of the Transmitting of Fasth (Earshen) (farshen) fondtions of farth Medical Med arious Designations of anti-deal ant
Severyor Severyor State
The Various Designations of the Trikâya as Found in the Defferent Toxis: The Various Designations of the Trikâya as Found in the Defferent Toxis: Acualomism of Fair fraction from from and an integrated and from an integrated from the first from the Medical from from and from from from from from from from from
The Vast and Translators The Body The Body The Third Third The Third
E E E E

" Nirmanakaya,

dhas cease to have virtues of their own For the state of immaculate Buddhahood is attained only when the know-ledge that constitutes the essence of all the Buddhas is realised and thereby putting an end ultimately to all evil passions. Therefore, the Suchness of things and the know-ledge of Suchness contain in it all that makes up Buddhahood."

The Dharmakāya ın the Lankāvatāra

The idea that great men are immortal seems to be innate with us human beings. We do not wish to think that our earthly death is the end of all that there is in us. We feel that there must be a spirit or soul or shadow that hives forever. The cult of ancestor-worship is no mere superstition, for its psychology is deep-seated in human nature. It was quite natural for the followers of the Buddha to conceive the idea of him as the Dharmakāya, abiding forever among them and eternally preaching the Dharma on the Mount of the Holy Vulture, although his Nirvana had taken place after eighty years of his fleshly life.

Thus we read in the Saddharma-pundarika XV "An inconceivable number of thousands of kotis of kalpas (cons) is it since I attained supreme enlightenment, and I have never ceased to preach the Dharma(1) I have converted a great number of Bodhisattvas and established them in Buddha-wisdom; during many kotis of kalpas I have brought myriads of kotis of sentient beings into maturity(2). In order to discipline beings, I show them the stage of Nirvana, I make use of skilful means; but I have never entered into Nirvana, for I have been preaching the Dharma at this place (3)"

In this light the following lines from the Suvaryaprabhāsa ("On the Life of the Tathagata") are to be under-

In the Chinese translations of the Suvarnaprables by I-tsing and also by Jfignagupta, there is a stanza repeating exactly the sentiment herein expressed. "I am always at the Holy Vulture and preaching this sutra-treasure; my showing Nirvana is meant for the maturing stood. "The Buddha does not pass away, the Dharma does not decline; it is for the purpose of ripening sentient beings that the Buddha appears to have passed away. Inconceivable is the Blessed One, the Buddha, the Tathagata is the body of permanence; in order to benefit sentient beings he shows a variety of works in fine array."

When the Buddha was giving his farewell address. he said something to this effect that "Those who see the Dharma see me even after my passing." The statement may be regarded as confirming the common psychology of immortality. No wonder, then, that the doctrine of a dual body came to be propounded soon after the Nirvana, the one as Rūpakāya (material body) and the other as Dharmakāva. (the Body of Truth). So we read further in the Suvarnaprabhāsa that the body of the Buddha is as solid as a diamond and what is manifested of him is his Body of Transformation.2 and that the Dharmakava is indeed Enlightenment, and the Dharmadhatu is the Tathagata 3 These two notions. Dharmakāya, unchangeable like a diamond, constituting the substance of enlightenment, and a body subject to change and transformation, must have been in the minds of early Buddhists, though it does not follow that they were conscious of the two notions as distinctly separable as we see them in the Suvarnaprabhāsa and other sutras. They were probably only vaguely conscious of the difference between the Buddha that had passed away and the Buddha whose presence with them they could not somehow ignore, before these two Buddhas came to be conceived in terms of Body of sentient beings. As the ignorant refuse to believe me owing to their erroneous views, I show my Nirvana in order to bring them to a state of maturity." Chapter II, "On the Infe of the Tathagata." This passage is lacking in the Sanskrit text.

Na buddhah parinirväti na dharmah pariniyate, Sattvänäm paripäkäya parinirvänam niäarfayate. Acintyo bhagavän buddho nityakäyas tathägatah, Deseti viviähän vyühän sattvänäm hitakäranät.

Vajrasamhatanakāyo nirmitam kāyam daršayet.
 Dharmakāyo hi sambudāho āharmadhātus-tathāgatah.

 $(k\bar{a}ya)$ and regarded as at least two aspects of it, eternal and temporal

So with the doctrine of the Triple Body (trikāya) Early Mahayana Buddhists thought of Dharmatabuddha and Mülatathägata, and Vıpākabuddha and Nırmānabuddha as distinguishable; but in the earlier Mahayana sutras such as the Lankavatara, in which we are at present chiefly interested, no Kāya doctrine appears Buddhas, indeed, are variously spoken of, but not as belonging to the Kaya system: for the Nırmanabuddha is not the same as the Nirmānakāya, nor is the Dharmatābuddha the same as the To determine the qualification of a Buddha in Dharmakāya terms of Kaya is further advanced in thought than merely designating a Buddha as the Nairmanika or otherwise Even Nagarjuna is confusing in his discrimination of different Buddhas as belonging to the different Kāyas. He mentions two kinds of Kayas, but the distinction is not quite clear, and besides they are variously designated clear-cut conception of the Kāya seems to have started with the Yogācāra school headed by Asanga and his predecessors

Dharmakāya is often referred to in the Lankāvatāra and other early sutras but not as one of the members of the Trikāya The Lankāvatāra speaks of the "Tathagata's Dharmakāya," of the "inconceivable Dharmakāya," and of the "Dharmakāya as will-body," but in all these cases there is no reference whatever to the conception of the Trikāya or any Kāya, except that it means something substantially constituting Tathagatahood or Buddhahood The passages in the Lankāvatāra where the term "Dharmakāya" is found are as follows

1 Where the attainment of the Tathāgatakāya in the heavens is spoken of as the result of the understanding of the highest spiritual truths belonging to Mahayana Buddhism, Dharmakāya is used in apposition with Tathagata as something that transcends the nature of the five Dharmas, being furnished with things issuing from the highest knowledge $(praj\tilde{n}\tilde{a})$, and itself abiding in the realm of magical appearances $(m\tilde{a}y\tilde{a}vishaya)$. Here we may consider all these terms synonymous, Dharmakāya, Tathāgatakāya, and Tathāgata

¹ P. 51.

- 2. Tathāgatakāya is referred to also when the Bodhisattva attains to a certain form of meditation whereby he finds himself in accord with the suchness of things and its transformations. The Tathāgatakāya is realised when all his mental activities conditionally working are extinguished and there takes place a radical revolution in his consciousness. The Kāya is no less than the Dharmakāya,¹
- 3. When the Bodhisattva is described as being anointed like a great sovereign by all the Buddhas as he goes beyond the final stage of Bodhısattvaship, mention is made of Dharmakāya which he will finally realise.2 This Kāya is characterised as vasavartin and made synonymous with Tathagata. In Buddhism vasavarten is used in the sense of supreme sovereignty whose will is deed since there is nothing standing m the way of its rulership. The Dharmakaya may here be identified with Sambhogakāya, the second member of the Trikāya Here the Bodhisattva is sitting in the Lotus Palace decorated with gems of all sorts, surrounded by Bodhisattvas of similar qualifications and also by all the Buddhas whose hands are extended to receive the Bodhisattva here. It goes without saying that the Bodhisattva here described has comprehended the Mahayana truth that there is no self-substance in objects external or internal, and that he is abiding in the full realisation of the truth most inwardly revealed to his consciousness.
- 4 Dharmakāya is found again³ in connection with the moral provisions obtainable in a realm of pure spirituality. The term is now coupled with acuntya, inconceivable, as well as with vasavartita.

Pp. 42, 43, 51, 70

³ P. 134,

- 5. Where all the Buddhas are spoken of as of the same character (Samatā) in four ways, the sameness of the body (kāyasamatā) is regarded as one of them All the Buddhas who are Tathagatas, the Enlightened Ones, and the Arhats, share in the nature of sameness as regards the Dharmakaya and their material body (rūpakāya) with the thirty-two marks and the eighty minor ones, except when they assume different forms in different worlds to keep all beings in good In the light of the later developed theory of the discipline Trikāya, all the three bodies are traceable in this passage of Besides the Dharmakaya expressly rethe Lankāvatāra ferred to, we have also Sambhogakaya solemnised with all the physical features of a superior man, and also the Nirmāṇakāya, the Body of Transformation, in response to the needs of sentient beings who are inhabiting each in his own realm of existence.
- 6 Anutpāda (no-birth) is said to be another name for the Tathagata's Manomaya-dharmakāya 2 Manomaya is "will-made" and as is explained elsewhere a Bodhisattva is able to assume a variety of forms according to his wishes just as easily as one can in thought pass through or over all kinds of physical obstructions. Does then the "Dharmakāya will-made" mean, not the Dharmakāya in itself, but the Dharmakāya in its relation to a world of multitudinousness where it may take any forms it likes according to conditions? In this case the Dharmakāya thus qualified is no other than the Nirmāṇakāya. So we read further that the Tathagata's other names are a legion in this world only that sentient beings fail to recognise them even when they hear them 4
- 7 The Tathagata's Dharmakāya is compared to the indestructibility of the sands of the Ganges which remain ever the same when they are put in the fire ⁵ Further down, the T'ang translation speaks of the Dharmakāya (fa-shên)

¹ Pp 141 ff. ² P 192 ² Pp 81, 136 ⁴ See below pp. 353-355, of these Studies P. 252

having no body whatever, and for that reason it is never subject to destruction. In the Sanskrit text the corresponding term is śarīra or śarīravat, and not Dharmakāva. but from the context we can judge that sarira is here used synonymously with Dharmakava. In fact, the Wei and the Sung translation also have 洪身 (fa-shôn), that is, Dharmakāva, here In Buddhism sarira is something solid and indestructible that is left behind when the dead body is consumed in fire, and it was thought that only holy men leave such indestructible substance behind. This conception is probably after an analogy of Dharmakaya forever living and constituting the spiritual substance of Buddhahood.

8. In the gatha concluding this paragraph on the sands of the Ganges, the Buddha's Buddhahood (buddhasua buddhatāh) instead of Dharmakāya is made the subject of comparison to the sands which are free from all possible faults inherent in things relative. There is no doubt that the Buddhatā too means the Dharmakāya of the Tathagata, only differently designated.

From these references we can see that the idea of Dharmakāva is not wanting in the Lankāvatāra, and that it is used not in the sense of the Dharmakaya of the Triple Body dogma. No doubt the underlying notion of it is here. which contributed later to the formulation of the fullydeveloped dogma. In the following pages the different forms of the Buddhas as they are mentioned in the Lankāvatāra will be examined with the view of ascertaining how far the Lankavatara has paved the way to the Triple Body doctrine.

No Triple Body yet, but a Buddha Trinity

When different Buddha-personalities are distinguished in the Lankāvatāra, it is done so in terms of Buddha and not in terms of Kāya The Buddhas are different as Buddhas and not as belonging to any one of the Trinity. This distinction is important, I think, in tracing the development of the Trikāya theory which did not formulate itself until sometime after Nāgārjuna. As was stated before, when the term Dharmakāya is used in the Lankāvatāra it is not as one of the Trikāya, but simply in contrast to the physical and therefore destructible aspect of Buddhahood The Dharmakāya, therefore, means the Buddha-personality when it is perfectly identified with the Dharma, or the absolute truth itself making up the essence of Buddhism

What corresponds in the Lankāvatāra to the idea of Dharmakāya as a member of the trinity is found in that of Dharmatābuddha, which is also designated as Tathāgata-jñāna-Buddha or as Mūla-tathāgata Dharmatā-Buddha is sometimes shortened into Dharma-Buddha, but they both mean practically the same thing. Dharmatā is translated in Chinese as fa-hsing (法性), the nature of things, and, therefore, Dharmatā-Buddha means the Buddha whose nature is reality itself, and from whom all other Buddhapersonalities flow In the following passage the Lankāvatāra way of treating different Buddhas is clearly delineated 1

"And again, O Mahāmati, all things come into existence when we distinguish between individuality and generality as we are bound by habit-energy to see things projected outside our own minds. And owing to this false discrimination to which we are attached thinking it to be real, we have a variety of illusory beings and scenes, while we cling to them as real they are not at all attainable [as such], this is what is preached by the Buddha who flows out of the Ultimate Essence (dharmatā)

"And again, O Mahāmati, the evolution of false discrimination takes place from clinging to relative knowledge [as final] It is like a man skilled in magical art, who, depending upon grass, trees, shrubs, or creepers, projects all kinds of beings and forms. When a magically-created man takes a form like a substantial being, it is variously perceived and falsely judged [by the onlookers]. Being thus perceived, O Mahāmati, there is yet nothing substantial here; even so, O Mahāmati, depending on relative knowledge there is false discrimination whereby the mind discriminates variously and perceives particular forms. False discrimination, O Mahāmati, arises from habit-energy which makes one cling to the particularising aspect of existence, and we then have what is known as false discrimination. Such, O Mahāmati, is the discourse by the Buddha who flows out [of Ultimate Essence].

¹ P 56 f

"Further, O Mahāmati, the Dharmatā-Buddha defines the extent of self-realisation which has nothing to do with modes of mentation

"Further, O Mahāmati, the Nirmāṇa-Buddha who suffers transformation defines functions and fields differently allotted to Charity, Moral Conduct, Meditation (dhyāna), Tranquillisation (samādhi), various kinds of Wisdom (praŋñā), and Knowledge (jñāna), Aggregates (skandha), Dhātus, Āyatanas, Emancipations, and Vijūānas, showing how these things in their nature far surpass the materialistic views of the philosophers.

"Further, O Mahāmati, the Dharmatā-Buddha is free of support, he is self-sufficing, disengaged from all doings, senses, measurements, and appearances; he is not within reach of the stupid-minded, Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and philosophers, who are engrossed in clinging to the notion of an ego-substance.

"For this reason, O Mahāmati, you ought to devote yourself to bring about the excellent state of self-realisation and be disengaged from the views which regard your own mental projections [as objectively real]."

The three kinds of Buddha here distinguished as the Dharmatā, the Nishyanda (or Dharmatā-nishyanda), and the Nirmāna (or Nirmita) apparently correspond to the trinity of Dharmakāya, Sambhogakāya, and Nirmānakāya. The Dharmatā is the absolute essence of the Buddhahood, which is beyond all forms of limitation and of which nothing is the be predicable. It is realised only within mind (abhisamaya) ¹ Whereas the Nishyanda which flows out from the Dharmatā, owing to the habit-energy or memory (vāsanā) accumulated in it from time immemorial, manifests a world of particulars where, by such categories as individuality and generality, relative knowledge (paratantra) is generated, and depending on this knowledge false discrimination (parikalpita) is made possible, which makes erroneous judgments on things only magically existing. That is to say, the conception of the Nishyanda means the beginning of a world of individual objects

¹ P. 56 ff.

Nishyanda or Nisyanda, from the root syand, literally means "flowing down," or "flowing out," and the Buddha thus prefixed is sometimes translated in the Wei and the T'ang text as 報佛, Pao-fo, or Recompence Buddha, while in the Sung it is 依佛, I-fo, Depending Buddha Not only is there no connection in sense between nishuanda and sambhoga, which means "enjoyment." but the definition given in the Lankāvatāra to the Nishyanda Buddha as to his functions seems to be quite different from the nature of the Sambhogakāya as we ordinarily have it It is strange that the two Chinese texts have $\frac{1}{20}$ occasionally for mshyanda, and at the same time for wpāka also,2 where Vipākasthä-Buddha and Vipäkaia-Buddha are rendered equally by 報佛 (pao-fo). Vipāka means "maturing," or "cooking," and may be translated as "reward." or "compensating," but how did nishyanda come to be pao as much as vipāka? And how did the Nishyanda-Buddha and the Vipāka-Buddha come to be considered as corresponding to the second member of the Kaya Trinity? Or is there really a correspondence between the three ideas? The reason why mshyanda and vināka came to be rendered pao by the Chinese translators is perhaps this. They both belong to the category of cause In Buddhist philosophy five kinds of effects and effect

¹ P 242. ² Pp 28, 34.

(phala) are enumerated against six kinds of causes (hetu). and Vipāka and Nishvanda are two of the five effects, the others being Purushakāra, Adhipati, and Visamyoga. 1 By Vipāka-effect is meant that the nature of an effect is not the same as the nature of the cause. When a man does something good he is rewarded with something enjoyable. Pleasure and goodness are not of the same character, but there is an intimate relationship between them as cause and effect. In the case of the Nishvanda, however, cause and effect are of a similar nature. An act of goodness tends to produce the disposition to do more good; an effect of the same quality flows out of its cause. As thus the Nishyanda and the Vipāka are considered as expressing different forms of effect, or reward. or something that flows out of a cause. they came to be designated as 報 (pao), result, though somewhat indiscriminately. With all that we can say about it. however, it does not seem to be quite correct to regard nishuanda as meaning pao: for the idea explicitly expressed m the Lankavatara is that of flowing out, or depending on, and not of being rewarded The teaching of the Nishyanda-Buddha, which concerns with the individualising phase of existence, is derived or flows out of the nature of reality, as we plainly read in the phrase, "dharmatanishuanda ''

That there is no idea of enjoyment (sambhoga) in the make-up of the Nishyanda-Buddha is evident, but there is something in the Lankavatara remotely suggesting the idea where the Nishyanda-Buddha is spoken of as being in the Akanishtha Heaven. Read the following.2

"It is like the Alayavijfiana, O Mahamati, which makes manifest instantly a world of corporeality (deha), homestead

P. 56.

¹ The Purushakāra (man-working) effect takes place when the farmer cultivates the ground to make it yield a harvest of rice or wheat, the Adhipati is the effect of an efficient cause; and the Visamyoga is the outcome of Nirvana whereby one is released from all bondage.

(pratishtha), and utility (ābhoga), which is the projection of one's own mind, even so with the Nishyanda-Buddha, O Mahāmati, maturing the conditions of all beings, he directs the disciplining of his devotees at his abode which is in a mansion in Akanishtha Heaven. It is, O Mahāmati, like the Dharmatā-Buddha being illumined instantly by the rays issuing from the Nishyanda and from the Nirmāna, even so, O Mahāmati, with the realisation of the truth in one's inmost consciousness, it instantly shines forth turning itself away from the false views of being and non-being"

In this quotation we gather that the Nishvanda-Buddha has his abode in Akanishtha Heaven which is the highest of all the worlds that are designated as having a form (rūna), and that he emits rays of light like the Nirmana-Buddha which are reflected on the Dharmata-Buddha That the Akanishtha is resplendent with light is seen from the verse 3, of the chapter on "Abhisamaya," Akanishiho verājate, and that the Bodhisattva attains perfect enlightenment after passing beyond the tenth stage of Bodhisattvahood and becomes a full-fledged Buddha in Akanishtha Heaven is referred to at several places1 in the Lankavatara Evidently this Heaven is the abode of all the Nishyanda-Buddhas, that is, Buddhas of Sambhogakāya, or Buddhas who are "enjoying" the state of supreme blessedness as the result of their long and arduous spiritual training. While this is the natural outcome of spirituality, it is no doubt also the outflow of the highest truth, depending on which all things exist. Was it then for this reason that the Nishyanda-Buddha came to be translated as 報佛 (pao-fo) as well as 依佛 (1-fo), and again more literally as 所流佛 (soluu-fo)?

As regards the Vipāka-Buddha, or Vipākasthā-Buddha, as corresponding to the second of the Kāya Trinity, bare mention is made of it in the "One Hundred and Eight Questions," and in the "Sagāthakam" which may be said

1

1

ļ

Ę

'n

ı

¹ Pp 28, 34, 51, 56, 215, 269, 361, etc

not to belong to the Lankavatara proper. In the first place we have, "What are the Nirmanika-Buddhas? What are the Vipākaja-Buddhas? And what are the Tathatā-jñāna-Buddhas? Pray tell me." A few pages down we read. "You have asked me what are the Nirmanika- and the Vipākasthā-Buddhas, and the Tathatā-iñāna-Buddhas." The following is from the "Sagathakam": "The Vaipakıka Buddhas, the Naırmānika Buddhas, all beings, Bodhisattvas, and all countries in the ten quarters (140), the Nishyanda, the Dharma, and the Nırmana-nairmanıka.—thev all issue from Amitabha's Land of Happiness (141). What is told by the Nairmanika-[Buddhas] and what is told by the Vipākaja-[Buddhas].—both are the doctrine expounded in sutras of the Vaipulya class You should understand its esoteric meaning (142) What is told by sons of the Buddha is what the leaders also announce. But the speech of the Nairmānika is not [delivered] by the Vaipākika Buddhas (143)."

In order to show the relation between the Sanskrit originals for the various names of the Buddhas and their Chinese equivalents variously given in the different translations, they are tabulated on the following page.

The Nishyanda and the Nirmāņa Buddha

As I said before, the distinction between the Müla-Tathagata (or Dharmatā-Buddha), and the Nishyanda-Buddha (or Vipāka-Buddha) or Nirmāṇa-Buddha is quite well defined for the first is the transcendental substance of all the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, without which nothing can exist, nothing can come into existence; for "the Nirmita-Buddhas are not karma-created (karmaprabhava), and the Tathagata is not in them, nor is he anywhere else than with them "14" Not only that the Nirmāṇa-Buddha derives its raison d'être from the Dharmatā, but that the Nishyanda

LANKAVATARA SUTRA

I. The Buddha in His Absolute Essence

Sanskrit	Dharmatā- Buddha¹	Dharma- Buddha ²	Tathāgata- jūšna- Buddha [‡] tathāgata ⁴
Gunabhadra	法 佛	法佛	如如佛,智慧佛 平符智建佛	真如來
Bodhiruci	法 偽	法 佛	如智佛	模本如来
Šikshānanda	法性佛	法 佛	真如智慧佛	极本佛

TT The Buddha in His Derivative Form

•	Sanskrit	Dharmatā- nishyanda- Buddha* Buddha* Buddh		Vipākaja- Buddha [†]	Vıpāka- sthū- Buddha	Vaipākika- Buddha*
•	Gupabhadra	法依佛	依 佛	報生佛	報佛	(wanting)
•	Bodhiruei	法佛報佛	郭 佛 (報相佛)	報 佛	報 佛	報為
•	Šikshānanda	法性所说佛	報 佛	報 佛	報 俤	報簿

TIT. The Buddha in His Transformations

Sanskrit	Nırmāna- Buddha ¹⁰	Nirmānika- (Nairmānika-) Buddha ^u	Nirmita (-Nirmāna, -Nairmāmka)- Buddha ^{rs}
Gunabhadra	化棉	化维	化佛
Bodhruci	化佛	化 佛	度化化佛(遊化佛)
Śikshānanda	變化佛(化佛)	變化像(化像)	變化如來(化佛)

- ¹ P. 56, line 10, 14, p 57, line 8, 13, p. 93, line 10; p 241, line ?
- ² P. 283, line 6; p 313, gg 381 and 382
- * P. 28, hne 6; p 34, line 3.
- Maung-tathagata in the 4 P. 16, line 14; p. 242, line 7, 8 Sanskrit edition.
 - P. 56, line 14. Sometimes nisyanda
 - P. 56, line 8, 11, 14, p 57, line 8; p 283, line 6; p 320, line 1
 - 7 P 28, line 5; p. 283, g. 142
 - P. 34, hne 2
 - P. 283, gg 140 and 143
 - ¹⁰ P. 56, line 11; p 283, line 6, p. 241, line 7 (-kāya); p 320,
- line 2 n P. 28, hne 5, p 283, hne 6, p. 93, hnes 9-10, p 34, hne 2,
- p 283, line 4, 6, 8. ¹⁴ P. 16, hne 13, p 57, hne 10; p 242, hne 12, 6, p 314, hne 2 (panca-); p. 320, line 1

also is depending upon the Dharmata has already been mentioned. But as to the differentia of the Nirmana, there is some confusion between the latter and the Nishyanda: for it is manifestly the work of both Buddhas to discourse on the categories of individuality and generality; they both belong to the world of relativity 1 What most definitely distinguishes the Nirmana-Buddha from any other kinds of Buddhahood is his coming in direct contact with the world of suffering beings and listening to their fears and anxieties. Though it may not be one of his functions to reveal to us directly the secrets of the inner realisation, he helps us ignorant beings to know where to look for the ultimate seat of enlightenment and emancipation. This then we may regard as characteristic of the Nirmana-Buddha. "This teaching [by the Nairmanika-Buddha] is occupied with the views entertained in the minds of the simpleminded and does not reveal to them any truth whose nature may go against [their understanding], the supreme wisdom whereby the realisation of the inner thing is made possible, or the blissful enjoyment of a Samādhi."2

That the Buddha assumes a variety of forms, so transformed as to bring all beings into maturity and shine in glory like the moon in water,8 or like the sacrificial fire,4 can be gathered from several passages scattered in the Lankāvatāra ⁵

In the "Sagathakam," however, quite explicit references are made to the Nirmana-Buddha "Akanishtha Heaven, where no sins prevail, is inhabited by those who are always in the practice of non-discrimination, detached from the mind and its workings (38) They are in possession of the Powers, Psychic Knowledge, and Self-mastery, and perfect in the attainment of the Samādhi, and there they are awakened into full enlightenment, and here perceived as the Nirmita-[Buddha] (39) There are millions of the Nirmāṇa [forms] of the Buddhas, they are, indeed, immeasurable, and they are manifested everywhere The simple-minded following them listen to the truth (dharma) (40) "

¹ Pp 56, 93, * P 22 f. 2 P 98 4 P 215. See, for instance, besides those already mentioned, pp. 72, 142, 196, etc.

Further on we have this "There is a land and there are the Nirmana-Buddhas Iteaching the doctrine of the One Vehicle and Triple Vehicle. I never enter into Nirvana, [for] the Buddhas know that all is empty and has nothing to do with birth [and death] (g 379) The Buddhas are classified under thirty-six, each of which is divided into ten, in accordance with the mentalities of all beings, they are manifested in all lands (g 380) While in the world of discrimination there is multitudinousness, but in fact no multi-in this world (g. 381). The Dharma-Buddha is the [true] Buddha, and the rest are his transformations (nirmitah), in accordance with the original nature of beings they are seen appearing as Buddhas (g 382). Discrimination takes place because of being musled by delusive appearances, discrimination [however] is no other than suchness; the appearances do not discriminate [by themselves] (g 383) The Self-nature-[Buddha, svabhavika], the Enjoyment-[Buddha, sambhoga], the Transformation-[Buddha, nirmita], the Further-transformed-[Buddha, pancanirmita], and the thirty-six groups of Buddha,—they are the Selfnature-Buddhas (g 384) "

In these quotations we are able to trace the evolution from the Dharmatā-Buddha of the Nishyanda- and the Nirmāna-Buddhas, but as regards the distinctive characteristics of the Nishyanda- and the Nirmāṇa-Buddhas, we are still kept in the dark. A great deal is spoken of the Nirmāṇa Buddha in the sutra, perhaps from his deep interest in the affairs of mortal beings. We can almost safely dispense with the Nishyanda-Buddha as far as we mortals are concerned. This Buddha is evidently enjoying his blissful existence up in Akanishtha Heaven, and enveloped in the light of supernatural character he does not seem to be very anxious to enter into human affairs. But it is possible that he takes upon himself a form of the Nirmāṇa-Buddha when we look up to him wishing that the Exalted One might cast his pitying eye on us who are in nature not altogether different from his former self? Perhaps this is the reason why the number of the Nirmāṇa-Buddhas is beyond measurement, and why they appear to us in the form in which we conceive them to be though each of us does this according to the light of his understanding.

This being the case in all likelihood, we may not wonder how the Nishyanda-Buddha came to be designated as above quoted as the Buddha of Enjoyment.1 And at the same time we can conclude that the conception of the Triple Body has not attained its full development in the Lankavatara. Inasmuch as the Nishyanda or the Vipāka does not come out clearly delineated. while the significance of the Nirmana is definitely emphasised to arrest our attention in the perusal of the sutra, the Lankavatara must be said to belong to the earlier period of Mahavana Buddhism. That the "Sagāthakam" is a later addition to the main text can also be inferred in this connection, as it describes the relations of the different Buddhas in a more detailed and organised manner, and further as it introduces the idea of the Sambhoga-Buddha which has not at all been made a subject of reference in the sutra proper.

There is another verse (434) in the "Sagāthakam" whose meaning is hard to get at but which points to the relationship existing between the three Buddhas in the Sanskrit text it reads as follows:

Desanā-dharma-nishyando yac-ca nishyanda-nirmitam, Buddhā hyete bhavet paurāh seshā nirmāņa-vigrahāḥ.

This is translated in the T'ang version thus: "Depending on the Dharmakāya (fa-shên) there is the Nishyanda (pao) and from the Nishyanda there rises the Nirmānakāya (hushên). This is [or these are] the fundamental Buddha (kên-pên-fo), and the rest are all transformed manifestations" The first part of the Wei translation is unintelligible, while the latter part fully coincides with the Tang, the unintelligible part reads

^{1 &}quot;The Sagathakam," g. 384.

$\text{D} \mathbb{E} \subseteq \text{E} \text{N}, \text{N} \subseteq \subseteq \text{L}

The Vipāka-Buddha

The nature of a Vipāka-Buddha is that of a Nishyanda-Buddha when this is understood in the sense of a result flowing from an antecedent cause, that is, as one of the five effects (pancaphala), and not in the sense of something secondary which issues out of a more primary substance, and the idea is closely connected with the theory of Karma This is not difficult to see, for the theory of Karma always requires something resulting from a cause, that is, according to it, no act can perish without leaving its effect in one way The theory of Karma is another name for the or another. A deed, whether moral or psychological, law of causation therefore, once committed in the inner consciousness, or by the physical body, will never fail to bring, not only on the doer or thinker himself, but upon those intimately related to him some result some day, whose value will somehow correspond with the antecedent Buddhism, thus, has developed an elaborate science treating of the law of causation in the moral world This was the case especially with the earlier followers of the Buddha before the Mahayana began to develop to its full strength The Jataka tales are compiled wholly with the view of acquainting us with practical narratives illustrating the theory of Karms

One of the forms in which the theory of Karma has impressed its marks in Mahayana Buddhism is the conception of the Vipāka, or the Nishyanda Buddha The result of the moral discipline known as the six or ten Perfections (pāramstā) which every aspirant for Buddhahood is required to observe, must be visible in some way on the being of the Bodhisattva. And as long as a world of individual forms (rūpaloka) is to be accepted even as an inevitable outcome of discrimination (vikalpa), the result of the Buddhist devotion must be told, also, under this limitation. Then the Bodhisattva ascends to Akanishtha Heaven where his coarser body is transformed into a shining one with all the marks of an ideally perfect personality. He is then no more a Bodhisattva endowed with the coarse physical corporeality like ourselves, but an immortal god or Buddha endowed with a will-made body (manomayakāya) to which the Lańkāvatāra makes frequent allusions.

There is, however, another conception here entering into the make-up of a shining Buddha, which comes from our inmost religious yearnings. By this I mean the deep human longing for a body of transfiguration. We are not satisfied with our corporeal existence, we are all the time oppressed by the feeling of imprisonment, our spirit soars away from this world of physical limitations, we long forever for a manomayakāya (will-body) This physical body does not fully express the meaning of the spirit, it deranges, it tyrannises. In fact all the religious struggles and aspirations we experience in this life are centered on the control of this body. Theosophists. Swedenborgians, and the Taoists, and the Indian philosophers—they all have the idea of an immaterial body which we can assume when we are favoured by a divine gift, or when our moral discipline reaches its culmination. This is in one sense our longing for immortality We immortalise all the great historical characters, for we cannot be reconciled to the idea that their physical ending means the end of all that has entered into their being

The Buddhas' entrance into Nirvana by no means indicated the passing of all that belonged to him. His disciples could never make themselves believe that their Master was no more with them. The dogma of the Dharmakaya was the mevitable outcome of their psychology as well as of their logic But the Dharmakāya was still too abstract and could not give full satisfaction to their deep-seated religious longings. These longings so innate to the human heart were combined in the case of the Buddhist with the doctrine of Karma, and as the result the Vipāka or the Nishyanda Buddha, or Pao-shên (報身), came into existence in his ideal glorification. Amitābha Buddha, the Lord of Infinite Light, who is one of these Pao-shên Buddhas sits now securely in his Land of Bliss and Purity, surrounded by his worshippers and inviting us poor earthly struggling mortals to join him there

Between the Vipāka-Buddha and the Nirmāna-Buddha it will take some more research to ascertain the historic priority of the one or the other, whatever we may say about the self-enjoyment of the Bodhisattva or Buddha, he could not be a Buddha if he would not manifest himself in every possible form for the spiritual benefit of all beings original vow (pūrvaprandhāna) was to save his fellowbeings when he attained enlightenment, now that he has achieved that end, how can he stay quietly in Akanishtha Heaven absorbed in a Samādhi of the highest order and enwrapped in the glow of supernatural nature? Even if he does not leave his lotus mansion (padmavimana), he ought to despatch, at least, one of his transformation-bodies wherever and whenever that is desired by sentient beings. Or, to state the case in terms of suffering souls, they must be able to approach the Buddha in some way If the Buddha himself is so transcendental and detached from a world of individual objects, suffering souls must be allowed to come into intimate relationship with his shadow or Transformation-Body, transformed (nirmita-nirmāņa) for the sake of unregenerate mortals This is why Avalokitesvara has his thirty-three bodies, and why Kshitigarbha his innumerable representations

Thus, the existence of the Nirmana-Buddha can be

understood in two ways. one from the standpoint of the Buddha himself, whose loving heart cannot help resorting to every possible means of salvation, and the other from the standpoint of sinful mortals who desire every possible help from a power higher than themselves. This mutuality has filled the world with Nirmita-nairmānika Buddhas. Wherever we turn we come across one of these transformations, and if we are earnest and sincere and longing from the depths of the heart, we can see even the real Buddha himself in and through them. This is an idea pregnant with results both good and bad. When it is not judiciously handled, religion becomes a mass of superstition and idolatory grows rampant

The relation of the three Buddhas to one another may be understood in the analogy of an individual person. That there is something ultimate making up the reason of this individual existence is to be granted, because the very conception of individuality is impossible without postulating something behind it. This something is variously designated in philosophy and religion, and also variously interpreted and speculated on. Even the denying of the existence of this something is in truth asserting it, for both denial and assertion are based on the same principle. We cannot escape this, and what makes it thus inevitable for us either to assert or deny it is the principle of individuality. This corresponds to the conception of the Dharmata, or when personnified, to the Dhamata-Buddha.

Now this individual person stands in every possible manner of relationship to his fellow-beings, human or otherwise. As Chuang-txi says, a woman may be regarded by her companions as the most beautiful person and as such admired and adored and loved. But when she comes near a pond and reflects her shadow on water, all the aquatic inhabitants will flee away from her as a most dangerous enemy. What is one man's poison is another's elixir of life. The same individual is not the same at all times to all others. Even a table standing in this room does not look alike to all spectators. As it is observed from different angles and with different frames of mind the object before them is not only physically not of the same size and colour, but psychologically not at all of the same value and significance. In the case of a living person this variability, temporal and constant, reaches its limits. The person himself has not apparently changed but he assumes or seems to assume different forms to his neighbours. May not this aspect of his being be called his Nirmāna value? In spite of all these external and relational mutations, the individual has not at all changed to his own consciousness. That he is himself he at all times knows and he enjoys his personality. This corresponds to the Vipāka-Buddha, or Sambhogakāya.

Every conscious being may thus figuratively or rather metaphysically be said to be the owner of the Triple Body In the case of the Buddha, the doctrine is filled with religious significance and it has played a most important rôle in the development of Mahayana Buddhism One thing we have to notice here is the replacing of the Buddha-trinity by that of the Body (kaya) That Buddhist philosophers have come to talk of the Trikāya instead of Buddhatraya It is not a matter of mere change of terminology, it involves a deeper meaning The reason is that Kaya has a more synthesising value, while Buddha suggests more of individuality The three different kinds of Buddhahood make one think of three different, separate individuals, but the Trikāya means one personality with three aspects In the conception of the Triple Body we trace a systematising thought. The Lankavatara, therefore, marks a step toward this systematisation

The conception of the Body of Enjoyment is interesting from the point of view of karma, for the Mahayana has not ignored the effect of karma on the individual life though it teaches in the doctrine of Parinidhana (vows) and Parinamana (transfering of merit) that there is a power transcending karma and working towards universal enlighterment and salvation.

The Triple Body in the Awakening of Faith in the Mahayana

With the author of the Awakening of Faith in the Mahavāna, the theory of the Triple Body assumes a more finished form The following deals with the subject.

"And again by the functions of Suchness (tathatā) is meant that all the Buddha-Tathagatas while they were still on the stage of self-discipline awakened great love and compassion, practised all the virtues of perfection, and embraced all beings making great vows, in which they expressed the desire to emancipate the entire world of beings without distinction and exception, nor have they set any limit to the number of ages, for their vows reach the furthest end of time. They regard all beings as if the latter were themselves Yet they do not assume the form of a [particular] being Why is this so? Because they really (yathābhūtam) know that all beings and themselves are of Suchness, that they both are of the same nature (samatā), without any distinguishing marks As they have such great Upāyajñāna,1 dispelling ignorance, they see the Dharmakāya in its original essence, and without being conscious of it, perform wonderful deeds, a variety of activities They are indeed like Suchness itself manifesting themselves all over the universe, and yet they leave no marks whereby their activities can be traced Why! Because the substance of all the Buddha-Tathagatas is no other than the Dharmakāya m its pure form of intelligence. There are no parts in Absolute Truth that correspond to worldly truths, it has nothing to do with [the constraints of] achievement It, nevertheless, benefits all beings, as they catch glimpses of it through their senses, and thus we speak of its functionings

² Interally, upāyanāāna means, "knowledge of means," which is generally contrasted with "knowledge of reality" (tattoa; nana). The latter sees into suchness of things, whereas the former goes out to a world of particulars The Buddha is provided with both kinds of knowledge

"Of these functionings we distinguish two kinds What are they? The one is dependent on the Individualising Mind (vastuprativikalpavijāāna) and is perceived by the minds of the two-vehicle followers. It is known as Responding Body (ying shên). As they do not know that this is projected by their Evolving Mind (Pravritivijāāna), they take it for something external to themselves, and making it assume a corporeal form, fail to have a thorough knowledge of its nature

"The second one is dependent on the Karma-consciousness,2 that is, it appears to the minds of those Bodhisattvas who have just entered upon the path of Bodhusattvahood as well as of those who have reached the highest stage. This is known as the Recompense Body, 報身 (pao-shên).3 The Body is visible in infinite forms, each form has infinite marks, and each mark is excellent in infinite ways, and the world in which the Body has its abode is also embellished in manners infinitely varying As the [Body] is manifested everywhere, it has no limitations whatever, it can never be exhausted, it goes beyond all the conditions of determina-According to the needs [of all beings] it becomes visible and is always held by [by them], it is neither destroyed nor lost sight of. All such characteristics [of the Body] are the perfuming (vāsanā) effect of the immaculate deeds such as the virtues of perfection and also the work of the mysterious perfuming linnate in the Tathagatagarbha]. As it is thus in possession of immeasurably blissful qualities, it is called Recompense Body (pao-shên) 4 Those

This corresponds to the Nirminakiya, or the Nirmana-Buddha of the Lankdvatdra Sikshānanda has Hus-shān (代表).

By Karma-consciousness is meant the first awakening of consciousness whereby all kinds of activities, psychical, logical, and physical, are storred up.

^{*} Šikshānanda has here 受用桌 (shou-yung-shên, sambhogakāya)
His text evidently differed from that of Paramārtha ins text evidency differed from that of Faramartha Sikshananda has here, "It is also known as Pao-shên." This also is significant, seeing that it was first called Shon-yung shên.

which are visible to ordinary mortals are of coarser corporeality, appearing differently according to which one of the six paths of existence a man lives in These different forms conceived by different beings are not of blissful character Therefore, they are known as the Responding Body (ying shên).

"And agam, as the Bodhısattva who has first entered upon the path of Bodhisattvaship has a firm faith in the truth of Suchness, he is granted to have a partial glimpse [of the Recompense Body] He knows that the forms. characteristic marks, embellishments, etc., belong to [the Recompense Bodyl, are in their nature neither coming nor going, are beyond the categories of determination, that they re only visible depending upon the mind and not detached from Suchness But in [the mind of] this Bodhisattva there is still individualisation as he has not yet entered upon the rank of Dharmakaya. When, however, his heart is thoroughly purified, he can see things of finer quality, and his activity will be more excellent than ever At the culminating stage of Bodhisattvahood, his vision reaches its height2, and when the Karma-consciousness is no more, there is nothing for him to see: for the Dharmakaya of all the Buddhas has no forms, no marks whatever, of which there is any possibility of mutual perception.

"If the Dharmakaya of all the Buddhas has nothing to do with forms and marks, how is it possible for it to manifest itself m forms and marks?

"Because the Dharmakaya is the substance of all forms, it manifests itself in forms. From the very beginning, indeed, mind and form are not two, the essence of form is knowledge. Because the substance of form is not material, it is known as the Knowledge-body (jäänakäya); and because the essence of knowledge is form, it is known as the Dharma-kāya, which is omnipresent and whose visible forms have no limiting conditions. They appear according to the mind. In the ten quarters of the world there are innumerable. Bodhisattvas, inumerable Bodhes of Recompense, innumerable embellishments, they are all distinct one from another, and yet they are not subject to limiting conditions, nor are they mutually exclusive. This is beyond the discrimination of a discerning mind, for it is due to the absolute activity of Suchness."

¹ Hus shan, by Sikahananda.

^{*} Sikshānanda has this inserted here. "This subtle activity is the Enjoyment Body, as there is Karma-consciousness, the Enjoyment Body is visible."

In this case, Dharma is evidently understood in the sense of form (rüpa) and not in the sense of truth or law. It stands constrasted to jääna which belongs to the mind. The duality of jääna and dharma, of mind and form, disappears when it is understood that they are after all one, as is stated most emphatically in the Prajädpäramitä. The säriputra rüpam sünyatä, sünyatava rüpam, rüpama prithak sünyatä, sünyatava rüpam, rüpama prithak sünyatä, sünyatava pam.

Shou-yung-shên, according to Sikshānanda.

This is from Paramartha's Chinese translation. The other by Sikshananda differs somewhat as has been noticed above. The author's translation of the Awakening of Faith in the Mahdydna was published in 1900 by the Open Court Publishing Co., Chicago, which has, however, been out of print for some time. The author is contemplating the issue of a revised translation before long

4. THE TATHAGATA

The Lankavatara-Sutra being one of the principal Mahayana texts treating of the inner truth realised by the Tathagata (pratyātma-vedya-gati-dharmam tathāgatānām). it behoves us to have some knowledge of the Tathagata himself, as far as it is given us in the sutra. In fact we already know something of him when we have investigated what this inner truth is, for it constitutes the very essence of Tathagatahood, who would not be himself if he had it not. Not only that, his whole life is regarded as to be given up to the propagation of Pratvatmadharma The identification of the Tathagata with Pratyatmadharma does not require any specific proofs as this, indeed, composes the contents of the Lankāvatāra itself. But the Pratvātmadharma alone of itself does not make up the whole being of the Tathagata who requires something more to move among the ignorant and confused and who desires to lead all beings up to the same elevation where he himself is. The realm where he moves along with his inner revelations (pratyātmagatigocara) 18, indeed, beyond that of the philosophers and the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas, as we are repeatedly reminded in the Lankāvatāra, but this self-enjoyment of the blissful Samādhi is not what we expect of the Tathagata. He must show something more, he must be more than himself, go beyond his mner revelations This means that he must be a personality.

As was elsewhere noted, a great compassionate heart (kripā or karuņā), is to be awakened in the wise men who have seen yathābhūtam into the inner truth of things, for this is what makes all great souls really living. To be a person means among other things to be a living being, to have a feeling heart, to hive among the ignorant and confused, and not to remain isolated in his own intellectual transcendentalism. So all the Tathagatas of the past, present, and future must be endowed with this affection for the world The supreme wisdom (āryajñāna) by which they are able to realise in themselves the inner truth of things must not be merely intellectual; there must be an element of affection This is, indeed, what distinguishes the Mahayana from the The reason why the Lankavatara is persistent in dwelling upon the mental attitude (gocara) of the Tathagata toward the world as in such contrast with that of the Śrāvakas and the Pratyekabuddhas and also the philosophers (tirthakara) is that the Tathagata's (or the Bodhisattva's) comprises this tenderness for others in spite of his enlightenment which transcends the categories of being and non-being. of coming into existence and passing out of it The supreme wisdom then distinguishes itself by three marks 1 The first is the Nirābhāsa, meaning "free from all false appearances," "beyond semblance," "shadowless," or "mageless", the second is the Buddha's own will and power, and the third is the realisation of the inner truth When these three aspects or characteristics of supreme wisdom (arya inana) are in perfect combination and operate harmoniously, a Bodhisattva is said to draw near Buddhahood say that supreme wisdom which is the essence of Tathagatahood is composed of the will of the Tathagata plus this nondualistic understanding Aryajñāna is Prajñā supported by Pranidhāna that is, by "the ten mexhaustible vows," while the unsupported Prania is designated as a lame donkey (khanjagardabha) 2 When this place of Buddhist teaching is comprehended, we have mastered more than half of its secrets

¹ Pp. 35-36, 214-216, of the present work

What is the meaning of Tathagata? This has been much discussed by scholars but so far nothing conclusive has been reached Tathā means "thus," but the question is whether to divide tathāgata into tathā and gata, or into tathā and āgata In the first case, gata is "gone" or

¹ Pp 49-50 ² P 50

"departed." and in the second case, if it is agata, it means "is come" or "is arrived." The Chinese translators have adopted the second reading as they have rendered tathaquta for it. In point of fact it does not matter whether the Tathagata is the "One thus come," or the "One thus gone." When his appearance in the world is made the centre of interest, he is the "One who has thus come"; on the other hand if we think more of his disappearance from among us, he is the "One who has thus departed." The main question, however, with the Mahayanists is this,-Why is he designated "thus"? What does this "thus" mean? This is what we wish to know.

There is no doubt the tathā is connected with the Mahayana conception of the ultimate truth as tathatā (suchness or thusness) and also with the idea of seeing into the nature of things yathabhūtam. When the Tathagata's coming into existence and his passing away from it is considered from the yathabhutam point of view, that is, as neither coming nor departing, as not subject to the category of being and nonbeing, his being and his doings may well be characterised as having the quality of "thusness." There is no other good way of describing them. Hence the appellation, the "One who has the nature of thusness in his coming and going," that is, the Tathagata.

In the Diamond Sutra2 we have: "But if, O Subhūti, there is a man who would say. 'The Tathagata goes, he comes, he stands, he sits, or he lies,' that man understands not the meaning of what I say. Why? Because the Tathagata is he who goes nowhere and who comes from nowhere. Therefore, he is called the Tathagata, Arhat, Fullyenlightened One (29)."

7

: *

The Buddha is also called, Sugata (養養) "one who has gone Well "

S.B.E., Vol. XLIX, p. 142.

The interpretation of Tathagata as the thusness of things (sarvadharmatathatā) is given in the Ashtaśahasrikā-prajñāpāramitā-sūtra in a most characteristic manner as follows

"At that time the Venerable Subhūti spoke to the Blessed One thus. This truth is preached by thee that all things are beyond the grasp of the understanding This truth knows no obstruction whatever: there are no signs of obstruction in it; being like space no traces are left in it, it allows no similitude because of its having no companionship, it has no equal because of its standing above all opponents; it leaves no footsteps because of its never having assumed itself; it has never been born because of its being above birth and death; it has no tracks to follow because of no tracks ever being traced here, fit allows of no idle speculation because of its having nothing to do with words and dis-So 1t 18. 80 The Blessed One said to Subhūti erimination it is. just as you say 2]

"Sakra, chief of the gods, Brahman, lord of the world, and the gods belonging to the world of Desire and that of Form, said to the Blessed One. Subhūti, the noble Śrāvaka and the Elder, is truly the one who is born after the Buddha. Why? Because the truth which he declares, he declares indeed in accordance with the doctrine of Emptiness (sūnuatā)

"Then the Venerable Subhüti said to Sakra and the other gods As to what the gods say about Subhüti the Elder's being born after the Buddha, he is indeed such because of his having never been born Subhüti the Elder is born after the thusness [or suchness] of the Tathagata, that is, one who is thus come. As the Tathagata's thusness neither comes nor passes away, so does Subhüti's thusness neither come nor pass away So, indeed, Subhüti's thusness neither

- ² Ranendralala Mitra's edition, pp 306-309
- Added from Hsuan-chuang's Chinese translation.
- * Anugate, meaning "a younger brother" comes nor passes away. So, indeed, is Subhūti the Elder born after the Tathagata in accordance with the thusness of the Tathagata, indeed from the first is Subhūti born after the Tathagata in accordance with the thusness of the Tathagata Why? What is the thusness of the Tathagata that is the thusness of all things, and what is the thusness of the Tathagata as well as the thusness of all things, that is the thusness of Subhüti the Elder! Subhüti the Elder is born after this thusness, therefore he is the one who is born after the Tathagata And this thusness is no-thusness, and after this thusness is Subhūti born So indeed is Subhūti the Elder the one who is born after the Tathagata. What the Tathagata's permanency is, that is the permanency of thusness, and by this permanency Subhūti the Elder is the one who is born after the Tathagata.

"As the Tathagata's thusness is changeless, free from change, not discriminating, free from discrimination,1 so is indeed Subhüti's thusness changeless, free from change, not discriminating, free from discrimination. So indeed Subhūti the Elder, who is by this thusness changeless, free from change, not-discriminating, free from discrimination, is the one born after the Tathagata And as the Tathagata's thusness is changeless, free from change, not-discriminating, free from discrimination, nowhere obstructed; so is the thusness of all things changeless, free from change, notdiscriminating, free from discrimination, and is nowhere obstructed. Why? What is the Tathagata's thusness and what is the thusness of all things, that is just one thusness; this thusness is not two, is not a duality, it is not a twofold thusness, this thusness is nowhere, is from nowhere, and belongs to nobody As this thusness belongs to nobody, so it is not two, it is not a duality, it is not a twofold thusness. Even so is Subhūti the Elder born after the Tathagata's uncreated thusness. What is uncreated thusness, that is in no time no thusness 1 Since it is thusness that is not thusness in no time, this thusness is not two, is not a duality. is not a twofold thusness. So indeed is Subhūti the Elder born after the Tathagata. As the Tathagata's thusness is everywhere in all things without discrimination, free from discrimination, even so is the thusness of Subhūti everywhere in all things without discrimination, free from discrimina-So is Subhuti transformed by the thusness of the Tathagata, and yet there is no splitting into duality, it is not split into two, splitting is not obtainable. So indeed is Subhūti the Elder's thusness not different from the thusness of all things What is not different from the thusness of all things, that is nowhere not thusness, it is just that thusness, the thusness of all things It is admitted that Subhūti the Elder in accordance with the same thusness follows that thusness, it is not admitted that his following is somewhere somehow So indeed is Subhūti the Elder born after the Tathagata.

¹ Hshan-chuang's Chinese translation has one more qualification: "moves universally in all things."

"As the Tathagata's thusness belongs neither to the past, nor to the future, nor to the present, so mdeed does the thusness of all things not belong to the past, nor to the future, nor to the present. Just so is Subhūti the Elder born after this thusness, he is said to be born after the Tathagata Following thusness indeed by the thusness of the Tathagata, he follows thusness of the past by the thus-He follows the Tathagata's thusness ness of the Tathagata by thusness of the past By the Tathagata's thusness he follows thusness of the future By thusness of the future he follows the Tathagata's thusness By the Tathagata's thusness he follows thusness of the present. By thusness of the present he follows the Tathagata's thusness By the Tathagata's thusness he follows thusness of the past, future, and present. By thusness of the past, future, and present,

¹ The sense is This uncreated and uncreating thusness remains so all the time, never losing its absolute identity in spite of its presence and activity in all things

he follows the Tathagata's thusness Thus indeed Subhūti's thusness and thusness of the past, future, and present, and the Tathagata's thusness—the thusness indeed is not two, it is not a duality; so the thusness of all things and Subhūti's thusness is not two, it is not a duality. What is the thusness of the Blessed One and of one who is becoming a Bodhisattva, that is the thusness of the Blessed One who is fully awakened in the highest perfect enlightenment. This thusness by which the Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva is fully awakened in the highest perfect enlightenment is designated by the name of 'Tathāgata'

"Now when this discourse on the thusness of the Tathagata was going on, the great earth shook in six different ways with eighteen great signs: is swayed, trembled, rattled, writhed, thundered, just as it did at the time when the Tathagata was awakened to the highest perfect enlightenment."

One of the ways of determining the conception of the Tathagata is to know what are the essential constituents of Bodhisattvaship, not only after his attainment of an ideal Buddhist life but while he is perfecting himself for such life. A Bodhisattva is a sentient being whose inherent possession is Bodhi, or who is disciplining himself for the realisation of Bodhi or enlightenment. He is thus far from being a Tathagata, but the difference is that between potentiality and actuality, that is, between one who is to be and one who is When we know what the one is aiming at, we can guess what the other is after arriving at the goal.

What are the constituents of Bodhisattvahood? What are the essential qualities of the Bodhisattva? According to the Laikāvatāra, he is the one who endeavours:

1. To get rid of all the perverted views of existence (prapañea-darśana) which he has been cherishing since the very beginning of time:

¹ Pp. 42-43; see also pp 97 ff and pp. 213 ff, of these Studies, where the Bodhusattva is described.

- 2 Thereby to liberate himself from the conditions of discrimination (vikalpapratyaya), and to rise above the net of phraseology woven by erroneous imagination (parkalpita-abhidhāna),
- 3. And further to realise that an external world so called of particulars is no more than the construction of the Alayavinana.
- 4 To attain a mental attitude by which he views Nirvāna and Samsāra as two aspects of one and the same fact $(samat\bar{a})$,
- 5 To be furnished with (a) great compassionate heart (mahākaruṇā), and (b) skilful means (upāyakauśalya),
- 6 To perform effortless deeds (anābhogocaryā), to walk the road of formlessness (animitapatha), to enter upon a mental state of non-semblance (cittanirābhāsa).
- 7. To attain the perfection of Samadhi in which things are viewed as above all forms of perturbation and as unborn,
- 8 To be in the perfection of Prayña, whereby to live always in the thusness of things (tathata).
- 9 To manifest finally the Buddha-body which, now being endowed with the ten Powers, the six Psychic Faculties, and the tenfold Self-mastery, is able to assume any form at will to visit all the Buddha-lands, and to lead all beings to the perception of the truth of the "Mind-only"

When these are achieved, a Bodhisattva or in fact any being is regarded as having reached Tathagatahood. Aside from the question, what the Buddha-body or the Tathagatabody really is—this has partly been discussed in the previous chapter entitled "The Trikäya"—we may mention that the full attainment of this body takes place in the Akanishtha heaven which is the highest of the Rüpadhātu (world of form) 'According to this, as long as we are staying in this world of desire where we mortals are not able to escape the bondage of coarser matter, we cannot attain to the per-

This is referred to in several places, for instance, pp 51, 33, 56, 215, 269, etc.

ļ

fection of the Tathāgatakāya, which is evidently a kind of spiritual body able to take on any form as desired either by oneself or by others. Hence the conception of the Sambhogakāya and the Nirmāṇakāya.

The treatment of the Tathagata in the Lankāvatāra may be divided under two heads. (1) the Tathagata as he is, and (2) the Tathagata in his relation to sentient beings. As to the first head much has already been said, and in fact, the previous chapter on the relation of Zen Buddhism to the Lankāvatāra may be regarded in a way as an exposition of the inner consciousness of the Tathagata. The following quotations which are concerned with the essence of Tathagatahood¹ are more or less repetitions confirming the views already expounded

"[The essence of enlightenment] goes beyond all logical measurement and the senses, it is neither effect nor cause; it is not intellective, nor is it to be reached by reason; it is not qualifying, nor is it to be qualified (79).

"The Skandhas, causation, and enlightenment—these are not seen by anybody anywhere. How can anyone anywhere make any assertion [or discrimination] about that which is not seen? (80).

"It is not something made, nor something unmade; it is not an effect nor a cause it is not the Skandhas, nor no-Skandhas, nor is it any other composition (81).

"It is not to be discriminated as something existing, it is not so seen; this something unseen is not to be known as nothing, for it is that which constitutes the essence of all things (82).

"Something first in being, and there is non-being; nothing yet in being, and there is being; therefore, non-being is not to be attained, and being is not to be discriminated (83).

"Those who do not comprehend what is ego and what is non-ego, get themselves attached to words only. They drown themselves in dualism, they are ruined themselves and ruin the ignorant (84).

² Cf "The Essence of Buddhahood," p. 138 et seq, of the present work.

"When they see my doctrine which is liberated from all error, they see truthfully, they do not harm the Leader (85)"

When Mahāmatı asked what constituted Tathagatahood. the Buddha answered 2 They are Tathagatas and Buddhas, who understand the twofold egolessness, descard the twofold hindrance (avarana), keep themselves away from the two forms of death (cyuti), and from the two classes of evil desires (kleśa). Whether they be Śrāvakas or Pratyekabuddhas, they are equally Tathagatas if they thus qualify themselves, and in this respect, the Buddha says that he teaches only one vehicle impartially carrying all classes of sentient beings The twofold hindrance to the realisation of the inmost truth is the hindrance of evil desires and the hindrance of knowledge, we may say, the constive hindrance and the intellectual hindrance The two kinds of death are death of discontinuity, and death of mysterious transformation (acintyaparınāma) The first is that which takes place on a corporal plane and the second is a form of subtile transformation proceeding in the consciousness of a higher being By the two kinds of evil desires are meant, (1) those that are sturred in us by the agency of ignorance, and (2) those that follow from this fundamental evil.

One of the significant teachings of the Lankavatara concerning the discourse of the Tathagata on the truth of Buddhism, is its insistence on the distinction between the truth itself and an exposition of it. This follows from the Mahayanistic attitude toward the use of language in Buddhism, which is this, that meaning is to be separated from words, for the latter by no means exhaust the former and there is always something that is escaping which can never be adequately expressed in words. Of course we must use words when something has to be transmitted from one person to another, but words are mere indication and not the thing itself. As the sutra says, we have to resort to the word-lamp of discrimination to enter into the inner truth of experience which goes beyond words and thoughts.1 But it is perfect folly to imagine that this lamp is everything 2 The Lankāvatāra is quite positive about this, for it says. "By merely following words and making discriminating attempts to formulate a proposition concerning the truth as it is, a man falls straightway into the bottom of hell on account of this very proposition ''8 Again "when the ignorant not comprehending the secret meaning (saidhs) endeavour to take hold of the knowledge of existence with words, they find themselves hopelessly, like the silk-worm, in a cocoon spun by their own false discrimination "4 Thus Mahamati in this sutra is always anxious to ask the Buddha concerning the relationship between the truth itself and its expression m words, for he is convinced that when this relationship is made clear, the Bodhisattvas including himself will have advanced many steps ahead toward the attainment of supreme enlightenment (anuttara-samyak-sambodhi).

¹ Pp. 190-191

² P 140.

This relationship is known in the Lankavatara as that between siddhanta and desana, that is, between realisation and instruction in words. "This most excellent realisation goes beyond words and letters of discrimination, for it belongs to the realm of non-outflowings (anasravadhātu), and is characterised with the inwardness of perception whereby one enters upon the stage [of Tathagatahood]. By destroying all the philosophers' erroneous views and evil ways of thinking, one shines forth in the light of inner truth As to [·] Väg-vikalpa-ruta-pradipena bodhisattvä mahäsattvä väg-vikalparahitah syapratyatma ryagatim anupravisanti (p. 165).

See also also p 105 ff, of the present work.

P. 156, g 34

P. 163, g. 87.

the Tathagata's instruction in words, it is expressed in the nine divisions in which is given the doctrine of non-dualism transcending the categories of oneness and otherness, of being and non-being, but the main thing in them is to lead sentient beings by skilful means to the end after which their own believing hearts are striving

"There are the truth of realisation and its instruction in words, the inner perception and its preaching, those who see well into the distinction will not be influenced by mere intellection (15)

"In the truth itself there are no such discriminations as are cherished by the ignorant. In non-being there is emancipation, indeed! Why do they not seek it there—they that are addicted to reasoning (16)?

"When we survey this world of things made, we see nothing but a continuation of birth and death; and [the ignorant] are nourishing their dualistic views and because of their perversion they fail to see [the truth] (17)

"This one alone is the truth; Nirvana is not to be taken hold of by thinking The world as subject to discrimination is like the stem of a plantain tree, it is māyā, a shadow (18)

"There is no greed, no wrath, no folly, nor even a person; from desire, indeed, there rise the Skandhas, they are all like objects seen in a dream (19)"

This distinction between realisation (siddhānta) and discoursing (deśanā) is repeated further below² in the sutra in almost identical words. The latter is meant for the ignorant, and the former for those who earnestly discipline themselves in it. The statement that the Tathagata uttered not a word since his enlightenment³ refers to the truth of realisation.

Reference has been already made once (and will be made again later—this time more in detail) to the Buddha's teaching of One Vehicle (skayana), in which all the Buddhists who see into the truth inwardly realisable are carried, no matter to which of the Triple Vehicle they may belong. Because of one universal Vehicle. all the Buddhas, Tathagatas, and Arhats are now said to be of one nature (samatā), and even that they are all one, ie, of one substance In the Mahayana sutras allusions are frequently made to Buddhas of the past, present, and future, and they are an immense number even at present abiding each in his Buddha-land, which fills the universes seen and unseen. Though the Lankāvatāra does not make any positive affirmation, we can quite reasonably infer that all these Buddhas are really one Buddha, revealing himself in time and space and thus mysteriously multiplying himself infinitely, altogether beyond the possibilities of our limited thinking. This is the conclusion we naturally come to when the idea of Samatā (oneness or sameness) is pursued logically.1

¹ Freely rendered, pp 148-149, these gathas are repeated in the "Sagathakam."

⁸ Pp 171-172

Pp 143, 144, 240, 194

"Mahamati asked the Blessed One. m what secret sense speakest thou in the assembly of thy being all the Buddhas of the past? and also in thy former births of thy having been King Mändhätri, or the elephant, the parrot, Indra, Vyāsa, or Sunetra, on such and such occasions?

"Said the Buddha We talk of this in the assembly because of the secret teaching of fourfold sameness (samatā), that I was in ancient days the Buddha Krakucchanda, Kanakamuni, or Kāśyapa What are these four? (1) Sameness in letters (akshara), (2) sameness in words (vāc), (3) sameness in the body $(k\bar{a}y\bar{a})$, (4) sameness in the truth (dharma)attained.

- "(1) By 'sameness in letters' is meant that the title Buddha is equally given to all the Tathagatas, no distinction being made among them as far as these letters, B-U-D-DH-A, go.
- "(2) By 'sameness in words' is meant that all the Tathagatas speak in sixty-four different notes or sounds with which the language of Brahma is pronounced, and that their language sounding like the notes of the Kalavinka bird is common to all the Tathagatas

¹ Pp 141-142.

- "(3) By 'sameness in the body' is meant that all the Tathagatas show no distinction as far as their Dharmakāya, their corporal features (rūpalakshaṇa) and their secondary marks of excellence are concerned. They differ, however, when they are seen by a variety of beings whom they have the special design to control and discipline
- "(4) By 'sameness in the truth' is meant that all the Tathagatas attain to the same realisation by means of the thirty-seven divisions of enlightenment"

That all the Tathagatas are one in the truth they have inwardly realised (pratyātmadharmatā)1 is readily understood, but how are they one in their bodily form? This is an important teaching in the Lankavatara The conception of an originally-abiding-essence-of-things (paurana-sthitsdharmata)2 may help us in this and also of that of the The identification of this Dharmata idea Tathāgata-garbha and the Tathāgata-garbha has not been effected in any explicit manner in the Lankavatara The relation between the thus-identified-somewhat and the Dharmakaya is not also determined to such extent as to permit us to say definitely that the Buddha's Dharmakāya is in each one of us, that we are manifestations of Dharmakāya, and, therefore, that we are Buddhas even as we are, and, finally, that Mind, Buddha, and all sentient beings-these are of one essence and nature and substance The Lankāvatāra is not a systematised treatise devoted to the exposition of a definite set of doctrines, but a mine containing all sorts of metals still in the state of ore requiring analysis and synthesis. It is full of suggestive thoughts which must have been fermenting at the time in the Mahayana thinkers' brains and hearts great schools of Mahayana Buddhism, the Madhyamika and

¹ See also p 143

² P 143

the Yogācāra lie here in an incipient stage of development

While all the Tathagatas are one in the Dharmakāya, they may be variously known to various classes of beings, who imagine their object of worship to be exclusively their own Indeed, there are so many synonyms for the name Tathagata that we cannot begin to enumerate them all. The wise know this well, but the ignorant may refuse to acquiesce in this way of understanding even after they have been instructed. Hence the following remarks in the Lankāvatāra:

"Said the Buddha, O Mahāmati, listen to what I tell thee. The Tathagata is not the non-existent (abhāva), he is not the holder of all that is unborn and undying in all things, he is not one who waits for conditions; I declare him to be the Unborn One, whose synonym is the Dharmakāya who manifests itself as it will. This is beyond the understanding of all the philosophers, Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and those Bodhisattvas who have not yet passed the seventh stage

"It is like Indra who is known as Sakra and Purain-dara (city-destroyer); it is like the word hasta (hand), for synonyms of which there are hara and pane, it is again like tanu, deha, śarīra, meaning the body; like prithivī, bhūmi, vasumdhara, meaning the earth, and also like kha, ākāśa, gagana, meaning the sky. Any object may thus be known under several names though they are not to be adhered to as designating several different objects, each with its own irreducible characteristics. No false judgment must be formed here

"I come into the hearing range of the ignorant in this Sahaloka world in hundreds of thousands of three asamkhyeyas of names, and they talk to me under these names, yet they fail to recognise that they are all my own appellations There are some who call me the Self-existing One (svayambhuva), the Leader (nāyaka), the Remover-of-obstacles (vināyaka), the Guiding One (parmāyaka), Buc dha, Rishi, Bull-king, Brahma, Vishnu, Iśvara, the Orig inator (pradhāna), Kapila, the Destroyer (bhūtānta), th Imperishable (arishta), Nemina, Soma, Fire, Rāma, Vyāss Šuka, Indra, the Strong One, or Varuna, there are other who know me as Immortality (anirodhānutpāda), Emptiness, Suchness, Truth (satyatā), Reality (bhūtatā), Res Limit (bhūtakoti), Dharmadhātu, Nirvāna, Eternity (nitya) Sameness (samatā), Non-duality (advaya), the Imperishable (anirodha), Formless (animitta), Causality (pratyaya) Teaching the Cause of Buddhahood (buddha-hetūpadeśa) Emancipation (vimoksha), Truth-paths (mārgasatyam), the All-knowing (sarvajāā), the Conquering One (jina), or the Will-body (manomayakāya)

"While I am thus known in hundreds of thousands of three-asamkhyeyas of titles, not only in this world, but in other worlds, my names are not exhausted, I am like the moon casting its shadow on water, I am neither in it nor out of it. Those who know me will recognise me everywhere, but the ignorant who cannot rise above dualism will not know me

"They pay respect and make me offerings, but they do not understand well the meaning of words, do not distinguish ideas, the true from the false, they do not recognise the truth itself, clinging to words of teaching they erroneously discriminate that the unborn and undying means a non-existence. They are thus unable to comprehend that one Tathagata may be known in many different names and titles"

This infinite multiplicity of names in which the Tathagata is known to all beings, though they do not themselves realise the fact, betrays the pantheistic tendency running through all the Mahayana schools of Buddhism, and at the same time leads us to the conception of the Transformation-body of the Buddha There is no mystery in the Trikāya

¹ Pp. 192-193

doctrine of Buddhism If the Buddha is compassionate enough to see suffering beings, there is no other way to satisfy his heart's desire than that of the dividing himself into so many different forms and approaching sufferers. The latter, however, may think that they have what they want exclusively in the form revealed to their minds fact the Tathagata is not at all dividing himself, if it seems so, it is due to the discrimination of his devotees. The Transformation-body is thus a creation on their part, it is not an emanation of the Tathagata I have said that he had to divide himself to satisfy his heart, but this is no more than a conventional and human way of speaking. Therefore, the sutra compares the activity of the Tathagata to the moon reflected in water The moon is divided into thousands of reflections, as many indeed as there are dipperfuls of water. This is due to the presence and working of the original vows m the hearts of all the Buddhas, and the working is altogether effortless and without any designs; and yet how purposeful it all appears! This is one of the principal messages communicated in the Lankavatara We now see that the Transformation-body is most intimately connected with the Pranidhana of the Buddha, and this Pranidhana is the spiritual echo or response to the suffering of beings. When sentient beings begin to be conscious of the contradictions within themselves, they have an intense desire (asaya) awakened for some sort of unity or harmonisation, which may be called emancipation, or enlightenment, or salvation, according to the point of view taken of the situation intense desire thus awakened in the hearts of sentient beings cannot remain without calling forth some response somewhere, because the feeling is the cry that issues forth from life itself, and if there is anything living in the Dharmakaya of the Buddha he can never remain in the quiet of Samādhi: he must move out of his lotus-seat This moving-out is, in the terminology of Mahayana Buddhism, his Pranidhana or vow. The Lankavatara, as one of the Mahayana literature, does not forget to touch on this subject. Properly, the sutra is devoted to the elucidation of the inner truth to be realised within oneself, but to neglect the mentioning of the Prapidhāna would be a grievous fault on the part of the writer.

The whole significance of the idea of the Pranidhana is in short this: "The Bodhisattva also realises the inner truth as attained by the Śrāvakas, but because of his compassionate regard for all sentient beings and of his original vows which are now astir in him, he has no heart for the bliss of cessation (nirodha-sulha) and for the bliss of self-absorption (samapatti-sukha)." The Lankavatara alludes occasionally to the ten yows of a Bodhisattva2 which he has made in the beginning of his career. They are principally concerned with the Bodhisattva and not with the Tathagata: but they may be taken at least in their principle as concerned with the life of the Tathagata as well. Amitabha's forty-eight vows mentioned in one of the Chinese versions of the Sulhavarīvyūha-sātra. Akshobhya's vows in the Sutra of the Land of Akshobhya. Kshrtigarbha's ten vows in the Sutra of the Vows of Kshitigarbha. Bhaishaiya-guru-vaiduryaprabhāsa-tathāgata's twelve vows in the sutra bearing his name, Avalokitesvara's vows in one of the chapters in the Saddharmapundarika, etc., are all so many developments of this idea of Prandhana.

As regards such subjects as the Buddha's power being added to his devotees (adhishthāna) or its moving them from within and enabling them to act in this way or that way (prabhāta or anubhāva), they have been treated although somewhat briefly in the previous part of this work, that is, pp. 202-205.

2 Pp. 277, 214, 161, 123, etc.

P. 58. Cf. also pp. 49, 66, 89, 123, etc., and for further exposition of the subject see pp. 220-235 of the present Studies.

5. OTHER MINOR SUBJECTS

Among other subjects which are treated more or less briefly and in a detached way in the Lankavatara, the following have been selected as important. With these I hope the sutra has been explaind somewhat thoroughly as far as the main ideas making up the grand fabric of Mahayana Buddhism are concerned. I have purposely neglected making reference to the Sāmkhya and Lokāyatika views refuted by the author of the Lankavatara. These are valuable when the historical position of the sutra is to be determined, which will be attempted later when a complete English translation of it is published. I have confined myself in this book to the study of such Mahavana thoughts as have engaged the attention of the writer of the sutra. He has by no means exhausted all the Mahayana doctrines, perhaps the sutra was compiled too early for that; one thing, however. I may mention at this nuncture is that one of the ideas most distinctive as Mahayanistic has not received the slightest attention in the Lankavatara, not even bare mention of the term. By this I mean the doctrine of turning over individual merit towards attaining enlightenment, or towards helping others to do the same thing. That is known as Parināmana, transferring of merit.

Pariņāmana follows from the conception of Pariņidhāna. In fact, Pariņidhāna (vowing), Mahākarunā (great love), Upāyakauśalya (skilful means), and Adhishṭhana (power added and sustaining) are all most intimately related ideas; when any one of them is awakened and set to work out its own consequences, the rest inevitably follow it. The Prajñāpāramitā-sūtras considered to be one of the earliest Mahayana literature constantly refer to Pariņāmana, and also in the Avatamsaka and in the Sukhāvatīvyūha it is one of the characteristic terms. Seeing this, it is strange that the Lańkāvatāra is altogether silent about it.

The subjects to be mentioned below are (1) One Vehicle and Triple Vehicle, (2) The Five Fatal Sins, (3) The Six Pāramitās, (4) Four Dhyānas, and (5) Meat-eating.

1 Ekayana (pp 133 ff)

The Buddha is often compared to a great physician who can cure every sort of illness by skilful treatment 1 As far as the science of medicine goes, there is just one principle which, however, in the hands of an experienced doctor finds a variety of applications The teaching of the Buddha does not vary in time and space, it has a universal application, but as its recipients differ in disposition and training and heredity they variously understand it and are thereby cured each of his own spiritual illness principle universally and infinitely applicable is known as One Vehicle (ekayāna), or Great Vehicle (mahāyāna) "My teaching is not divided, it remains always one and the same, but because of the desires and faculties of beings that are infinitely varied, it is capable also of infinite variation. There is One Vehicle only, and refreshing is the Eightfold Path of Righteousness '22

Mahāyāna and Ekayāna are used synonymously in all the Mahayana texts. The idea of likening the Buddha's teaching into an instrument of conveyance was doubtless suggested by that of crossing the stream of Samsāra and reaching the other side of Nirvana. The Mahayana stands contrasted to the Hinayana, and the Ekayāna to the Dviyāna (twofold vehicle). The Dviyāna comprises Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas, whereas the Ekayāna is meant for Bodhisattvas. The readers of the Lankāvatāra are naturally Mahayanists who have a penetrating insight into the nature of all things, know well the distinction between words and their meaning, and lead others to share also properly in the bliss of No-form (animita-sukha). Those of the two Yānas are indeed free from the thought of an ego-substance known as Satkäyadrishti, have no doubt(vicikisa) as to what they have realised within themselves, and do not wish for any external rewards accruing from their observance of morality (silavrata-parāmarśa); but they have not yet reached the realm of the inconceivable wisdom which belongs to the inner life of the Tathagata; and for this reason they have no desire to benefit others or to sacrifice themselves for the sake of others. They rest in the enjoyment of their Samādhi, for in them a great compassionate heart has not been stirred up as is the case of the Mahayana Bodhisattva. The latter is a follower of the Ekayāna

¹ P. 204

² Based on p 204, g 117

^a P 195.

Besides this Ekayāna and Dviyāna, the Mahayana sutras generally speak of Triyāna, which consists of the Śrāvaka-yāna, Pratyekabuddha-yāna, and Bodhisattva-yāna. But we must remember that the Ekayāna has really nothing to do with the number of Yānas though aka means "one"; ska in this case rather means "oneness," and Ekayāna is the designation of the doctrine teaching the transcendental oneness of things, by which all beings inclusive of the Hinayanists and Mahayanists are saved from the bondage of existence. So we have.

"My Mahāyāna is not a vehicle, or a voice, or letters; nor is it what may be termed truth, or emancipation, or realm of no-shadows

"Yet when one is taken into the Mahāyāna one enjoys the sense of perfect freedom issuing from the Samādhi, and one can transform oneself into any form one may wish and, adorned with flowers, become absolute master of all things."2

This is the positive view of Mahäyāna or Ekayāna, and from another point of view which has been designated transcendental, these assertions concerning the Yāna are surely conventional, they are for the benefit of the ignorant.

"I preach the Triple Vehicle, the One Vehicle, and no-

P. 137, gg. 1-2

² Tathägatäenntya-gatu-vishaya-gocara p. 117 ff

Vehicle, but they are all meant for the ignorant, the littlewitted, and for the wise who are addicted to the enjoyment of quietude.

"The gate of the ultimate truth is beyond the dualism of cognition (vijfiapti); when it is abiding in the realm of no-shadows, how can there be the establishment of the Triple Vehicle?"

Further we have:

"The Vehicle for the Gods, the Brahma-Vehicle, the Vehicle for Śrāvakas, one for Tathagatas, and one for Pratyekabuddhas—these Vehicles I preach.

"As long as mind evolves, these vehicles cannot be done away with; when it experiences a revulsion (parāvṛitti), there is neither vehicle nor driver.

"I speak of a variety of vehicles, but there is no real establishment of them; I speak of a variety of vehicles m order to induce the ignorant.

"There are three forms of emancipation; realisation that there is no self-substance in anything, knowledge of sameness, and the liberation from evil desires

"Like a piece of wood drifting in the ocean, tossed about by the waves, the Śrāvaka, weak in wisdom, is tossed about by appearances.

"[The Śrāvakas] are indeed disjoined from these outstanding evil passions, but still under bondage to the passions arising from memory (vāsanā); drunk with the liquor of Samādhi, they tarry in the world of non-outflowings.

"For them there is as yet no reaching the utmost hints of that world, nor is there any more sliding-back. For him who is thoroughly absorbed in Samādhi there is no hope even unto eternity for his awakening therefrom.

"Inke a drunken man who is awakened only after the effect of the hour has disappeared, the Śrāvakas will realise, when they are awakened, my body known as the Buddhadharma."

¹ P. 65, gg. 131-132.

² Pp. 134-145.

Lastly, what is the path of the Ekayana? How does one realise it?

"The way to realise the path of the Ekayana is to understand that the process of perception is due to discrimination; when this discrimination no longer takes place, and when one abides in the suchness of things, there is the realisation of the Vehicle of Oneness. This Vehicle has never been realised by anybody, by the Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, or the Brahmans, except indeed by myself. Therefore, it is called the Vehicle of Oneness."

Why does the Buddha speak of the Triple Vehicle, and not of the Vehicle of Oneness? This is asked by Mahāmati. "There is no truth of Parinirvana Answers the Buddha to be realised by the Śrāvakas and Pratyckabuddhas all by themselves; therefore, I do not preach them the Vehicle of Their emancipation is made possible only by means of the Tathagata's guidance, discretion, discipline, and direction; it does not take place by them alone. They have not yet made themselves free from the hindrance of knowledge (jñeuāvarana) and the working of memory; they have not yet realised the truth that there is no self-substance m anything, nor have they attained the inconceivable transformation-death (acintuparrinamacyuts). For these reasons I do not preach the Vehicle of Oneness I preach the Triple Vehicle to the Śrāvakas. When their evil habit of memory is all purgated, when they have an insight into the nature of all things that have no self-substance, and when they are awakened from the intoxicating result of Samadhi which comes from the evil habit of memory, they rise from the state of non-outflowings When they are thus awakened, they will supply themselves with all the moral provisions on a plane which surpasses the state of non-outflowings where they have hitherto remained '2'

¹ Pp. 183-184.

P. 184

2 The Five Deadly Sins1

The following five deeds are regarded by Buddhism as the worst offences to be committed by its followers murder of the mother, (2) of the father, (3) of the Arhat, (4) disturbing the peace of the Brotherhood, and (5) making the Buddha bleed with an evil motive They are called the "five immediate or uninterrupted sins" because the offender is to be subjected to an uninterrupted series of The Lankavatara gives this its opposite tortures in hell interpretation as follows "Who is the mother of all beings? Thirst (or Desire, trishna) which is regenerative and, accompanied by pleasure and greediness, is the nursing mother The fatherly quality of ignorance (avidyā) causes one to be born in the community (or hamlet) of the six houses (āyatana-grāma) When the root of these two is cut off it is called the slaving of father and mother To extirpate completely the passions that pursue a man like a deadly enemy and excite him furiously like a poisoned rat-this is the slaying of the Arhat What is the breaking-up of the Brotherhood? To destroy completely the root of mutuality and solidarity that holds together the five Skandhas-this is the breaking-up of the Brotherhood O Mahamati, to destroy completely the system of eight³ Vijñānas which perceives an external world as constructed on the principles of individuality and universality altogether independent of mind, and to do this by means of a discrimination which is injurious [to the working of the Vijnana system] but which is productive of a triple emancipation devoid of the

Panaanantaran 1 P 138 et seg

³ It is significant that Sung has here "seven" instead of "eight" The eighth Vijnana is the Alaya where a revulsion (paravritts) takes place and consequently a complete change of one's spiritual outlook When the Mahayanists refer to the doctrine of mund-only, this mind ultimately means the Alaya, or eighth Vijfana, for it is here that memory (vāsanā), since the beginningless past, is stored up from which the whole external world evolves

outflowings (anāsrava),—this is called an "Immediate" (ānantaryaka), because it causes the bleeding of the Buddhabody of the Vijānas with an evil motive

"O Mahāmati, these are the inner five "Immediates." For those who commit these deeds, be they sons or daughters of a good family, there is an immediate realisation of the truth

"Again. O Mahāmati, I will tell you about the external 'Immediates,' so that you and other Bodhisattvas may not m the future harbour any doubt about them By the external 'Immediates' I mean those mentioned in the sutras Those who commit those deeds will never have any sort of realisation of the triple emancipation (vimokshatraya), except those who attain to the realisation by the superadded power (adhishthana) of the Transformation-Buddha When the Śrāvaka supported by the power of a Bodhisattva or by that of a Tathagata sees others committing deeds of the 'Immediate' nature, and, wishing to make them abandon their evil deeds, so that they will be free from the yoke of their errors, is moved to wake them up, he is supported by the supernatural power of the Transformation-Buddha¹ and will attain realisation But there is no such realisation for those who are simply addicted to the 'Immediate' deeds. But he will have realisation (abhisamaya) who, understanding the doctrine that all things are no more than the manifestations of mind, abandons the view that there really is a world of particulars where the body, property, and the abode, are distinguished, cuts himself off from the idea of an ego-

The theory of Transformation-Buddha is also illustrated in the following classification of the Arhats "There are three kinds, (1) those who are single-mindedly intent on walking the path of quetude, (2)) those who, disciplining themselves in a life of enlightenment, lay up a store of merit, and (3) those who are forms of the Transformation-Buddha. The class one is of Srāvakas, but the other two are of Bodhisattvas and the transformations of the Buddha who manifest themselves in consequence of skilful means derived from their original vows and also in order to adorn the assembly of the Buddhas" (P substance and what belongs to it, befriends good companions whenever and wherever they are met who will induce him to another world, and is able to release himself from the faults of self-discrimination. It is thus said

"Thirst is indeed the mother, and ignorance is the father, when from the understanding of an objective world there rises Buddha-knowledge

"The passions are the Arhat, and the five Skandhaaggregates are the Brotherhood, as these and no other 'Immediates' are to be destroyed, here is indeed a set of deeds called 'Immediate'."

In this quotation I wish to draw the reader's attention The term is someto the reference to nirmita-adhishthana what casually introduced here, but the idea indicated here is an important one, for it shows that there has been since the early days of Buddhism a notion that not only the Tathagata but even a Bodhisattva when he reaches a higher state of spirituality is able to manifest himself in a variety of forms if necessary for the welfare and salvation of all beings If a Bodhisattva wishes to save a wretched drunkard, for instance, he may turn himself into one of his companions if he thinks that is the best way to approach him and awaken him from the wretchedness of his position For when the Bodhisattva remains in his original purity and, saintliness, the drunkard may not come within the range of his moral influence, like seeks like, and consequently drunkards find it easier to associate with one another, they hate a mixed society, especially with him who is decidedly opposed to them and openly anxious to save their souls in Buddhism, the Bodhisattva in his apparent transformation puts on the garb of a drunkard himself and mixing himself with his bacchanalian friends he awaits a chance Perhaps he may show that he has been regenerated and raised to a higher plane of spirituality His friends may now wonder how a drunkard could be so reformed, and so When this wonderment is once grafted into the conseiousness of his drunkard-friend, the Bodhisattva will redouble his efforts, and, making use of his "skilful means" (upage), see to it that the grafted idea at first occupying only an obscure corner of the intoxicated consciousness. 2 former friend of the Bodhisattva, strike root gradually, steadily grow, and finally cause a sudden awatening (pcravritti) in the soul that was hitherto in a most wretched state of spirituality, or rather of non-spirituality. This Bodhisattra who in this case has proved to be an instrument of selvation is said to be a transformation-hody of the Tathagata led by his supernatural power (adhishthana). The skilful means he has resorted to here is technically known as samanarthana (同事 in Chinese), engaging in the same work, which is a kind of proletarian morality. The aristocracy of saintship cannot penetrate into the depths of an ordinary soul and to understand this a Bodhisattva has to become an ordinary character himself. The doctrine of Upava-kausalya ("skilful means") is an interesting one in the evolution of Mahayana Buddhism. The thought is organically and intimately connected with the great compassionate heart that constitutes the centre of existence.1

3. The Six Paramitas (p. 236 E)

This is one of the marks most characteristically distinguishing the Mahayana from the Hinayana. In most Mahayana sutras the six Pāramitās are stated specifically as meant for Bodhisattvas. All the virtues that are meant for Bodhisattvahood are included herein, and, indeed, it was as the result of the six Pāramitās that the Buddha was able to gain the grand enlightenment about two thousand and five hundred years ago. If he did not practise all these virtues to their utmost in his past lives he would never have gained an insight into the truth of existence. Pāramitā

See also the Seddharmoptaderice, Kern's English Translation, p. 410 et seq., where the Bodhisativa Avaloliteivura and his transformations are described.

may mean either "reaching the other shore," or "perfection". In the Chinese sutras it is in most cases left untranslated as 波羅奎 (pa-lo-m²)

The six Pāramitās are (1) charity (dāna), (2) morality (śīla), (3) patience or humility (kshānti), (4) energy, or strenuosity (vīrya), (5) meditation (dhyāna), (6) wisdom, or intuitive understanding of the ultimate truth of things (prajāā)

The Lankāvatāra gives three kinds of Pāramitās (1) worldly, (2) super-worldly, and (3) super-worldly in its highest degree The worldly kind is practised by worldly people who cling to the idea of an ego and what belongs to it, they are unable to shake themselves off the fetters of dualism such as being and non-being, and all the virtues they would practice are based on the idea of gaining something material as a reward They may gain certain psychic powers and after death be born in the heaven of Brahma The super-worldly kind is practised by Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas who, clinging to the idea of Nirvana, are determined to attain it at all costs, they are like the worldly people who are attached to the enjoyment of egotism Pāramitās that are super-worldly in the highest sense are practised by a Bodhisattva who understands that the world is dualistically conceived, because of the discriminating mind, and who is detached from erroneous imaginations and wrong attachments of all kinds, such as mind, form, characters, etc He would practise the virtue of charity solely to benefit all sentient beings and to lead them to a blissful state of mind To practise morality without forming any attachment to the condition in which he binds himselfthis is his Sīla-pāramitā Knowing the distinction between subject and object, and yet quietly to accept it without waking any sense of attachment or detachment, this is the Bodhısattva's Kshāntı-pāramıtā To exercise himself most intently throughout the night, to conform himself to all the requirements of discipline, and not to evoke and discriminating mind—this is his Vīrya-pāramitā. Not to cling to the philosopher's view of Nirvana and to be free from discrimmation—this is Dhyana-paramita As to Praina-paramita. it is not to evoke a discriminating mind within oneself, nor to review the world with any kind of analytical understanding. not to fall into dualism, but to cause a turning at the basis of consciousness. It is not to destroy the working of a past karma, but to exert oneself in the exercise of bringing about a state of self-realisation. This is Praine-paramita.

4. The Four Dhyanas (pp 97 f)

The classification of Dhyana under four heads has been treated previously in my Essays in Zen Buddhism,1 and I will not repeat it here except to quote the gathas which appear after the prose.

"There is (1) Dhyana that surveys the meaning, (2) Dhyāna practised by the ignorant, (3) Dhyāna depending on suchness, and (4) the Tathagatas' pure Dhyana

"The practiser (uogm) may see [while in meditation] something in the shape of the sun or moon, something like a lotus-flower, or like the lowest region, he may see something resembling the sky, or fire, or a picture, or something heaped นท (ทนิทีเลิก?).

"All these forms, a variety of things, but lead the yogin to the path of the philosophers, and make him fall into the realm of Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas.

"When all these are abandoned and he is in the state of no-shadows, all the Buddhas will come together from their lands and with their shining hands amoint the head of the blessed with unguents; his [mental] state is in full conformity with suchness (tathatā)."2

Further down there is another statement concerning the attainment of the Dhyanas

¹ Series I, p. 81 et seq. ² P. 98.

"All the Dhyānas, Apramānas,, Ārūpas, Samādhis, the Cessation of Thought,—all these are mental constructions, nothing of the sort is really attainable

"The fruit resulting from the life of a Srotāpanna, of a Sakridāgāmin, or of an Anāgāmin, or of an Arhat—all this is mental confusion.

"The Dhyāna practised, Dhyāna itself, and the subject of Dhyāna, the abandonment, the seeing of the truth,—all this is discrimination; he who understands is released"

5 On Meat-eating (p 244 et seq)

The motive for having this chapter appended to the Lankāvatāra, when it has no organic connection with the text proper, seems to lie in a passage towards the end According to it, the Buddha evidently dislikes the idea of being thought of as the one who has permitted meat-eating among his followers He says, there may be some unenlightened tollowers of mine after my death, who, not knowing the spirit of my teaching and training, may wrongly conclude that I allowed them to eat meat and that I myself ate it This would be disastrous For how can those who are abiding in a merciful heart, disciplining themselves in asceticism, and trying to follow the path of Mahayana, tell others to eat animal food? Indeed, I have elsewhere given rules as to the eating and not eating of meat, ten rules for avoiding and three rules for accepting it But in this Lankavatara as well as in the Hastikakshya, Mahamegha, Nirvaņa, and Angulimālika sutras, meat-eating is absolutely forbidden Not only in the past, but in the future and now, all my followers are to shun animal food no matter how it has been If there is any one who would accuse me of eating meat myself and allowing others to eat it, he will Holy people surely be born in an undesirable region refuse to eat even the food of ordinary people, how much more so with meat-eating! Their food is the food of truth

(dharmāhāra), the Tathagata's Dharmakāya is supported by that.1

According to this, there must have been the accepting of meat-food among the followers of Buddhism in the time when the Lankavatara was compiled Evidently, the Buddha did not object to their eating it if the animal was not especially killed for them This caused unfavourable comments among the other religions, for instance, the Lokayatas.2 and the Buddhists naturally did not like them, and this must have started the new effort to prohibit meat-eating altogether among the Mahayana advocates.

The following are the reasons for not eating animal food as recounted in this sutra:

- (1) All sentient beings are constantly going through a cycle of transmigration and stand to one another in every possible form of relationship. Some of these are living at present even as the lower animals. While they so differ from us now, they all are of the same kind as ourselves. To take their lives and eat their flesh is like eating our own Human feelings cannot stand this unless one is quite callous. When this fact is realised even the Rakshasas may cease from eating meat The Bodhisattva who regards all beings as if they were his only child cannot indulge in flesh-eating.
- The essence of Bodhisattvaship is a great compassionate heart, for without this the Bodhisattva looses his being Therefore, he who regards others as if they were himself (sarva-bhūtātmabhūta), and whose pitying thought (kripātma) is to benefit others as well as himself, ought not to eat meat. He is willing for the sake of the truth to sacrifice himself, his body, his life, his property, he has no greed for anything; and full of compassion towards all sentient beings and ready to store up good merit, pure and free from wrong discrimination, how can he have any longmg for meat? How can he be affected by the evil habits of the carnivorous races?

¹ Pp. 254-256 ⁵ Of. p. 244.

- (3) This cruel habit of eating meat causes an entire transformation in the features of a Bodhisattva, whose skin emits an offensive and poisonous odour. The animals are keen enough to sense the approach of such a person, a person who is like a Rakshasa himself, and would be frightened and run away from him. He who walks in compassion (maitri-vihāri), therefore, ought not to eat meat
- (4) The mission of a Bodhisattva is to create among his fellow-beings a kindly heart and friendly regard for Buddhist teaching. If they see him eating meat and causing terror among animals, their hearts will naturally turn away from him and from the teaching he professes. They will then lose faith in Buddhism.
- (5) If a Bodhisattva eats meat, he cannot attain the end he wishes, for he will be alienated by the Devas, the heavenly beings who are his spiritual sympathisers and protectors. His mouth will smell bad, he may not sleep soundly; when he awakes he is not refreshed, his dreams are filled with mauspicious omens, when he is in a deserted place, all alone in the woods, he will be haunted by evil spirits, he will be nervous, excitable at least provocations, he will be sickly, have no proper taste, digestion, nor assimilation, the course of his spiritual discipline will be constantly interrupted. Therefore, he who is intent on benefitting himself and others in their spiritual progress, ought not to think of partaking of animal flesh.
- (6) Animal food is filthy, not at all clean as a nourishing agency for the Bodhisattva It readily decays, putrifies, and taints It is filled with pollutions, and the odour of it when burned is enough to injure anybody with refined taste for things spiritual
- (7) The eater of meat shares in this pollution, spiritually Once King Simhasaudāsa who was fond of eating meat began to eat human flesh, and this alienated the affections of his people He was thrown out of his own kingdom Sakrendra, a celestral being, once turned himself

SOME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES 371

mto a hawk and chased a dove because of his past taint as a meat-eater. Meat-eating not only thus pollutes the life of the individual concerned, but also his descendants

(8) The proper food of a Bodhisattva, as was adopted by all the previous saintly followers of truth, is rice, barley, wheat, all kinds of beans, clarified butter, oil, honey, molasses, and sugar prepared in various ways. Where no meat is eaten, there will be no butchers taking the lives of living creatures, and no unsympathetic deeds (gataghrinā) will be committed in the world.

A SANSKRIT-CHINESE-ENGLISH GLOSSARY

In the following Glosslery, the figures after each Sanskrit term refer to pages in the present work, the figures in parentheses to pages and lines in the Sanskrit text of the Lankāratāra, thus 28—7,8 means p 28, lines 7 and 8, of the Sanskrit text, the figures accompanying "The Sagāthakam" refer to the verses T=the T'ang translation, W=the Wei, and S=the Sung

A SANSKRIT-CHINESE-ENGLISH GLOSSARY

Akanishtha (-bhavana), 208, 324, 327, 329, 331, 332, 346, 色究 意天 阿加默氏天: Akanishtha literally means "not the least" or "not the smallest." and the heaven so designated is regarded as situated at the highest end of the Rupadhatu or Rupaloka, the world of Form According to Dr Unrai Wogihara (Mahāvuutpatti, "Notes," p. 306). aka must have been originally agha, and agha ordinarily means "evil" or "pain." but Buddhists understood it in the sense of form, perhaps because pain is an inevitable accompaniment of form. Hence the Chinese 色究意, that is, the limit or end of form In the Lankavatara (28-Kämadhätau katham kena na vibuddho 7,8), we have vadāhi me, akanishthe kim artham tu vītarāgeshu budhyase. 云何於欲界, 不成等正覺, 何故色究竟, 雕染得菩 提(T) The idea that the Bodhisattva attains his supreme enlightenment when he is reborn in the Akanishtha Heaven and not while he is on earth, i.e., in the world of Desire (kāmadhātu), recurs throughout the Lankāvatāra Kāmadhātau tathārūpye na vai buddho vibudhyate, rūpadhātvakanıshtheshu vîtarageshu budhyate ("Sagathakam," 774),欲界及無色,不於彼成佛,色界究竟天,離欲得菩提 (T) So long as we have desire (raga) based on egoistic impulses, we are barred from really spiritual realisation; and when we have it. we are no more in this world of Desire where existence is too deeply tinged with individuality The Sambhogakāya, therefore, belongs to the heaven where form or individuality reaches its utmost end as the spirits here are no more bound by the mutually exclusive sense of a bodily existence Does the belief in the attainment of Supreme Enlightenment upon one's being reborn in the Pure Land come from this notion of the Akanishtha Heaven? For references in the Lankāvatāra see pp 28—7, 8; 33—15, 16, 51—8; 56—9; 215—14, 269—4, 361—6. Akanishtho virājate, 324, 色光色流然, That this Heaven is filled with brightness is natural, seeing that form obstracts and excludes while light intermingles, and the Akanishtha is the abode of Shining Buddhas and Bodhisattvas

Akshara, 109, 文字, word, letter, syllable Tattvam hy aksharavarjitam (48—12), 真實經文字(T), "The truth is detached from letters" Niraksharatvāt tattvasya (190—6), 真實之法施文字故(T), "because of the truth hemg detached from letters." Na ca mahāmate tathāgatā aksharapatitam dharmam dešayanti (191—3), 大题如來不說確文字法(T), "The Tathāgatas do not preach the doctrine that has degenerated into mere words" Aksharasamatā, 351, 字平等, sameness of letters

Acalā, 78, 225, 262,不動地, immovable, the eighth of the ten stages of Bodhisattvahood. When the Bodhisattva reaches here, he gets rid of discrimination and has a thorough understanding of the nature of existence, realising why it is like māyā, etc., how discrimination starts from our innate longing to see existence divided into subject and object, and how the mind and what belongs to it are stirred up; he would then practise all that pertains to the life of a good Buddhist, leading to the path of truth all those who have not yet come to it. This is the Bodhisattva's Nirvana which is not extinction. See above, p 215

Acitta, 201, 283, 弄心, no-mind, beyond mentation; Acittatā or acittatva, 284, 286, 弄心, no-mind-ness Such abstract terms as these are frequently met with in the sutras belonging to the Prajūāpāramitā class of Mahayana literature

Acıntya, 146, 201, 317, 不思議, beyond mentation; Acıntyajñāna, 208, 不思議者, knowledge or wisdom that is beyond the understanding, that is, 不思議諸佛如來智慧境界, (acmtyaninaginagocaravishaya); Acintyaparināmacyuti, 212, 348, 361, 不思議變易死, death of mysterious transformation or inconceivable transformation-death. This has nothing to do with corporeal existence. It happens only to such spiritual beings as Bodhisattvas; Acintyavāsanāparmāma, 178, 不思議意變, mysterious transformation that takes place within the mind (citta), making it comprehend an external world of particular objects.

Ajāta, 227, 不生, not born

Ajñānakarmatrıshnā, 167n, 無明·業·愛, ignorance, karma, and desire—the three motive powers that keep the present world a-going Ajñānatrıshnākarmādih samkalādhyātmiko bhavet (203—14), 無明與愛業是則內鉤鎖 (T'ang). "Ignorance, desire, karma, etc are the inner fetters." (See also 68—11, 177—18) Bhagavān apyajñānatrishnākarmavikalpapratyayebhyo jagata utpattim varnayati (197—14, 15), 世事亦說無明愛業妄想為綠生諸世間 (Sung) "According to the Buddha, too, the world rises from such causal combinations as ignorance, desire, karma, and discrimination."

Atyantaprakritipariśuddhi, 180n, 畢竟自清淨; Tathāgata-garbhah prakritiprabhāsvaraviśuddhah (77—15), 如來藏本性明亮清淨. That the original essence of the Garbha is pure and transparent, means that it is absolutely neutral and transcends all the logical categories that are derived from the dualism of subject and object. This is Suchness, the state of being unborn

Advaya, 123n, 354, 無二 or 不二, non-duality, Advanta, 166, 287, 不二 or 無二, non-duality.

Adhıgamāvabodha. 273, 證知, realisation.

Adhipatiphala, 323, 增上果, one of the Pancaphalam; see under Phala

Adhishthāna, 79, 203 ff, 356, 363, 365, 加持力, or 威神力, the spiritual power of the Buddha which is added to a Bodhisattva and sustains him through his course of discipline This is one of the conceptions peculiar to Mahayana Buddhism. Amitāyushas tathāgatasya pūrvaprandhānādhishthanena (Sukhāvatīvyūka, 55—14), 無点證佛啟神力代, 本顏力故 (Samghavarman) "Owing to the sustaining power of the original vows made by the Tathāgata Amitāyus" Aśraushīd rāvano tathāgatādhishthānāt (2—10), 維婆那以佛神力即佛話(T)

Anāgāmin, 268, 阿那含(不疑), one who returns not Anāgāmiphala. 148, 阿那含果(不疑果), the state of not-returning One of the four 'fruits' of the Buddhist ascetic life (沙門 'framana'), which are 1 Srotaāpanna, 須陀道(預 流), he who has entered upon the stream, 2 Sakridāgāmin, 斯陀含(一來), he who returns once to this life, 3 Anāgāmin, 阿那含(不疑), he who never returns, and 4 Arhat 凝淡, he who has attained the highest end of the Buddhist life

Anabhinirvritti, 227, 無起, not rising

Anavabodha, 274, 不覺, not knowing Vastusvabhāvābhinivešah svacittadrišyamātiānavabodhāt pravartate (100—4,5), 引自性相計著者,從不覺自心現分齊生(S);何名執 治世事證相,謂不如實知唯是自心見外望界故(W), 執着 諸法自性相者不覺自心所現故起(T) "One's attachment to the self-nature of realities takes place owing to one's not knowing the truth that what is presented [as an external world] is no more than the mind itself" Observe how variously vastusvabhāva here is translated by the Chinese translators

Anābhāsa, sometimes Nirābhāsa, 168, 無影像, 無影, 無相, See also Nirābhāsa

Anābhoga, 43, 無功用, 無開發 (Sung), effortless, purposeless, not being aware of conscious strivings Anābhogapūrvapranidhānaviśvarūpamanisadriśavishayānantalakshanapracāram (89—6,7), 以無功用本顯力故, 如如意實無景學不可無邊境界(T), 依本顯力,如如意質,無景學界修行之相自然行故(W); 無開發本願, 譬如衆色摩尼, 境

界無邊相行(S). "Owing to the original vows which have no purposeful motives, he manifests himself like a many-coloured gem in all possible conditions and with infinitely varied signs." Anābhogacandrasūryamanimahābhūtacaryā gatigamāh (161—1, 2), 無方便行, 獨日月摩尼四大(S), 營如四大日月摩尼,自然而行(W);以無功用,種種變化, 光明照曜, 如日月摩尼地水大風(T). "Their course of life is purposeless like the moon, the sun, the gem, and the four elements" Anābhogacaryā, 99, 216, 222, 346, 無功用行, 無開發行, purposeless deeds, a life free from conscious strivings. One of the very significant conceptions of Mahayana Buddhism

Anāsrava, 276, 無漏, non-flowing Āsrava (有漏) is something which cozes or flows out of the mind and spoils generally the upward career of the Buddhist life, to get rid of this is the aim of the ascetic discipline. The four principal poisonous outflows are lust (kāma), clinging to life (bhāva), speculation (drishti), and ignorance (avidyā) Anāsrava is a state free from these impurities. Anāsravadhātu, 349, 360, 無漏界, realm of non-outflowings.

Animitta, 97, 259, 287, 954, 無相, formless, no-form, devoid of appearances It is generally used in connection with sûnyatā and apramhitam Animitta—nirābhāsa Animitta—patha (or animittādhishthāna), 346, 無相遺, 無相處, path or abode of formlessness; Animittasukha, 858, 無相樂, bliss of formlessness Svātmānam ca samyaganimittasukhena prīṇayanti parāmśca samyanmahāyāne pratishthāpayanti (195—7,9), 彼則能以正無相樂,而自娛樂,不等大樂建立衆生(8),爾時自身於無相法樂而受樂,安佳大乘中,令泉生知(W), 則能令自身受無相樂亦能令他安佳大乘(T) "They will thus make themselves properly enjoy the bliss of formlessness and also make others properly abide in the Mahāyāna"

Anirodha, 354, 不減, not subject to destruction; Aniro-

dhānutpāda, 292 ff, 354, 不減不生, immortality, being above birth and death

Anishthita, 227, 無盡, not extinguished

Anujāta, 842n, 随生, born after Yathā tathāgatatathatā 'nāgatā 'gatā evam hi subhūtitathatā 'nāgatā 'gatā, evam hi subhūtih sthavirastathāgatatathatām anujātah (Praj p 307—1, 2); 如來真如無來無去,本性不生,善現真如亦無來無去,本性不生,故善現隨如來生 (Hsuan-chuang),如如來如不來不去,須普提如,從本己來,亦不來不去,是故須菩提隨如來生 (Kumārajīva) For the English translation see The Studses, pp 242 f

Anuttara-samyak-sambodhi 206, 287, 349, 阿耨多羅三藐三 菩提, 無上正等正覺, the supreme enlightenment realised by the Buddha

Anutpatti, 141, 不生, no-birth

Anutpattikadharma, 228n, 法不生, the eight ways in which the conception of no-birth is established are as follows adau tattve 'nyatve avalakshane svayamathānyathābhāve, samkleśe 'tha viśeshe kshāntir anutpattidharmoktā (Sūtrālamlāra, x1, 52), 本來及真實, 異相及自 相, 自然及無異, 染汗差別八, (Prabhākaramıtra) Things (dharmas) have never been born because the idea of birth-and-death does not obtain in reality that which precedes there is that which follows, and there is no difference between antecedents and consequents, and no absolute beginning can be assigned to anything (3) If anything is already here nothing else can take its place unless we assume an independent origin, which is impos-(4) The notion of self-substance comes from the (5) Because imagination which is not based on reality of relative dependence (paratantra) we assume natural origin, but in reality there is nothing that can be called (6) The absolute oneness of perfect knowself-substance ledge (parinishpanna) excludes the idea of otherness (7) When the knowledge of complete destruction (kshayapassions (8) In the Dharmakäya of all Buddhas there is perfect unity, and no differentiating individuation. When this eightfold notion of no-birth is realised one attains the recognition of the birthlessness of all things.

Anutpattikadharmakshānti, 75, 107, 125, 126n, 211, 226, 227f, 287, 298, 無性說 This is the recognition that nothing has been born or created in this world, that when things are seen yathābhūtam from the point of view of absolute knowledge, they are Nirvana itself, are not at all subject to birth-and-death. In this connection Kshānti seems to be somewhat differently understood from when it is used in opposition to Jūāna as in the Abhidharmakośa. The Mahayana Kshānti is an independent notion, and final as far as its spiritual value is concerned, for when one gains Anutpattikadharmakshānti one has realised the ultimate truth of Buddhism. The attainment of this Kshānti is adhīgamā, realisation (12—10)

Anutpanna, 166, 227, 無生, unborn Anutpannasvabhāvah, 122, 自性不生. If there is anything to be called self-substance, it cannot be subject to birth-and-death.

Anutpāda, 34, 43, 94n, 96, 123n, 168, 239, 283 ff, 不生, nobirth Anutpādam sarvadharmānām, 諸法不生. Anutpāda nirvānam, 295, 涅槃者不生, Nirvana means no-birth. (Anything that is subject to birth and death is not Nirvana.)

Anupalabdhya, 306, 不可得, unattainable, unknowable; Anupalabhyamānatva, 286, 不可得, unknowability. Bhāvasvabhāvalakshaṇāsattvāt sarvadharmā nopalabhyante (115—16, 17), 謂一切法無性相故, 不可得故 (T), "All things are beyond the reach of knowledge because there are no such things as self-substance and its outward signs" Cittamātravinirmuktain brahmādir nopalabhyate (210—1), 若離於心者, 一切(梵天等) 不可得 (T), "Apart from the Mind-only such notions as Brahma, etc. are not to be known "

o

- Anubhāva, 203, 356, 威神力, 神力, 威力, Buddhānubhāvena utthāyāsanāt (22—2, 3), 承佛神力從座而起, "Having risen from his seat through the power of the Buddha"
- Anulomikikshānti, 126n, 柔順忍, Kshānti of obedience
- Anuvyanjana, 352, (八十)随好, secondary marks of excellence which are reckoned eighty For detail see the Mahavyutpatts, xviii
- Anyonyahetuka, 191, 互為因 mutuality, Dve 'pyete 'bhinnalakshane 'nyonyahetuke (37—18), 此二藏無異相互為因 "These two have no differentiating marks, they condition one another "
- Aparapraneya, 73, 202, 不由於他, not depending upon another Svapratyātmabuddhyā vicārayatyaparapraneyah (133—10, 11), 自覺觀察不由於他(S) "Not depending upon another he reflects with his own intelligence"
- Apavāda, 157, 165, 180, 247, 誹謗, controversy, refutation Kudrishtisamāropasyānupalabdhipravicayāhhāvād apavādo bhavati (71—6,7), 於諸惡見所建立法, 求不可得, 不善觀察,逐生誹謗(T) "A controversy takes place when the impossible nature of a proposition based on wrong views is not clearly comprehended"
- Apracarita (-śūnyatā), 288, 無行 (空), Emptiness of nonaction, one of the seven Emptinesses
- Apratishthita, 95, 無所住, not-abiding This idea of not abiding anywhere is more in evidence in the Prayňōpāramstā Sūtra than in the Lankāvatās a. =anābhinivishta, =anābhoga, =apranihita, etc
- Apratisamkhyānirodha, 264, 293, 非擇減, annihilation taking place without premeditated efforts One of the three Asamskritas(無為)
- Apranihita, 138, 141, 259, 287, 無限, being without constrained efforts One of the three Vimokshas
- Apramāna, 39, 148, 368, 無重, immeasurable Apramānāni, 126n, 四無量心, the "four virtues of infinite greatness"

- are (1) mastrī 慈, (2) karuņā 悲, (3) mudstā 喜, and (4) unekshā 🏖
- Apravishtam, 110, 不入, not entered Udakacandra ivapravishtanirgatam (193--5), 如水中月不入不出(T), "like the moon on water, which is neither in it nor out of it "

Apravritti, 127, 227, mai, not changing, not taking place

Apsarā, 69, 70, 采女.

- Abhāva, 103, 269, 305, 353, 非有, non-reality Abhāvasvabhāva, 227, lacking in self-substance. 無性為性, (Sikshānanda)、無所有性、(Kumārajīva)
- Abhıyñā, 39, 66, 97, 150, 210, 六神通, sıx supernatural faculties In the Lankavatara these are generally found together with the tenfold self-control (vasita) and the ten powers (bala) as possessed by a full-fledged Bodhisattva The six Abhijnas are 1. Dwyam cakshus, divine sight, 天眼通, 2 Dwyam śrotra, divine hearing, 天耳通; 3 Paracittajñāna, the faculty of reading others' thoughts. 他心通、4 Pūrvanwāsānusmrītījāna, the faculty of remembering one's former abodes or lives, 宿命通: 5 Riddhividhijnāna, the knowledge that transforms one's modes of life at will. 如意通, 6 Asravakshayannana, the knowledge that destroys the evil outflows (impurities), 漏盡通
- Abhidhāna, 133, 語言. naming Abhidhānavinirmuktam abhidheyam na lakshyate (187-2), 若離於語言, 其義不可得 (T), 若離於言說, 亦無有所說 (S), 離於言語法, 可說不可 得(₩)

Abhidheya, 133, 義, meaning

Abhidheyavikalpa, 111, 所說分別, wrong discrimination regarding what is described; one of the twelve subjects of wrong discrimination (vikalpa)

Abhmirhāra, 79, 行, (引發).

Abhinivesa, 105, 128, 200, 執着, attachment Abhinivesasamdhı, 113, 密執, close attachment. Aparimito mahāmate sarvadharmānām yathārutārthābhinīvesasamdhih (161— 10-11), 大慧,於一切法,如言取義,執着深密其數無量

(T);無量一切諸法,如所說義, 計著相額(S);一切諸法, 相顧不相顧相者 ..(W). "Innumerable, O Mahāmatı, are sıgns of close attachment to the world by takıng letters as exactly corresponding to meaning." The Sutra enumerates a few of them as typical.

Abhinnalakshana, 191, 異相, differentiating marks

Abhilashana, 200, earnestly desiring, 專求 (T), 樂修 (W), 音樂(S). The Sanskrit text has abhilalshana instead of abhilashana, but the Chinese translations seem to have read it differently. Svapratyātmāryajūānādhigamābhilashanatayā, 專求自證整智故 (T); "By earnestly seeking for the realisation of the supreme wisdom which is in one's inmost consciousness" (80—1, 2)

Abhilāpavikalpa, 111 f, 言政分別, wrong discrimination concerning sounds and expressions, one of the twelve Vikalpas. Vicitrasvaragītamādhuryābhiniveśah (128—9, 10), 執著種和美妙音詞, 是名言說分別 (T), "getting attached to various pleasant sounds and songs—this is abhilāpavikalpa"

Abhisheka, 78, 港頂, anointed. When the Bodhisattva reaches his last stage (dharmamegha) of self-discipline, he is anointed by the Buddhas with their own hands and formally inaugurated as one of them Dharmameghābhishekābhishiktās tathāgatapratyātmabhūmim adhigamya. (123—6,7), 至法雲地而受港頂入於佛地(T).

Abhisamaya, 321, 363, 現證, inner realisation This is more than an intellectual understanding of the truth, it is spiritual Buddhism abounds in terms of this order

Abhisambodha, 273, 證, being fully awake

Abhūtaparikalpa, 190, 虛妄分別, false judgment Arthavividhavaicitryābhūtaparikalpābhinivešān mahāmate vikalpah pravartamānah pravartate (150—9, 10), 種種義,種種不實妄想, 計著妄想生(S); 於種種境. . 計能所, 取處妄執着, 起諸分別(T); 執着不實虛妄想者從見種種處妄執生(W) "As a variety of false judgments is given to objects conceived in their multiplicity, there takes place a strong clinging [to the external world]; O Mahāmati, this is the way discrimination goes on asserting itself."

Amitābha-Buddha, 325, 無量光佛, often 無量壽佛.

Ayāna, 148, 非乘, triyānam ekayānam ca ayānam ca vadāmy aham (65—11), 我所立三乘, 一乘及非乘(T)

Arishta, 354, 無盡者, the imperishable.

Arūpyacārın, 39, 無色行, formless deeds. What this exactly means is difficult to know. Does it refer to the life in the world of no-form? or is it to be regarded as synonymous with anābhogacaryā? The mention of arūpya (-drishti) in connection with tīrthyadrishṭi confirms the first interpretation.

Artha, 108 ff, 義, or 境, or 岗, meaning, or object, or wealth.

When the term is used in the first sense, it stands contrasted to words or letters, and the latter are thought inadequate to fully describe the former. When it means objects in general it is almost equivalent to the external world, which is, however, better expressed by Vishaya. Vishaya seems to have a more collective sense than Artha when both refer to the objective world.

Arthapravicayam, 367, 觀察義譚, one of the four Dhyānas mentioned on p. 97, which consists in examining the meaning of a proposition or theory.

Arthavikalpa, 111f, 財分別, one of the twelve Vikalpas (128—5). Suvarnarūpyavividharatnārthavishayābhilāpaḥ, 謂取著種種金級等資而起言說。(T); "To get attached to gold, silver, and other various treasures and to the talking about them—this is discriminating about wealth (artha).

Arhat, 363n, 368, 阿羅漢, one who has realised the highest fruit of the ascetic life, the ideal saint of Hinayana Buddhism The Mahayana ideal is the Bodhisattva and not the Arhat, for the Bodhisattva does not enter into Nirvana like the Arhat, but stays in this world as long as there is even one of his fellow-beings left unsaved. Arhattva, 148,

雅赏, the state of being an Arhat

Alakshana, 227, 無相, without marks or recognisable signs Alabdha, 173n, 不可得 Pu-k'otê (不可得) is frequently used for na lakshyate as well as for na vidyate, and in these cases it simply means "not existing" But when Tattvam is spoken of as pu-k'o-tê (alabdha), it refers to its transcending the reach of relative knowledge or discursive understanding Tattvam bhūtam nišcayo nishthā prakritih svabhāvo 'nupalabdhiḥ tat tathālakshanam (228—12, 13), 其質, (不量), 决定, 完竟, 根本, 自性, (不)可得, 是如如相(T) "Truth, reality, certitude, limit, origin, self-nature, unattainability, incomprehensibility—these are the marks of Suchness" See also under Anupalabdhya

Alatacakra 96, 旋火輪, fire-circle, one of the several comparisons adopted by the Lankāvatāra to illustrate the illusive nature of existence A real wheel or circle comes into view when a fire brand is rapidly turned round, but in reality there is no wheel, being a mere vision

.Avalokitesvara, 332, 视自在菩薩

Avastu, 119, 非物, non-reality, Sā ca na vastu nāvastu (108—9), 非即是物, 亦非非物(T)

Avikalpa, 106, 無分別, non-discriminating, Avikalpajñāna, 279, 296, 無分別智, non-discriminative wisdom, Avikalpaparacāra, 72, realm of non-discrimination, Avikalpapracārasthitāsya (9—12), 住無分別(T), 不住於分別心中(W).

Avidyā, 74, 81, 362, 無明, ignorance

Avidyamānatva, 284, 無所有, not existing Avidyamānatvena tasya samādhes tam samādhim na jānāti na samjānīte (Ashtasāhasrika, 24—8, 9), 如是諸空無所有故, 於如是空無解無想 (玄奘譯, 大般若第五百三十八卷, 縮刷, 八十二丁, 六行).

Avināśa, 159, 不壞, not to be destroyed, Avināśita, 227, 無壞, not dissolved Samyagjnānam tathatā ca mahāmate avināśatvāt svabhāvah parmishpanno veditavyah (227—15-17),

正智如如,不可懲故,固成性(T). "As Right Knowledge and Suchness are indestructible, they are to be regarded as Perfect Knowledge, of the three Svabhāvas"

Ashtottaram padaśatam, 40 f, 百八句, the 108 clauses;

Ashtottaram praśnaśatam, 38, 百八間, the 108 questions
Asambhūta, 227, 無成, not combined

Asamskrita, 119, 264n, 279, 無為 The Hinayana philosophers divide existence into two main groups, Samskrita (有為法) and Asamskrita (無為法) The Samskrita comprises such dharmas as are tied to chains of causation and capable of producing effects, while the Asamskrita exists unconditioned The three dharmas belong to this head space (ākāśa), Nirvana, and a negative state due to the absence of proper conditions.

Astināsti, 112, 116, 有無, being and non-being.

Asvabhāva, 287, 無自性, being without self-nature, asvabhāva=śūnya=nairātma=anutpanna Asvabhāvatva, 39, 無自性, the state of being without self-nature

Ākāša, 137, 264, 293, 303, 353, 嚴之, sky, space Āgata, 340, 來, come, arrived

Agantukleśa. 186, 客戶 Kleśa literally means "pain," "external dust," "affliction," or "something tormenting" and is translated as 烦惱 As there is nothing so tormenting spiritually as selfish evil desires and passions, kleśa has come to be understood chiefly in its derivative sense. In the present work the term is rendered "evil passion" arising from egotistic impulses, that is, from the conception of a permanent individual soul-substance. Here both the Tang and the Wei have 客戶, "external dust," for agantu-kleśa, while the Wei has 煩惱 besides 客戶, as if the latter were not sufficient. For further account see under Kleśa

Atman, 94, 130, 169, 289, 我, ego-soul, ātman=svabhāva= pudgala Ātmakatva, 134, 體性, self-substance Ātman means anything substantially conceived that remains eternally one, unchanged, and free When an ego-soul (pudgula) is thought as such, that constitutes the ātmadrishti (我是). When the reality of an individual object (dharma) as such is denied, this is what is meant by dharmaniatmya (社無投)

Atmavada, 138, theory of ego Tirthakatmavadopadesatulyas tathagatagarbhopadeso na bhavatı (78—18, 79—1), 投設如来設. 不同外道所設之股 (T) "The tathagatagarbha of which I speak is not like the doctrine of the ego maintained by the philosophers"

Ātmasukha. 141, 自樂, self-enjoyment Yathawa bālā ātmasukhanırvānābhilāshinah (237—10), 如恐級凡夫為於自身未是樂樂 (W) "Like those ignorant people who seek after Nirvana for their self-enjoyment" Ātmahitam. 211, 自利, benefitting oneself.

Adarsavimba (or prativimba), 188, 銳中像, mirror-image Adarsavimbadarsanavat (44—10), 譬如明就現衆色像 (T); like a mirror reflecting images

Ādānavījāāna, 258, 阿陀那战, or 執持設

Anantarya, 363, 無間(菜), the five most sinful deeds that result in the offender's being subjected to an "uninterrupted" series of tortures in hell

Abhāsvai avimāna, 261, 光音宮 or 極光淨天, a heaven, belonging to the world of Form (rāpaloka), where no sounds are heard according to a commentator, when the inhabitants wish to talk, a ray of pure light comes out of the mouth, which serves as speech

Āyatanagrāma, 362, 六皮浆落, hamlet of six houses

Arūpya, 148, 368, 無色定 There are four Samāpattis (等至 =coming together=mental collectedness) belonging to the world of No-form(arūpaloka) · 1 Ākāšānantya-āyatanam

空無邊邊 When the mind, separated from the realm of form and matter, is exclusively directed towards infinite space, it is said to be abiding in this form of concentration

Arya, 143n, 305, 整人, or 資趣, the wise as distinguished from the ignorant 無智 (avidvat), the simple-minded 愚夫 (bāla), the confused 迷者 (bhrānta), and also from the philosophers 外道 (tīrthaka).

Āryajūāna, 38, 81, 102, 119, 128, 140, 141, 143, 147, 279, 288, 340, 整智, supreme wisdom whereby one is enabled to look into the deepest recesses of consciousness in order to grasp the inmost truth hidden away from the sight of ordinary In the Lankavaunderstanding Āryajñāna=prajñā tāra, it is generally found in such combinations as svapratyātmāryajnāna or ārvapratvātmajnāna. Ārvajnānacakshus, 114, 聖智眼, the eye of supreme wisdom, also called prajnānacakshus (慧眼), Āryajnānasvabhāvavastu, 277, 305, 聖智自性事, supreme wisdom as constituting the ultimate fact of existence Kim idam .. viviktadharmopadeśābhāvaśca kriyata āryajñānasvabhāvavastudeśanayā (165-9,10),何以故,不說寂靜空無之法,而說聖智自性 事(T);何故說空法非性而說聖智自性事(S);何以故以 言諧法寂靜無相聖智法體如是無相故(W) "How is it, O Blessed one, that thou demest the truth of negation by upholding the existence of a reality which makes up the substance of supreme wisdom?" Āryavastusvabhāva (=āryajñānasvabhāvavastu), 305,聖事自 Alambana, 183, 192, 所終 or 继終 resting or depending upon Tad hetvalambanatvat. saptanām vijāānānām praviitir bhavati (126—17, 18), 以後為因及所終故七識 科生 (T), 彼因及彼继緣故七誠不生 (S), 以依彼念觀有 故科誠诚 ヒ誠亦诚(W). Observe how widely the three translations differ from one another T'ang agrees with the Sanskiit, Wei gives no sense, while Sung adds an unnecessary 不, which altogether changes the meaning of the context Alambalambya, 241, 能緣所緣, mutual dependence, subject and object, Alambavigata, 144,這難 (一切) 所緣, free from all conditions

 Alayavıñāna, 3, 38, 67, 81, 97, 99, 103, 108, 167, 171 ff, 125 ff, 178 ff, 180, 182 ff, 186 ff, 192, 195 ff, 208, 281, 299, 阿賴耶識, or 歲識,阿梨耶識(W), the all-conserving mind, Alayavıjñānodadhi, 67, 歲識大行, Alayaugha, 171, 歲融行

Avaiana, 348, 际 or 疑, that which hinders the realisation of the truth, Avaianadvaya, 132 The two hindrances are conative and intellectual, bleśāvaiana (知答院) and jñeyāvaiana (所知院) The latter is easier to destroy than the former, for the will to live or the egoistic impulses are the last thing a man can bring under complete control

Aśraya, 158, 183, 所依, that which constitutes the basis of the various Vijnanas, that is, the Alayavijnana, Aśrayaparävritti, 184, 藝依, revulsion or turning-over which takes place at the basis of consciousness, whereby we are enabled to grasp the immost truth of all existence, liberating us All the Buddhist disfrom the fetters of discrimination cipline aims at this catastrophe without which there is no svacıttadrı syabāh yarthaparıpermanent conversion jűänäd vikalpasylárayaparävrittir moksho na näáah (233 ---15, 16),了知外找自心所現分別轉依名爲解脫非滅 级也(T); 自心現知外淺, 妄想身轉, 解脫不滅(S), 如 實能知唯自心見, 外所分別心廻轉故, 是故我說名為解 脱,言解脱者非是减法 (W) As 1s seen here, We1 1s generally clumsy and not quite to the point, while Sung is too brief tending to obscurity. T'ang agrees with the Sanskrit text "When it is thoroughly comprehended that the external world is no more than the manifestation of one's own mind, there is a revulsion at the basis of discrimination, which is emancipation and not destruction." Parāvrittam hi tathatā vihārah kalpavarjitah ("Sagāthakam," verse 151). 所住離分別, 轉依即其如(T); 轉彼即其如, 離分別是行(W) "The revulsion is Suchness; the abode is free from discrimination"

Āśrasya parāvrittim anutpādam vadāmyaham (202—3), 296 The first line of this gāthā reads· Cittam driśyavinirmuktam svabhāvadvayavarjitam. 唯心無所見,亦離於 二性,如是轉所依,我說是無生(T),心離於見法及離二法 體,轉身依正相,我說名無生(W),唯有微(引心住,想所 想俱離,其身隨轉變,我說是無生(S).

Āśaya, 355, 意樂, desire

Asrava, 276n, 284, 漏, impure outflows of the mind, which are also known as Kleśa (煩惱). The three impurities are kāma (欲, desire to possess), bhava (有, will to live), and avidyā (無明, ignorance). When drishṭi (見, wrong view) is added, we have the four impurities. See also under Anāsrava

Icchantika, 219n, 一闡提迦, 無佛性, those who are destitute of the Buddha-nature

Itaretara, 288, 後後冬, reciprocity, one of the seven kinds of Emptiness

Indra, 354, 因陀羅.

Uccheda, 73, 123n, 斷, cutting off, destruction; Ucchedaśāśvata, 128, 斷常. See also Śāsvata.

Ucchedadarsana, or Ucchedavada, 120, 215, 断見, negativism or minism opposed to eternalism; the philosophical school which teaches that the world is destined to come to a total extinction when the law of causation works no more.

Uttrāsīta, 284, 歉, alarmed Bodhısattvā mahāsattvā ımam nīdešam śrutvā nottrasīshyantī na samtrasīshyantī na samtrāsam āpatsyantē." (Ashtasāhasrīkā, p 17, etc.) This is one of the sentences most frequently met with in the Prajāāpāramītā Sūtīa, 菩薩摩訶薩朗是設無梵怖退沒 (Kumārajīva) In the Lankāvatāra this is referred to on p 64—15-17 .. acintyavishayadešyamāne nottrasatī na samtrasatī na samtrāsam āpadyate veditavyamayam tathāgatayūnābhīsamayagotraka iti, 若有聞說 不思議壞 不整不怖不畏,當知此是如來性 (T) "He who is not frightened, alarmed, betrays no sense of fear even when this realm beyond comprehension is shown to him—he is to be known as belonging to the family of the Tathāgatayāna"

Utpāda, 127, 183, 307, 生, 起, birth, Utpādanirodha, 116, 生成, birth and extinction, Utpādapadam anutpādapadam, etc, 41, 生句非生句, "what is termed birth is not birth" Utpādavikalpa, 111 f, 生分別, discrimination regarding birth, one of the twelve wrong judgments arising from imagination (parikalpitasvabhāva, 妄計自性)

Udakacandia, 96, 110, 冰月 or 冰中月, moon in water This comparison is used to illustrate the illusive nature of existence which is beyond all predicates The moon in water is not the real one as it is a reflection, but its appearance there is not to be denied. So we have also the following Tad yathā mahāmate jalāntargatā vrikshacchāyā khyāyate sā ca na cehāyā hācchāyā vrikshasamsthānāsamsthānataḥ (93—13 f), 大慧, 譬如水中, 有树影現, 彼非影非非影, 非樹形非非樹形(T) More similes such as a mirror-image, an echo, a mirage are given in the same vein of thought

Udadhitarangālayavijñānagocaiam tathāgatānugītam dharmakāyam prabhāśasva, 188, 說如來所數海浪藏識景法 身(S) "Pray tell us concerning the nature of the Ālayavijñāna compared to the ocean and its waves [and also] concerning the Dharmakāya praised by the Tathagatas"

Upakhshta, 186, (客座)所染, contaminated (by external dirt).

Upalakshana, 200, seeing clearly, 善知(T), 觀(S), 密解 (W) Bāhyabhāvābhāvopalakshanatayā, 善知外法無性故 (T), 觀外性非性(S), 善解外(法)有無故(W); "by well understanding the unreal nature of the external objects"

(80-1).

Upāya, 34, 88, 91, 97, 99, 132, 138, 314, 365, 方便 means, expediency, method, contrivance; Upāyakauśalya, 19, 346, 357, 善巧方便, skilful means, Upāyajñāna, 335, 方便智. The idea of "skilful means" is an important one in Mahayana Buddhism and inseparable from that of a great compassionate heart moving the whole being of Buddhahood It is not enough for the Bodhisattva to have Aryajñana or Prajña fully awakened, for he must also be supplied with Upāyajñāna whereby he is enabled to put the whole salvation machinery in practice according to the needs of beings

Ubhaya-anubhaya, 112, or Ubhaya-nobhaya, 116, 俱不俱, bothness and not-bothness

Riddhipāda, 39, 如意足 or 神足, miraculous psychic powers attamed by means of Samadhi. There are four ways of realising the Samadhi through (1) the will-power (chanda, 歌), (2) thought-power (citta, 心), (3) strenuous efforts (virya, 精進), and (4) deep thinking (mīmāmsā, 觀). Rishi, 354, (ii, hermit-philosopher

Ekacıttam, 269, -C, one mind.

Ekatva-anyatva, 112, 一異, oneness and otherness.

Ekam apı aksharam nodāhritam na pravyāhrītam, 213, 不說 一字, "not a word has been said nor declared" The Zen masters' favourite utterance, 四十九年一字不說, comes from this statement.

Ekayāna, 52, 148, 328, 351, 358 ff, 一乘, One Vehicle or

Vehicle of Oneness. This is identified with Mahāyāna Ekayānāvabodha, 361, realisation of the One Vehicle Yathābhūtāvasthānād apravritter vikalpasya. (133—16), 如實處不生妄想. 是名一乘登(S), 雜(能取所取)分別如實而住(T) "[The realisation means] the extinction of wrong discrimination by abiding in Suchness"

EkJgra, 85, 121, 一綠, oneness

Kara, 292, 353, 手, the hand

Karunā, 101, 339, 悲, love, a compassionate heart

Kartri, 130, 139, 作者, creator

Karma, 182, 186, 業, act Nakarmaprabhava, 145n, 325, 不 從業生, not karma-created Sarve hi nirmitabuddhā na karmaprabhavāh (242—12), 一切化佛不從業生 (T), Karmabīja, 197, 業種子, karma-seed, Karmāvaraņa, 212, 業隊, hindrance to the attainment of Bodhi, which rises from the past kaima, Karmavijāna, 187, 業識

Kalāpah pratyayānām (ca pravartate nivartate, 202—9), 297, 因緣共集會是故有生成(T) "Because of a concatenation of causal chains there is birth, there is disappearance"

Kāmadhātu, 79, 欲界, world of Desire, one of the triple world (triloka, 三界), the other two being the world of Form (色界) and the world of No-form (無色界)

Kāma-bhava-drishti-avidyā, 276n, 欲·有·見·無明, which make up the contents of Āsiava (滿, evil outflow)

Kāya, 308, 身, system, body, Kāyasamatā, 318, 352, 身平等, [All the Tathāgatas are] the same as regards the body, [because aham ca tathāgatā. dharmakāyena ca rūpalakshanānuvyañjanakāyena ca samā nīrviśishtāh (142—6f)], 我與諸佛, 法身, 色相, 及頤形好等, 無差別(T)

Kārana, 122, 146, 188, 302, 作者, creator, deity Kāshtha, 360, a piece of wood Yathā hi kāshtham uda-dhau (135—8), 啓如海中木(T)

Kuśalānāsrava, 198, 253, 善無漏法, good virtues free from evil flowings, enjoyed by the wise when they are deeply drunk in the bliss of the Samādhi and abiding in the bliss of existence as it is.

Kuśalamūla, 72, 93 f, 善根, stock of merit.

Kritaka-akritaka, 116, 作非作, made and not-made, or done and not-done.

Kripā, 339, 悲, pity, compassion; Kripātma, 369, pitying thought. Māmsam sarvam abhakshyam kripātmano bodhisattvasya (245—8), 菩薩當生悲愍不應敬一切肉 (T'ang). "The Bodhisattva with a pitying heart ought not to eat any meat whatever."

Kriyā, 193, 行, action; Kriyābhivyakti, 307, 所作明了 (轉變), manifested work

Klishtamanas, 178, 染污意, Manas contaminated.

Kleśa, 186, 224, 256, 348, 煩惱; Kleśakshaya, 130, 煩惱斷, the extinction of the evil desires. Kleśadvaya, 132, 二類惱, two kinds of evil passions, primary and secondary, Kleśaneya, 35, 36, 37, that is kleśavarana and jneyavarana, hindrances caused by the evil passions and by intellection. 類惱障及所知障,Kleśakhyāvivarjita, 360, liberated from the evil passions so called, Kleśavarana, 177, 煩惱障, hindrance of the Klesa Klesa is generally divided into two groups, primary and secondary. The primary comprise such evil impulses that lie at the foundation of every tormenting thought and desire six in number. 1. 1āga 貪 (desire to have), 2. pratigha 臓 (anger), 3 mūḍhaya 巖 (folly or ignorance), 4. māna 慢 (self-concert), 5 drishti 見(talse views), and 6. vicikitsa 疑 (doubt). Sometimes, 1 ātmadrishti (我見, the belief in the existence of an ego-substance), 2 ātmamoha (我痴, ignorance about the ego). 3. ātmamāna(我慢, concert about the ego), and 4 ātmasukha (我愛, self-love)—these four are regarded as the fundamental evil passions originating from the view that there is really an eternal substance known as ego-soul The secondary Kleśa are sometimes twenty, sometimes twenty-four, sometimes only nineteen, according to the different schools. Vasubandhu's Trimśikā gives twenty-four 1 impatience ($\frac{1}{2}$, krodha), 2 hatred (恨, upanāha), 3. hypocrisy (数, mraksha), 4 stinging talk (悩. pradāśa), 5 envy (媄, īrshyā), 6 stingmess (樫, mātsarya), 7 deceit (祇, māyā), 8. duplicity (餡, śāthya), 9 arrogance (協, mada), 10 hurting others (害, vihimsa). shamelessness (無惭, ahrī), 12 recklessness (無愧, atrapā), 13, torpidity (怪性, styānam), 14 restlessness (掉恐, uddhava), 15 unbehef (不信, aśraddha), 16 m-(僻念 kauśīdya), 17. thoughtlessness (放逸. pramāda), 18 senselessness (失金, mushitasmrititā), 19 uncollected state (or unsteadiness) of mind (散亂, vikshepa), 20 maccuracy of knowledge (不正見, asamprajanya), 21 evil doing (無作, kaukritya), 22 drowsiness (睡眠, middha), 23 investigation (季, vitarka), 24 reflection (伺, vicāra).

Kshanikam, 194, 刹那, momentariness

Kshanti, 126, 忍, generally translated "patience," or "resignation," or "humility," when it is one of the six or ten But "acceptance," or "recognition," or "submission" will be better when it occurs in connection with the dharma that is unborn In the Abhidhai makośa, Chapter VII, Kshāntı is used in a way contrasted to Júana According to it. Kshānti is not knowledge of certainty which Jñāna is, for in Kshānti doubt has not yet been entirely uprooted. Its characteristic is to enquire, to investigate, to examine so that an intellectual understanding may turn into intuitive certainty whereby errors are totally destroyed, never to assert themselves again In this case, jñāna=parijñā=prajñā=adhigama=abhisamaya= svasıddhānta=pratyātmāryajñāna, while Kshānti is an mtelligent recognition of a theory or doctrine ten kinds of Kshanti, see p 126 f

Kshitigarbha, 332, 地震算

Kha, 353, 虚空, sky.

Khacitavigraha, 84, 壁上彩畫, a painted figure on the wall (bhitts).

Khañjagardabha, 340, a lame donkey. ...iva cittaprajñājñānalakshanam hitvā (50—1), 捨股驗智慧心相 (T'ang), ''throwing away such thought, wisdom, knowledge as resembles the character of a lame donkey.''

Khyātīvījūāna, 189 ff, 現職, which almost corresponds to perception

Gagana, 353, 嚴空, sky.

Gata, 340, 去, gone, departed; Gataghrina, 371, 無慈愍 unsympathetic.

Garbha, 177, 藏, or 胎, womb

Garbhakośa dhātu, 177, 胎數界 The dualism of the Garbhakośa and the Vajra is the attempt by Shingon philosophers to describe the constitution and development of the spiritual world The Garbhakośa conceives the world as a stage on which Vairocanabuddha residing in the inmost heart of every being develops his inherent possibilities, whereas the Vajra depicts the Buddha in his own manifestations The pictures illustrating the scheme and process of these developments are called Mandala (臺陀羅).

Guna, 74, 130, 求那, 德, virtues or attributes.

Gocara, 104, 340, 接界, 所行, experience, mental attitude Gocara, literally meaning "range for cattle," or "pasturage," is a field for action and an object of sense. In the Lankavatāra it is frequently more than that, for it points to a general mental attitude one assumes towards the external world, or better a spiritual atmosphere in which one's being is enveloped Artha which is also translated as 選 is an object of sense, while Vishaya also meaning 選 has a more general connotation since it designates a world of particulars as objects of mental activity. (Tārkikāṇām avishayam śrāvakānām na caiva hi,) yam deśayanti vai nāthāh pratyātmagatigocaram (49—4,5), 174 世間依怙 者, 避智所行處, 外道非投界, 聲聞亦復然(T) "The world-leaders teach the state of consciousness realised by their inner perception, which is beyond the realm of the philosophers and the Śrāvakas"

Grāhaka, 195, 淮政, seizing, one who seizes or perceives, Grāhana, 127, 294, 淮政, seizing, perceiving, Grāhya, 195, 所以, seized, that which is perceived, Grāhyagrāhaka, 97, 116, 201, 所政能权, that which is perceived or apprehended, and that which perceives or apprehends

Ghoshānugakshānti, 126n, 音控忍, Kshānti in sounds This is understood to mean the ready, willing response which is made characteristically by the devout follower to the verbal instruction of his teacher

Cakshurvijñāna, 178, 188, 眼識, the sense of vision

Catushkotika, 116, 122, 132, 134, 135, 165, 四句 (有句, 無句, 非有非無句, 亦有亦無句), the four propositions

Citta, defined, 176, as the whole system of vijnanas, 180 ff, originally pure, 174, it, mind Citta is generally translated as "thought." but in the Lankavatara as in other Mahayana sutras may better be rendered "mind" When it is defined as "accumulation" or as a "store-house" where karma-seeds are deposited, it is not mere thought, it has an ontological signification Cittam vikalpo vijňaptır mano vijñānam eva ca. ālayam tribhavaśceshtā ete cittasya paryapāh("Sag"459). 252 心意及與識, 分別與 表示, 本識作三有, 皆心之異名(T), 心分別及識, 意及於 意識,阿梨耶三有,思惟心異名(W); Tad hetukam tad alambya manogatisamāśrayam, hetum dadāti cittasya vijnānam ca samāśritam (127—10, 11), 250 意識為心因, 心爲意境界,因及所緣故、諧識依止生 (T); 彼因彼攀緣。 意趣等成身,(--1), 為融之所依(S), 依彼因及念, 意趣諸 境界, 誠與心作因,爲誠之所依 (W), 依彼因及觀,共意 取线界,依於識種子,能作於心因(W in "Sagāthakam")

Cintam svylikiran nivam 216. A 含品证 (T): A 含品证 (T): A 含品证 (W): mind eternally quiescent or learned or the divided. The whole verse ("Saglinain" 11%, runs time: Cintamavylikiran injurin mano hythinyasainanu vartaminain hi wijinain insulinasher it un A 含品证 法国工程行,混合证证 表现是是是 表现不要是 (T): A 含品证法 医二氢双铂 取录法是是 按是各个要(W). "The Winiam eternally neural; Manus moves in two ways: the Vijining taking in what is presented is either good or not-good."

Citam vishayasaribandham (jilinah terle parautate 120—7). 179. ASSME ESSME (T). "The mind is bound up by an external world speculation puts Jilina in operation." Jilina in this case is the reasoning intuly and stands contrasted to Prajill which is the intuline taculty means for grasping the transcendental artic.

Cincin hi maidhliminyonin 243. Inide (I). "The mind is the origin of the units world."

Chain hi serven (servene servalelesh vertee vielezi grivere seldin einemenen hy elektrone 192—1.6. 223. 心是一可意 一可意安心,以及不會無 心性無菌污 (W): 心思一可意 一可意安心,心性實施污,無害以遭 遭(T). "All is mind mind pervades in all places, in all the bodies. The ignorant perceive multiplicity, den where is notified predicable in Mind-only."

Cinan undirpinayan na krasi praishifilan 55. 医無所 医面全某心 (Amilia)ya . "[1 Boddisanya] shorid have his thoughts awakened without abiding in anything whatever "

Cittakalāpa, 192, 心豪 (T,S), mentation-system Cittakalāpah pravartate 'nyonyahetukah (127—3,4), 生種種心, 猶如東竹法共爲因(W), 心聚生起展轉爲因(T) "The whole mental system is evolved mutually conditioning [like a bundle of bamboo-sticks]"

Cittanirābhāsa, 346, 心無相, the mind that has no form

Cittabāhyādarsana (42—10,11), 243, 離心無得 (T), 心外 無所見 (S), 自心足外境界故 (W) W was evidently a different text

Cittamanādimatisameitam, 176n The complete line reads
Avidyāhetukam cittam anādimatisameitam (368—15) 無
始所私集,無明為心因 (T) "Ignorance accumulated over and over again owing to imperfect intellection since the infinite past is the origin of the mind"

Cittamanomanovijñāna, or cittam manaš ca vijñānam, 73, 98, 119, 132, 150, 168, 172, 211, 221, 226, 246. 心, 意, 意識

Cittamātra, 唯心, Mind-only, or Mind-itself. Cittamātram lokam, 243, 世間唯是心, the world is Mind-only Bahyabhāvānabhyupagamāt tribhavacittamātropadeśād vicitralakshananupadesat (208—13, 14), (何以故), 不取外法故, 三界唯心故, 不說諸相故 (T), (所以者何) 謂外法不决定 故, 唯說三有微心, 不說種種相 (S), (何以故) 我不說外 "Why? Because I do not admit the existence of an external world, but I teach that the triple world is Mind-only and do not teach about signs of multiplicity " Cıttamātram yadā lokam prapasyantı jinātmajāh, tadā naırmānikam kāyam kriyāsamskāravarjitam 佛子能觀見,世間唯是心,示現種種身,所作無障礙 (T);心量世間,佛子觀察種類之身,離所作行. (S). (W) 佛子見世間,惟心無諸法、種類非身作 the world is seen by those born of the Buddha as no more than mind, they assume a variety of bodies which are free from [constrained] activities and conditionalities."

Cittamātradriśya, 123, etc., 唯心所現, or simply, cittamātra, 唯心, is one of the principal phrases recurring in the Lankāvatāra Ye grāhyagrāhakābhmivishtāh svacittadri-śyamātram nāvabudhyante ...(104—8,9). 若不了諸法唯心所現, 計有能取及以所取...(T). "Those who are attached to the notion of duality (object and subject) fail to understand that there is only what is seen of the Mind." Cittamātravinirmuktam nopalabhyate, 180. 離心不可得.

"Apart from mind nothing is attainable, that is, comprehensible"; in other words, Driśyacittaparijñānād vikalpo na pravartate (343—17), 了授唯是心, 分别则不起 (T). "When what is seen [or an external world] is penetratingly understood as Mind [-itself], discrimination never takes place." "Unattainability" or "incomprehensibility" means that the thing is altogether beyond the reach of analytical, relative knowledge See also under Anupalabdhya.

Cittavikalpalakshana, 179, 心分別相. Svacittavaicitryavikalpakalpitatvät. .vaicitryabhāvalakshaņābhinivesāt... (152—2,3) 分別自心種種諸法, 著種種相..... (T). "Since one's own mind is discriminated under various forms of discrimination and since one gets attached to a variety of signs of existence"...

Cittasvabhāva, 68, 心自性, the self-nature of mind, mind as it is, mind in itself

Cittena cīyate karma, 176n, 249, 採集業為心(T, S)(觀察法為智, T; 不採集為智, S); 識能集諧業....(智能了分別W) The whole line runs·....jñānena ca vidhīyate (158—3). "Karma is accumulated by mind, and arranged in order by Jñāna, [analytical knowledge in contradistinction to Prajñā, which is transcendental, intuitive knowledge]." Sung evidently had a different text as it reads 不採集 instead of 觀察 or 分別; 不採集 is perhaps for vicīyate as in the "Sagāthakam," verse 285, where this line is repeated

- Cittodadhi, 188, 心海, mind-ocean. Vishayapavanacittodadhitarangā acyucchinna . (44—11),心海亦爾, 瓊界風吹, 起諸誠良, 相級不絕(T), "the waves of the mind-ocean are uninterruptedly [stirred by] the wind of objectivity" Citra, manifold, Vaicitrya, citratā, manifoldness, 133, 161, 242. 利利
- Cintāmani, 98, 如意寶珠, 摩尼寶珠, wish-gem Viśvarūpacintāmanisadrisā (72—15), 如摩尼隨心現色 (T), "it is like mani-gem which takes all colours as wished."
- Ciyate, 190, 版集, accumulated, from 🗸 ca meaning "to accumulate"
- Cyuti, 211 f, 348, 死, death There are two kinds of death, one of the physical body and the other of the superphysical, which is a sort of sūkshmaśarīra 後期身, assumed by a Bodhisattva See also Acintyaparmāmacyuti
- Chindati, 250, 了 or 分别, to discriminate or distinguish, from / chid, "to split," "to separate" This word appears in the following connection Cittena dhāryate kāyo mano mayati vai sadā, vijūānam cittavishayam vijūānam saha chindati (323—4,5) 心性持於身, 意常覺諸法, 識自心境界, 共於識分別(W); 心能持於身, 意恒審思處, 意識諸職人, 了自心境界(T) "Mind (citta) sustains the body, Manas always reflects, the [Mano-]vijūāna together with the [sense-]vijūānas discriminates a world of particulars created by Citta"
- Janmahetu, 267, 生因, birth-cause. Animittadaráanam eva áreyo, na nimittadaráanam, nimittam punar janmahetutvād aáreyah (200—3,3) 無相見勝, 非相見, 相者受生因, 故不勝(S); 無相見勝, 非是相見, 相是生動(T), 見寂靜 者名爲勝相, 非見諧相名爲勝相, 以不能斷生因相故(W), 生因 means that when the reality of a phenomenal world is asserted and adhered to as such, one is led to accept the doctrine of birth, i.e. of causation even beyond the realm of relativity.

- Jalacandra, 110, 冰中月 water-moon. Sa (tathāgatabhū-mim) pratilabhya sattvaparipācanatayā vieitrair nirmāņa-kiranair virājate jalacandravat (227—3,4). 得如來地已, 種種變化, 圓照示現, 成熟來生, 如水中月(S); 入如來地已, 爲数化來生, 現種種光明, 隨莊嚴身, 如水中月(W); 成如來地已, 爲來生故, 如水中月, 普現其身(T). "Attaining Tathagatahood, he manifests himself, in order to bring beings into maturity, in various transformations shinning like the moon in water"
- Jalpo hi traidhātukaduhkhayanih, 269, 言說三界(苦)因(T); 言語三(界)苦本(S) To complete the line:tattvani hi duhkhasya vināśahetuh (186—9) 真實滅苦因(T). "The truth is the destructive cause of pain"
- Jāti, 186, is generally rendered as 生, but here means the genuine state of a thing as it is in itself, 真.
- Jāmbūnada, 93. 縣部終陀金, gold from the Jambū river.
- Jina, 354, 勝者, victor, an epithet of the Buddha, Jinadhātu, 261, 佛含利, Buddha's relics, hard substance left after the cremation of the body, same as śarīra which see; Jinaputra, 38n, 勝者子, 佛子, sons of the Victorious One, meaning Bodhisattvas.
- Jīva, 130, 壽, life, or vitality regarded as a principle.
- Jñāna, 84, 139, 160, 272, 哲 Jñāna is a very flexible term, as it means sometimes ordinary worldly knowledge, knowledge of relativity, which does not penetrate into the truth of existence, and also sometimes transcendental knowledge in which case being synonymous with Prajñā or Ārya-jñāna. See the Lankāvatāra, pp. 157-8, where the distinction between Jñāna as transcendental knowledge and Vijñāna as relative knowledge is fully distinguished. Asangalakshaṇam jñānam vishayavaictryasangalakshaṇam ca vijñānam (157—14, 15), 272, 著境界相是識,不著境界是智 (T); 智者無障礙相, 識者識後諸境界相 (W); 無礙

相是智, 埃界種種礙相是證 (S). "Jñāna is non-attachment, Vijñāna is attached to an external world of particulars" Jñānakāya, 338, 智身, knowledge-body, =Dharmakāya, =Tathāgatakāya

Jñānam lokottaram, 139, 出世間智, super-worldly know-ledge; Jñānam lokottaratam, 139, 出世間上上智, supreme supra-worldly knowledge, Jñānam laukkam, 139, 世間智, worldly knowledge, Jñānam śubham , śānte kshāntīvi-śeshe vai jñānam tāthāgatam śubham, samjāyate viseshārtham samudācāravarjītam (158—9, 10), 277. 寂诚殊勝忍, 如來清淨智, 生於善勝義, 遠離諸所行 (S, W, T). "The immaculate Tathāgata-knowledge is obtained in the Kshāntī [acknowledgement or assertion], tranquil and most excellent, and it gives birth to the most excellent meaning which transcends all doings"; Jñānam anāsrava, 225, 258, 無滿智, pure knowledge, which is free from the taint of egotism

Jñeyāvarana, 117, 212, 361, 所知障, hindrance of knowledge, generally coupled with Kleśāvarana, hindrance of passions, 煩惱瞳.

Tattvam, 106, 109, 114, 126, 131, 146, 150, 173, 195, 278, 東實, truth Tathā hi aksharasamsaktās tattvam na vetti māmakam (224—1). 計畫文字者, 不見吾莫實(T). "Inkewise, my truth is not known to those who are tied to letters" Tattvam aksharavarjitam (48—12), 莫實離文字 (T) "The truth is detached from letters" Tattvam pratyātmagatikam (kalpyakalpena varjitam, 48—14), 174, 真實自證處, 能所分別雜 (T). Tattvam duhkhasya vināšahetuh, 133, 如實智減苦, truth is the destroyer of sorrow See also under Jalpa

Tattvajñāna, 335, 真實智, knowledge of absolute truth which is contrasted to Upāyajñāna, 方便智, knowledge of means, or of particulars

Tathatā, 26, 38, 99, 107, 114, 118, 120, 127, 146, 155 f, 161,

173n, 212, 275, 278, 334, 341, 342 f, 846, 855, 367, 如如 (五法者所謂相·名·分別·如如·正智·T), 與如 (名相·分別·二自性相, 正智·與如, 是國成性, T), 與理, Tathatājīāna, 106, 310, 與如智慧, buddha, 38, 與如智慧佛; Tathatālambanam, 367, 緣與如禪 This is the third of the four Dhyānas described in the Lankāvatāra, p 97 The object of the discipline is to realise the suchness of truth by keeping thoughts above the dualism of being and nonbeing and also above the twofold notion of egolessness. It is the Dhyāna "depending upon suchness" Tathatāvastu, 有事悉如如(S),如其如本有(W),有其如妙物(T). See under Vastu Tathatāvasthāna, 306n, 住真如(W), 住如如(T), abode of suchness.

Tathā, 340, 如, thus, Tathātva, or tathatva, 278, 如如, thusness, or suchness.

Tathāgata, 339 ff, 如來 This term may be divided into either of the following formulas tathā+gata, or tathā+āgata In the former case, it is 如去, and in the latter 如來

Tathāgatapūrvapranihitatva, 150, 如來本願(T), Tathagata's original vow 'āt sarvasukhasamāpattiparipūryā sattvānām na kalpayanti na vikalpayanti (231—13) 如來本願以三 珠樂安衆生故無有惱亂(S); 無有愛憎, 無有分別(T).

Tathāgatasvapratyātmāryajñānādhigamam nirvānam (200—7,8), 295, 獲如來內證聖智, 我說此是寂滅涅槃 (T). See also under Nirvāna.

Tathāgatakāya, 97 f, 141, 317, 如來身, 佛身, Buddha-body. Tathāgatagarbha, 3, 73, 85, 108, 105, 121, 137 ff, 176, 177, 179 f, 182, 185, 193, 194, 198, 201, 如來藏, the womb where the Tathagata is conceived and nourished and matured, = the Ālayavijñāna fully purified of its habit-energy 習氣 (vāsanā) and evil tendencies (daushthulya); Tathāgatagarbho mahāmate kuśalākuśalahetukah (sarvajanmagatikartā, 220—9,10), 180n, 大慧, 如來藏是善不善因, 能溫奧也一切誕生(T); 能與(奧?) 六道作生死因緣(W).

"The Tathāgatagarbha which is the cause of goods as well as evils creates the various paths of existence", Tathāgatagarbhahridayam, esha mahāmate parinishpannasvabhāvaḥ (68—1), 159 大悲, 此是回成自性, 如來驗心 (T)

TathIgatācintyagativishayagocara, 359, 如來不可思議智慧(所行) 垃垛(T), 如來不可思議垃界修行(W), 諸如來不思議稅垃圾場(S) Vishaya is gocara, and gocara vishaya, both being properly rendered as 垃圾 In the present work I have generally "realm" or "subjective attitude," for gocara, and for vishaya "objectivity" or "the objective world"

Tathāgatayāna, 148, 360, 如來來, the Tathagata-vehicle

Tathāgatasvapi atyātmāryajñānādhīgama, 277, 如來所發自

證验智 See Pratyātmāryajñāna

Tanu, 353, 身, body.

Taranga, 193, 波浪, waves

Tarka, 38, 102, 132, 升度, speculation, or imagination

Tāthāgatam (dhyāna), 367, 如來禪, one of the four Dhyānas (p 97) This is the highest kind of Dhyāna practised by the Mahayana believers of Buddhism The yogin has realised the inner truth deeply hidden in the consciousness, yet he does not remain intoxicated with the bliss thereby attained, he goes out into the world performing wonderful deeds of salvation for the sake of his fellow-beings

Timira, 161, 啓, cataract of the eye Bālā grihnanti jāyanatam timiram taimirā yathā (95—13) 如醫者所見. 愚夫生 執着(T) "The ignorant grasp the created as a person with bedimmed eyes grasps his own darkness"

Tīrthakara, 34, etc, 外道, the philosophers not belonging to Buddhism Tīrthakara is generally found in combination with Śrāvakas (heaiers) and Pratyekabuddhas (solitary Buddhas), to all of whom the ideals of Bodhisattvahood are not known

Tīrthya, same as tīrthakara, 102

Trishnā, 168, 362, 変, ht, thirst, will-to-live Together with avidyā (ignorance, 無明) and karma (deeds, 葉), fṛishṇā is the inner agent of the world-creation. Tṛishṇā hi mātā ity uhtā avidyā ea pitā tathā (140—5), 364, 實受名當母, 無明則是父(T). "The will-to-live is mother and ignorance is father." Tṛishṇāyā hy uditāḥ skandhāḥ(149—11), 350, 從爱生諧遠(T). "The Aggregates are produced by the will-to-live."

Tair ācitāni karmāṇi (358—14), 176n, 彼所積填業(T). "All kinds of karma are accumulated by them (i.e. the Alaya and Manas)."

Trikāya, 142 ff, 308 ff, 355, 三身, the triple body of the Buddha.

Tribhavasvacittamētram, 243. 273, 三界唯心(T): 三界唯是自心(W); 三有徵(唯引心(S).

Triyāna, 148, 328. 358 記. 三乘; the triple vehicle is the Śrāvaka, the Pratyelabuddha. and the Bodhisattva.

Trisamtati, 73, 三相复, the triple continuation. What these three are I have not so far been able to find out. The Pali Dictionary (by Rhys Davids and Stede) gives citic-santati (心相复), dhamma" (法), rūpa"(色), and sankhāra" (行).

Traidhātuka, 245,三界; the triple world is Kāma° (欲界).
Rūpa° (色界), and Arūpa° (無色界).

Darpana, 84, 愛, mirror.

Daśanishthāpāda, 23In, 十年之前(S, W), or 十二章(T); sometimes simply, (daśa-)nishṭhāpāda, 十二章. The reference is to the Ten Inexhaustible Vows (daśanishṭha-praṇidhāna) to be made by the Bodhisattva at the stage of Joy (pramuditā), which is the first of the ten stages (daśa-bhūmi) of Bodhisattvahood. The Vows are called "inexhaustible" because their objectives are of such nature. The ten objects towards which the Bodhisattva's vows are directed are: 1. Sattvadhātu (社人子, world of beings); 2. Lokadhātu (社人子, this world); 3. Ākāśadhātu (虚空界, space), 4 Dharmadhātu (法界, the world where the Dharma prevails), 5 Nirvāṇadhātu (涅槃界, Nirvanaworld), 6 Buddhotpādadhātu (佛出現界, the world where the Buddha is born); 7 Tathāgatajāānadhātu (如來智界, the world of Tathagata-knowledge), 8. Cittālambanadhātu (心所終界, the world as the object of thought), 9 Buddhavishayayñānadhātu (佛智所入境界界, the world as the object of Buddha-knowledge); and 10 Lokavartanidharmavartani-yñānavartani-dhātu (世間轉法轉智轉界 the world where this worldly life, the Dharma, and the Buddha-knowledge are evolved) All these ten worlds will never come to an end, and as long as they continue to exist, the Bodhisattva will ever put forward his great yows with energy and determination See Rahder, Dasabhūmika, p 17, and Śikshānanda's Avatamsaka, Vol. XXXIV.

Dāna, 366 f, 布施, one of the six virtues of perfection (六波羅蜜).

Dīpapradīpa, 85, 登火, lamplight

Dūramgamā, 223, 遠行地, the far-going, the seventh stage Driáya, 251, 所現, what is presented to one's view.

Drishta, 165, 所見, seen, drishti, 307, 見, generally 妄見 a wrong view held by the Tirthakara.

Drishtānta, 40, 常, illustration, example, a logical term. The hill is fiery (宗, pratijñā, proposition). Because it has smoke (因, hetu, reason) All that has smoke is fiery like a kitchen, and whatever is not fiery has no smoke like a lake (常, drishtānta, example).

Drishtivikalpa, 111 f, 見分利, views based on the dualistic discrimination of existence such as held by the philosophers, one of the twelve Parikalpita notions (127 f)

Devayāna, 360, 天樂, Devayānam brahmayānam śrāvakiyam tatharva ca, tāthāgatam ca pratyekam yānān etān vadāmy aham (134, 135) 天乘及梵乘, 聲聞綠覺乘, 諾佛如來乘, 諸樂吾所說 (T).

Desanā (-nayalakshana), 109, 349, 350, 言說法相, word-teaching contrasted with self-realisation (siddhānta, 宗越, or pratyātmadharma, 自證法), Siddhāntas ca nayas cāpi pratyātmasāsanam ca vai, ye pasyanti vibhāgajñā na te tarkavasam gatāh (149—2, 3) 宗越與言說 自證及教法, 若能善知見, 不隨他妄解(T) "Those who well understand the distinction between realisation and teaching, between inner knowledge and instruction, are kept away from the control of mere speculation"

Deśanāpātha, 77, 80, 149, 語言文字 Avalokya deśanāpāthābhiratānām sattvānām eittavibhramo bhavishyatīti(14—2). 觀察一切衆生心皆樂於名字說法, 心迷生疑(W) Deśanāpāthakathām, 76, 名字章句(W), teaching, recitation, and story This stands here (12—16, 17) against Tathāgatapratyātmagatigocarakathām (設於內身修行境界, W) as elsewhere, showing that the whole purport of the Lankāvatāra is to emphasise the inner attainment of the truth realised by all the Tathagatas of the past, present, and future.

Deśanārutapāthābhıveśatam, na, 110, 莫勒着文字, do not cling to words! Tathāgatagarbha ālayavijñānavishayas . bodhisattvānām mahāsattvānām arthapratisaranānām no tu yathārutadeśanāpāthābhinivishtānām (223—6-9) 如來 藏藏證(是佛) 境界, 菩薩摩訶薩, 隨順義者所行之處, 非是一切執着文字(外道二乘)之所行處(T) "The realm of the Tathāgatagarbha which is the Ālayavijñāna belongs to those Bodhisattva-mahāsattvas who follow the course of truth, and not to those philosophers who cling to the letter, learning, and mere discourse"

Deha, 353, 身, the body

Dehabhogapratishthāna, 97, 172, 175, 180, 242, 244, 247, 322 f, 363, 身·賽·斯住 This combination occurs quite frequently in the Lankāvatāra and refers to the material side of life Deha is the physical body, bhoga is property belonging to the body and enjoyed by it, and pratishthāna is the material environment in which the body is found moving They are however manifestations of the Ālaya. Dehabhogapratishthānam ālayam khyāyate nṛinām (54—10). 自受用安立. 識臟現衆生 (S), 內識衆生見, 身資生住處 (W), 身資所住影 (?) 衆生藏識現 (T).

Daushthulya, 178, 200, 過惡, evil tendency, or error Anādikālaprapañcadaushthulyavāsītam vikalpavijnānam (94—12). 無始啟論惡智所意 (T); 無始虛偽智氣所違妄 想計著 (S); 因無始來煩惱心葉智敵論分別 (W). "The discriminating consciousness that is found infested since beginningless time by the evil tendency or habit-energy inherent in the delusion" Na mahāmate māyā bhrāntikāranam adaushthulyadoshāvahatvāt (109—4,5) 非諸幻事為妄惑因,以幻不生諸過惡故 (T), 大蒜非迷惑法生煩惱過(W); 大蒜非幻惑因,不起過故(S) "Mahāmati, māyā is not the cause of confusion, for it does not produce errors, [as errors come from wrong discrimination]"

Dravya, 74, 物, 陀羅驛 (S), substance Bhūtagunānudravyasamsthānasamnīvešavišesham drishtvā (51—13). 兄大種·求那·盛等蓄物, 形量·分位·各差別(T). "Seeing that the elements, qualities, atoms, and substances are all different as regards their form and position"

Dvaya, 195, 二, duality.

Dvayanairātmya, 175, 211, 二無我, the twofold egolessness, 1e of dharma and pudgala

Dvātrimsadvaralakshana, 75, 三十二相, the thirty-two marks of excellence as revealed in the body of the Buddha

Dviyāna(?), 358 f, 二乘 (聲聞乘與綠覺乘), the two vehicles of Śrāvakahood and Pratyekabuddhahood

Dvesha, 259, 凝, anger, one of the three evil passions (三春) known as poison (visha), the other two are rāga (食, the desire to have) and moha (抵, stupidity).

Dharma, 173, 法, the truth, the law; for various shades of meaning attached to the term, see pp 154f, Dharma, aksharapatita-, 109, 法应於文字, the truth in the bondage of letters Rutam mahāmate aksharapatitam, artho 'naksharapatitah' (194—1). 一切言說監於文字, 義則不墮 (T) Dharmo naiva ca deśito bhagavatā pratyātmavedyo yatah, 110, 自體不可說. (引物說法性, Prabhākaramitra). Dharmādharma, 80, 120, 121, 155, 法非法, truth and untruth, any object and that which is not that object, A and not-A, a dualistic conception in any form such as sat and asat, being and non-being, Samsāra and Nirvāna, etc

Dharmapañcakam, 39, 66, 五法, the "Five Categories," which is one of the important topics treated in the Lankāvatāra

Dharmakāya, 36, 127, 141, 142 ff, 151, 154, 188, 212, 308 f, 352, 353, 355, 369, 法身, often translated as the Law-body, or Truth-body 1 The truth conceived in the fashion of the physical body and standing in contrast to it, i.e. Rūpakāya (色身), 2 One of the Triple Body of the Buddha when he is identified with the Absolute, 3 = the Tathāgatakāya, Buddhakāya, Jūānakāya Dharmakāyo hi sambuddho dharmadhātus tathāgatah, 315, 法身是正覺, 法界即如來 (I-tsing)

Dharmakshānti, 127n, 法忍, same as 無生法忍, acceptance of the statement that all things are as they are, not being subject to the law of birth and death, which prevails only in the phenomenal world created by our wrong discrimination

Dharmacakra, 154, 233, 法輪, the Wheel of the Law.

Dharmatā, 72, 83, 142, 185, 275, 320, 法性, 體性, the ultimate essence of things existing Cittasya dharmatā śuddhā (298—9) 心性本清淨(T). Dharmatānishyanda, 321, 法性所流, "buddha, 144, 法性所流佛, the Buddha conceived as flowing out of the ultimate essence of things, that is, a manifested form of the Absolute, Dharmatābuddha, 142 ff, 208 f, 316, 法性佛, the Buddha as Essence itself, ie the Dharmakāya in its absolute aspect.

Dharmadvaya, 80, 二法, duality.

Dharmadhātu, 152, 242, 275, 354, 法界 It may be rendered properly as "realm of ideas," as the term expresses the most comprehensive view of the universe, including not only this visible sense-world but all possibly conceivable ideal worlds

Dharmaniyāmatā, 212, 275, 法位, orderliness or fixedness of things each in its own position, or gesetzmassiakeit

Dharmanairātmya, 78, 138, 154, 194, 263, 360, 法無我. idea that there is no self-substance or Atman (ego) constituting the individuality of each object is insisted on by the followers of Mahayana Buddhism to be their exclusive property not shared by the Hinayana, but how far this is historically true may be contested. As the idea of Dharmanairatmya is closely connected with that of Sunyata and as the latter is one of the most distinguishing marks of the Mahayana it was natural for its scholars to give to the former a prominent position in their philosophy Dharmanaurātmyajñāna, 167f, 167n, 法無我智, the power of cognisance whereby the truth of Dharmanai-Cittamanomanovijnānapancadharmarātmya 18 accepted svabhävarahitän mahämate sarvadharman vibhävayan bodhısattvo mahāsattvo dharmanaırātmyakuśalo bhavatı (69-11,13) 観察一切諸法,離心・意・意識・五法・自性 是名菩薩摩訶法無我智(T) "When a Bodhısattva-mahāsattva recognises that all dharmas are free from Citta, Manas, and Manovijnana, the Five Dharmas, and the Threefold Syabhava, he is said to understand well the signification of Dharmanairātmva "

Dharmaparyāya, 154, 法門, doctrine, or system of teaching Another name of the Lankāvatāra is "Cittamanomanovijnānapancadharmasvabhāvalakshaṇadharmaparyāya"(48—14, 15), 心意意識五法自性相衆妙法門(T), and still another is "Āryajnānavastupravicayam" (50—14, 15) 警告自性法門 When the first one is shortened, it runs thus.

"Pancadharmasvalakshanapravicayam" (68—6),觀察五 法自性相法門 Sung has 經 instead of 法門 for dharmaparyāya.

Dharmapūjā, 230, 232, 法供養, moral offerings

Dharmabuddha. 23, 法佛, evidently same as Dharmatabuddha

Dharmameghā, 78, 204, 法宴地, literally, dharma-cloud, the last of the ten Bodhisattva stages

Dharmavaram, 68, 最勝法, the highest truth

Dharmavaśavartin, 於法自在者, one who has control over all things, or one who is perfectly acquainted with all truths. It depends upon how we understand dharma in this connection. Sarvadharmānābhogavaśavartītā dharma ityucyate (181—1); 於一切法悉得自在,是名法利(T),於一切法無開發(無功用,T)自在,是名為法(S) Sarvadharma, 諸法, or 一切法, means "all things," "existence generally," or "the world", and the whole passage is to be understood thus. "to have full control over things worldly without any reference to egotistic purpose." To be master of oneself as well as the whole world—this is indeed the Dharma Bhagavantam sarvayogavaśavartinam (11—16), 世章於觀自在(T), "[I wish to see] the Blessed One who is perfect master of all disciplinary practices"

Dharmaviraja, 69, 清淨法, truth immaculate.

Dharmas cāsarīrah, 151, 法身無有身(T), the Dharma (-body) 18 without the body.

Dharmasamatā, 351, 法平等, the sameness of the truth taught by the Tathagatas, one of the fourfold sameness Dharmasthittā, 212, 275, 法任, continuity of existence

Dharmasvabhāvānabodhamanomayakāya, 210, 曼法自性意成身, the will-body assumed when the self-nature of things is understood as having no self-nature

Dharmāhāra, 369, 法食, food of truth Dharmāhāra hī mahāmate mama śrāvakāh pratyekabuddhā bodhisattvāśca nāmishāhārāh prāg eva tathāgatāh (255—13, 14) 我諸聲聞 綠覺菩薩唯法食 (不食肉), 豈況如來 (T) "Mahāmati, my Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and Bodhisattvas feed themselves on truth, not on meat, how much more the Tathagatas!"

Dharmātmyalakshana, 111, 法無政相, the belief that there is something substantial behind what is presented to one's view

Dhaimānām dhaimatā 137, 諸法性, that which constitutes the reason of things

Dhyāna, 38, 禪那, or shortly 禪, a concentrated state of mind
The classification of Dhyāna into four heads, 367 f, is characteristically Mahayanistic, and the Lankāvatāra's intimate relation to the teaching of Zen Buddhism may be gleaned from it Na shaddhyānādidhyāyinā (10—11), 73, 不應住六定等中 (T) The author has not been able to ascertain what these are

Nata, 195, 工技兒, dancer

Nayaka, 354, 菜者, leader

Nagakanyā, 66 ff, 龍女, Naga-maidens

Nāma, 26, 155 f, 名, name, one of the Five Dharmas, Nāmamātra, 281, 唯名, name-only Vijnaptir nāmamātieyam lakshanena na vidyate (96—4), 唯假施設名, 求相不可得 (T)

Nāstyasti, 291, 有無, being and non-being

Nihsvabhāva, 96, 166, 168, 287, 無自性, without self-nature lakshana, 134n, 無自性相, signs indicating the absence of self-nature

Nikāyasahajāsamskārakriyāmanomayakāya, 210, 種類俱生 無作行意成身, the will-body acquired by penetrating into the inner realisation of the Buddha

Nitya, 119, 146, 354, 常, eternal, "tā, 120, eternity, Nityam acıntyam, 302, 常不思議, eternity unthınkable Nityam acıntyam pratyātmāryagatıgocaram paramārthagocaram

ca (59—11, 12). 常不思議. 自聖證智第一義境 (T). Nityānitya, 116, 常無常, eternal and not-eternal. Nityā-emtaiveyam tathāgatānām pratyātmāryajnānādhigamatathatā (60—11, 12), 此常不思議, 是諸如來自證聖智所行其理 (T).

Nimitta, 26, 127, 155 ff, 相, appearance, one of the "Five Dharmas."

Nimittalakshanābhedatvāt, (106—16), 119, 相相不壞故(S), 相不異故, (T), 以想差別故(W).

Nırābhāsa, 40, 98, 138, 140, 141, 148, 160, 208, 247, 340, 360, 無影像 generally, or 無相, imageless, shadowless Cittain hi bhūmayah sapta nirābhāsā tvihāshṭamī (215—11), 七地 是有心, 八地無影像 (T); 七地爲心地, 無所有八地 (W); 心量地第七,無所有第八(S). "Up to the seventh stage there is still a trace of mindfulness, but at the eighth the state of imagelessness [i.e. no conscious strivings] obtains." Prajňavá ca nirábhasam prabhavam cadhigacchati (158-4) 蒸能得無相, 及妙莊嚴境 (W); 矮能證 無相及自在威光(T); (觀察一切法), 通達無所有, 及得自 在力, 是則名慧 (S). "It is by means of Prajñā that the Imageless and the supernatural glory are realised." Nırābhāsagocara, 97. 278, 無照現境, realm of no-shadows. Tathatāvyavasthitas ca bodhisattvo mahāsattvo nirābhāsagocarapratilābhitvāt pramuditām bodhisattvabhūmim pratalabhate (226—12f). 菩薩摩訶薩住如如者, 得無所有境界 故, 得菩薩歡喜地 (S); 菩薩住眞如法者, 得入無相寂靜境 界入已, 得入菩薩摩訶薩初歡喜地 (W); 菩薩摩訶薩住 如如已,得無照現境,昇歡喜地(T). "The Bodhisattyamahāsattva who abides in the suchness of things, enters into the realm of no-shadows, and thereby reaches the stage of Bodhisattvahood known as Joy": Nirābhāsabuddhi, 273, 無相智 (T), 無所有智 (S), 真實智 (W), shadowless knowledge.

Nirālamba, 144, 非所攀緣, unsupported; Dharmatābuddhaḥ nirālambaḥ (57—13), 法性佛非所攀緣 (T).

p*

Nırukti, 134, 辭句, terminological explanation

Nirodha, 39, 127, 148, 183, 290, 303, 滅, cessation, Nirodhasamāpatti, 245, 滅盡定, mental tranquility, Nirodhasukha, 356, 寂滅樂, the bliss of cessation Bodhisattvena nirodhasukham samāpattisukham ca sattvakriyāpekshayā pūrvasvapranidhānābhinirhritatayā ca na sākshātkaranīyam (58—13-15), 菩薩不取寂滅空門樂, 不取三摩跋提樂, 此憐愍衆生故, 起本願力行故(W), 菩薩非滅門樂, 正受樂, 顧愍衆生及本願, 不作證(S), 以憐愍衆生故, 本願所持故, 不證寂滅門及三昧樂(T). "Because of his compassion with which he regards all beings and because of his desire to fulfil his original vows, the Bodhisattva does not personally realise the bliss of cessation and that of tranquillity"

Nirgatam, 110, 不出, not out of (water) See Apravishtam Nirmāna, or Nirmānika, 142, 311, 應化, Nirmānakāya, 212, 308 ff, 347, 化身, the transformation-body, Nirmānabuddha, 23, 38, 142 ff, 208 f, 316, 化佛, the transformation-buddha, Nirmitādhishthāna, 363 f, 變化加持, being sustained by the power of the transformed one, Nirmitanirmāna, 80, 應化化佛, Nirmitabuddha, 328, 化佛

Nirvāna, 35 f, 41, 97, 100, 108, 127 ff, 168, 192, 193, 202, 218 ff, 293, 303, 312, 314 ff, 354 涅槃 滅度; Nirvānam āryajīānapratyātmagatīgocaram (99—1), 涅槃者自證皇智所行授界 This is one definition of Nirvana in the Lankāvatāra which is significant in many ways Nirvānam manavarjītam (149—8), 350, 涅槃雜心意 Na buddhah parinirvāti na dharmah parihīyate, sattvānām paripākāya parinirvānam nidaršayet Acintyo bhagavān buddho nityakāyas tathāgatah, dešeti vividhān vyūhān sattvānām hitakāranāt P 315 佛不般涅槃 正法亦不滅。為利森生故,示現有滅盡。世尊不思議,妙體無異相,為利森生故,現種雜嚴(I-tsing) Nirvānam iti yathābhūtārthasthānadaršanam (200—6), 296, 涅槃者見如實踐(T), "By Nirvana is meant to see into the abode of reality as it is",

Nirvāṇadhātu, 264, 涅槃界, the abode of Nirvana, one of the three Asamskritas (三無為法).

Nirvikalpa, 106, 138, 無分別, non-discrimination. Nirvikalpanirābhāsagocaram tathāgatagocaram (78—10), 無分別, 無影像處, 是如來歲門 (T). Nirvikalpācāra, 75, 無分別行, deeds of non-discrimination. Nirvikalpajūāna, 201, 無分別智, non-discriminative knowledge. Nirvikalpalokottarajūānam, 185, 無分別出世間智, non-discriminative transcendental knowledge.

Nirvritti, 185, 波, disappearance.

Nishyanda, 322 f, 所法, 等流, flowing-out or -down; Nishyandabuddha, 23, 142 ff, 208 f, 所法傷, 等法傷.

Nemina, 354, 阿利吒尼蒲(W).

Nairātmyam, 39, 139, 無我, egoless; Nairātmyadvaya, 29 f, 35, 37, 66, 154, 166 ff, 二無我, the twofold egolessness, pudgalanairātmya (人無我) and dharmanairātmya (法無我).

Nairmānika, 142, 化, transformed; Nairmānikabuddha, 23, 化停, Buddhas of transformation.

Padmavimāna, 332, 蓮華(後妙) 宮殿 (T), the lotus-palace. Pañcadharma, 26, 29 f, 141, 154 ff, 161, 162, 175, 194, 211, 316, 五法, the "five categories."

Pancanirmitabuddha, 328, 五化佛, the five transformation—Buddhas, not yet identified.

Pancaphala, 330, 五果, the five fruits (or effects); see Phala.
Pancavijnanakāya, 189, 五數身, the system of the Vijnanas.
Paratantra, 158 ff, 161, 163 ff, 322, 依他起性。緣起相, the knowledge of relativity.

Paramārtha, or paramārthasatya, 148, 160, 163 ff, 244, 273, 277, 288, 311, 第一菱誌, sometimes distinguished from Samvritisatya, relative knowledge or worldly truth.

Parahita, 214, 利他, benefitting others. Bodhisattvāh.... parahitahetor anekarūpavešadhāriņo bhavanti (72—1214). 菩薩為秦生故, 作種種身 (T); 為安(穩) 衆生故, 作

種類像 (S, W) "In order to benefit other people the Bodhısattvas assume various forms."

Parāvrītti, 40, 72, 74, 98, 100, 105, 108, 118, 119, 128, 141, 152, 179, 183n, 184, 185, 195, 197, 211, 247, 299, 360, 362n, 365, 轉依, turning-up, turning-over, levulsion

Parikalpa, 105, 115, 122, 200, generally translated as 分別, no special distinction being made between kalpa, pratikalpa, parikalpa, and vikalpa Sometimes we meet with another derivative of kalpa, samkalpa, which is also rendered 分別. But in the "Sagāthakam" (verses 686 and 687) these are distinguished: parikalpa is 福分別, samkalpa, 總分別, and vikalpa, 別分別. Samkalpa is, according to this, the general function of Citta, parikalpa is the work of Manas, while vikalpa is carried on by Manovijñāna

Parkalpita, 107, 158 ff, 161, 163 ff, 269, 287, 289, 322, 346, 妄計, false discrimination as one of the three Svabhāvas or Lakshanas It is generally translated as 獨計所執性.

Parikalpitābhidhāna, 346, 妄心所取名義 (T), phraseology belonging to erroneous imagination

Pariccheda, (vishaya-), 189, 差別, differentiation.

Parijñā or parijñāna, 193, 273, 了知, accurate knowledge.

Parınāma, 190, 806, 轉變, evolution, transformation. Parıkalpam upādāyaivam sarvaparināmabhedo drashtavyo. (159—12) 但分別故. 一切轉變如是 (T). "All the transformations are to be regarded as due to erroneous diserimination."

Parināmanā, 357, 延问, transference, especially of one's merit to another or towards the realisation of supreme wisdom This is one of the most characteristic ideas of Mahayana Buddhism.

Parmāyaka, 354, 普導者, the guiding one, one of the Buddha's epithets

Parmirvāna, 361, 般涅槃.

Parınıshpanna, 159 ff, 'lakshana, 31, 回成性, perfect knowledge, one of the Three Svabhavas (三自性), corresponding to Right Knowledge (samyagjñāna, 正智), of the Five Dharmas

Pariśuddhi, 253, 清淨, pure

Pāni, 353, 手, hand

Paramitā, 39, 41, 126, 141, 143, 199, 365 ff, 波羅蜜 (palomi), perfection, or reaching the other shore There are six (sometimes ten) Virtues of Perfection, which are regularly practised by the Bodhisattva See also Prayñā

Piśāca, 117, 毘舍閣, a goblin

Punyāpunya, 130, 藏非福, merit-demerit Anye punyāpunyaparikshayāt (188—17) 或計福非福盡 (是涅槃, T). "Others [think Nirvana consists] in the extinction of both merit and demerit"

Pudgala, 130, 139, 256, 人, the individual squl, Pudgala-dharmanairātmya, 140, 人法無我, the egolessness of both the individual soul and external objects, Pudgalanairātmyajñāna, 167, 人無我智, the knowledge that there is no ego-soul

Puramdara, 353, 不關陀羅 (W), city-destroyer, epithet of Indra

Purusha, 130, 人, 士夫, supreme spirit

Purushakāra, 323, 士用果, one of the five "fruits" (phala,果), literally, man-working It is the effect produced by a human agent at work

Pūnjān, 367, something heaped up (†)

Pūrvadharmasthititā, or Paurānasthitidharmatā, 212, 213, 274, 277, 352, 本住法, originally-abiding truth or reality

Pūrvaprandhāna, 332, 本願, an original vow made by a Bodhisattva when he begins his career as a Mahayana follower of the Buddha

Prithagiana, 143, 異生, generally coupled with bāla, 愚夫, meaning a man not yet illumined, ie ignorant

Prithivi, 353, 大地, earth

Posha, 130, 譯者, 養者, growth, nourishing or growing one;

found in combination (183—13, 1) with Ātma (我), Satta (衆生), Jīva (命), Posha (壽者), Purusha (士夫), Pudgala (人)

Pracārīta (-śūnyatā), 288, 行空, emptiness of action, one of the seven Śūnyatās

Prajñapti, 181, 假設, =vijñapti, representation, ideation, mental construction, Prajñaptināmamātreyam, 181, 唯假設名 This is the form in the "Sagāthakam" 23, but on p 96, vijňapti Evidently, prajňapti and vijňapti are convertible teims as far as the Lankāvatāra is concerned Prajňaptimātra, 181, 281 f, 唯假設, Prajňaptimātram katham (26—17), 181, 281n, 云何唯假設, Prajňaptimātram tribhavam (nāsti vastusvabhāvatah, 168—7), 181, 281n, 三有唯假名, 無有實法體(T), Prajňaptisatya, 242, 假名(T), 世議(S, W), woildly way of thinking Prajňaptisatyato hy ātmā dravyasan na hi vidyate (153—10), 假名世諦我, (施設世諦我), 後則無實事(S, W), 施設假名我, 而實不可得(T) "In accordance with the worldly way of thinking, there is an ego-substance, which, however, has really no existence"

Prajñā, 34, 35 f, 43, 52, 83, 101, 108, 127, 138, 160, 177, 200, 229, 272, 279, 283 ff, 306n, 366, 般若, 智慧, transcendental knowledge, Prajñācakshus, 115, 305, 慧眼, wisdom-eye, Prajñāpāramitā, 206, 般若波羅蜜多, one of the Pāramitās The six 01 ten Virtues of Perfection (pāramitā) are enumerated, when they are ten, the following four are added to the six 7 Upāya, 方便, means, 8. Praṇidhāna, 與 vows, 9. Bala, 力, power, and 10 Jñāna, 智, knowledge. The last two are more or less repetitions of Vīrya and Prajñā According to the Yogācāra philosophers all the four are regarded as the amphification of the sixth Pāramita, Prajñā. Prajňopāya, 227, 智慧方便, knowledge and means.

Pratityasamutpāda, 121, 緣起, the theory of causation Pratibimba, 84, 97, 164, 影像, image.

Prativikalpa, 81, 分别, discrimination. Kalpa (20—3), vikalpa, samkalpa (越分別, 350—7), parikalpa (極分別, 350—7), pratikalpa—they are more or less synonymous See also under Parikalpa

Pratisrut, 85, 趣, echo

Pratishthāpikabuddhi, 165, 建立智, the intelligence whereby a proposition is set up

Pratisamkhyanirodha, 264n, 擇減, the annihilation of evil desires by means of the intellect and will, which is Nirvana attained by the Buddhists One of the three Asamskritas (三無念法)

Pratyaksha, 201, 273, 286, 現證, 現量, immediate perception A good definition of pratyaksha is given in the Mahāvyutpatti, CCII, 1 Satsamprayoge purushasyendriyānām buddhijanma pratyaksham 選有則人之諸根生覺, 謂之現前. "When an object appears before a sense-organ the latter perceives it and recognises it as something external" This is immediate knowledge forming the basis of all other forms of knowledge — pratyātmāryajñāna

Pratyava, 139, 354, 緣, causation

Pratyayābhīvyaktī, 307, 黎明了轉變, one of the nine Parināmas, but what it means is not explained

Pratyātmāryajñāna, 67, 68, 74, 85, 98, 100 f, 103, 109, 114, 127, 132, 140, 150, 153, 184, 193, 253, 273, 277, 307, 339, 自證(登) 聖智 Pratyātma (自證), āryajñāna (聖智), gatigama (所行), adhīgama (所證), gocara (遠界), dharma with its synonyms, and some other terms appear in the

Lankāvatāra in almost every possible combination is natural seeing that the object of the sutra is to elucidate the doctrine of Pratvätmannana The following gives all the chief combinations to be found in it grouped under 1 Those containing āryajñāna as principal three heads ideas, though they also frequently include such words as gocara, lakshana, gati, gatigama, or adhigama, yet the main stress of the combination may be regarded as placed on māna: 2 Those phrases purporting to emphasise the experience-aspect of the realisation, i.e., those made up with such terms as gocara, gotra, gati, gatigama, or adhigama, and without any special reference to its intellectual significance, and 3 Those combinations more expressive of the metaphysical sense which is conveyed in teims such as dhaima, dharmatā, vastu, tathatā, tattvam, or bhūtakoti

- 1 Pratyātmajāāna (with oi without sva), 2—7, 98—2, 228—4, 231—10, (with gocara), 13—13, 21—4, 35—7, 50—10, 231—1, (with gatigocara), 99—1, 67—17, 68—6, 62—12, (with gatilakshaṇa), 49—17, 50—6, 133—2, 13, (with gatigama), 89—3, 87—12, (with adhigama), 61—12, 75—8, 80—2, 93—1, 12, 194—18, (with tathāgatabhūmi and gata), 93—4, (with vastumukha), 94—14, which is variously translated in the Chinese showing discrepancies in the original texts 整智自證法性門 (T), 整人內身證智門 (W), 自住事門 (S) In one case buddhi is used for jāāna, 133—10, sometimes āryajāāna is not prefixed by pratyātma, for instance, 125—12, 77—10, 75—9, 165—10, sometimes we have vedyā substituted for jāāna, 88—13, 215—13, sometimes vedyagati, 3—12, 16
- 2 Pratyātmagati (with or without sva, and sometimes with tathāgata, ārya, or lakshana), 5—14, 6—2,8—12, 11—6, 18—12, 58—10, 11, 16, 17, 62—1, 123—8, 127—17, 155—12, 224—18, 238—6, 7, (with gatigocara), 4—16,

5—5, 7—8, 7—11, 11—16, 13—13, 23—16, 39—16, 49—5, 55—1, 57—9, 59—11, 155—2, 172—12, 242—15; (with gatigama), 43—8, 222—3; (with adhigama), 58—3, 4, 12, 60—4, 61—8, 148—11; (with abhisamayagotia), 64—12; (with tathāgatabhūmi), 224—10, 214—4, 10—15.

3 Pratyātmadharma (or dharmatā), 6—11, 8—1, 143 —5, 144—12, 185—3, 226—18, (qualified with vedyagati), 3—12, 3—16, (with nayalakshana), 15—3; (with tattvam), 48—14; (with vastu), 95—4; (with tathatā), 132—3; (with bhūtakoṭ), 88—13.

In the "Sagāthakam" we have the following combinations. Pratyātma-vedyayāna, 163, "dharmatā, 350, "vedya, 421, "tathatā, 545, "gatigama, 746, "drishṭigatīka, 781, "drishṭadharma, 881.

Pratyekabuddha, 獨覺, 緣覺, a solitary Buddha who has no desire to announce his truth to the world; Pratyekabuddhayāna, 360, 緣覺乘.

Pradhāna, 264, 勝者, Pradhānam īšvarah kartā cittamātram vikalpyate (79—12), 滕自在作者, 此但心分别(T).

Praṇidhāna, 203, 205, 209 f, 340, 355 f, 357, 題, vow, prayer, earnest wish

Prapanca, 137, 200, 201n, 鼓論, vain talk, diffusive trivial reasoning; "darśana, 345, 虚妄見; "daushthulya, 190, 鼓論 過惡; Anādikālaprapancadaushthulyavikalpavāsanāhetukam (43—7), 無始虛偽過惡妄想習氣因(S). "Owing to the habit-energy accumulated since beginningless time by trivial erroneous discrimination."

Prabandha, 183, 相類, continuation

Prabhāva, 203, 356, 威力, 威神力, sovereign power,=anu-bhāva and adhishthāna.

Prabhedapracāra (m vyavasthānayatı, 57—12), 143, 分別觀察建立(S), 建立差別行(W).

Prabhedanayalakshana (127—14), 110, (安計自性) 差別相, the aspect of individuation arising from false imagination. Pramāṇa, 134, 137, 量, logical survey. Naikatvānyatvobhayatvānubhayatvasambaddham tat sarvapramānavınivritam (189—16). 非一非異, 非俱非不俱, 以是義故, 超一切量(T). "That which is not bound by [such opposites as] oneness and otherness, bothness and not-bothness, is beyond all logical survey"

Pramuditā, 222, 被喜地, the stage of Joy, the first of the ten Bodhısatvabhūmı

Pravicayabuddhi, 165, 觀察智, the intellect that sees into the self-nature of existence which is beyond the fourfold proposition (catushkotika, 四句)

Praviiti, 182, 185, 生起, 轉, rising, appearance, vijnāna, 186 ff, 198, 210, 336, 轉識, the Vijnāna in its dynamic aspect, ie as evolving in conjunction with the sense-organs

Prasama, 85. 寂滅, tranquility

Prāyogikacaryā, 224, 加行, 有功用行, effortful life, opposed to anābhoga, 無功用.

Preta, 118, 餓鬼, hungry ghost

Phala, 323 f, 果 There are five "fruits" or effects (pañcaphalāni) 1 Vipākaphala, 異點果 when an evil deed is committed, the doer suffers pain, when a good is done, he enjoys pleasure Pleasure and pain in themselves are unmoral and neutral as far as their karmaic character is concerned Hence the name "differently ripening" 2 Nishyanda° 等流果 when an evil (or a good) deed is done, this tends to make the doer more easily disposed towards evils (or goods) As cause and effect are of the same nature, this phala is called "flowing in the same course " 3 Purusha" 士用果 vegetables or cereals grow abundantly from the earth owing to the will, intelligence, and labour of the farmer, as the harvest is the fruit brought about by a human agency, the name purusha is given to this form of effect 4 Adhipatio, 增上果. that anything at all exists is due to the cooperation positive or negative of all other things; for if the latter interfere in any way, the former will cease to exist. When thus the co-existence of things is regarded as the result of universal mutuality, it is called "the helping." 5 Visamyoga。 離聚果 Nirvana is the fruit of spiritual discipline, and as it enables one to be released from the bondage of birth-and-death, it is called "freeing from bondage."

Bandhanam cittasambhavam, 179, (彼相卽是過: 皆從心縛 生(T), the bondage is mind-made, that is, this world of faulty appearances is the constitution of the mind

Bandhābandhavikalpa, 111f, 轉解分別, discrimination as to bondage and release, one of the twelve Vikalpas.

Bala, 39, 66, 97, 142, 150, 209, 力. The ten powers of the Bodhısattva according to the Avatamsaka (Śıkshānanda, LVI) are· 1. Asayabala, 深心力, having a mind strongly turned away from worldliness, 2 Adhyāśaya°, 增生深心 力, having a belief growing ever stronger in Buddhism; 3 Prayoga°, 加行 or 方便力, the power of discipling himself in all the exercises of Bodhisattvahood: 4. Praina. 智力, the intuitive power to understand the mentalities of all beings; 5 Pranidhāna°, 顧力, the power of making every prayer fulfilled, 6. Caryā°, 行力, the power of working till the end of time; 7 Yāna°, 乘力, the power of creating all kinds of conveyance (yana) without ever giving up the Mahāyāna; 8. Vikurvaṇa°, 神變力, the power of making a world of immaculate purity in every pore of the skin, 9 Bodhi°, 菩提力, the power of awakening every being in enlightenment; 10. Dharmacakrapravartana° 轉法輪力, the power of uttering one phrase which appeals uniformly to the hearts of all beings

Bala-abhijñā-vasīta, 346, 327, 力, 神通, 自在, the powerssupernatural-faculties-self-mastery, generally found in triplet as the endowments of the Bodhisattva

Balin, 354, 大力者, the strong one, an epithet of the Buddha.

Bālopacārikam, 367, 茂夫所行禪, one of the four Dhyānas mentioned in the Lankāvatāra, p 97 Though he is regarded as ignorant or dull-witted (bāla) who practises this kind of Dhyāna, this is the ordinary form of meditation carried on by most people, some of whom are quite intelligent and sharp-witted. But the Mahayana goes beyond these meditations which are more or less relative and artificial and not of the highest sort; for meditating on impurities, the impermanence of things, sufferings of life, etc., is the first lesson for the beginners of Buddhism

Bāhyamadhyātmaka, 116, 內外法, external and internal.
Bāhyabhāva, 132, 272, 外法, an external world ——abhāvānabhinivesāt (184—16), 不取外线 (T), 不著外性 (S), 不取苦外諸线界 (W), "By not clinging to the existence or non-existence of an external world "

Buddha, 35 f, 354, 佛, 佛陀, 登者, the enlightened one Deśanādhai manishyando yac ca nishyandanirmitam, buddhā hy ete bhavet paurāh śeshā nirmānavigrahāh (320—1,2), 329 依法身有報, 從報起化身, 此為根本佛, 餘皆化 所現 (T), 說是真法智, 所有集作化, 是譜佛根本, 餘者應 化佛 (W)

Buddhatā, 137, 277, 佛性, 佛體門, that which constitutes Buddhahood kleśadvayaprahānāc ca mahāmate buddhanām bhagavatām buddhatā bhavatı (140—12, 13), ... 斯二項惱是佛體性(T) "The reason of Buddhahood consists in the destruction of the twofold Kleśa (evil passions), etc "

Buddhadharma, 152, 155, 360, 佛法, Aparapraneyā bhavishyantı buddhadharmeshu (133—5), 於佛法中不由他悟 (T), "In the teachings of the Buddha they establish themselves not depending upon anybody else" Buddhabuddhatā sarvapramānendriyavinivrittā, 137, 正等亞者, 永確一切諸根境界(T), Buddhasya buddhatā, 153,319, 佛體性 Vāhānukūlā nityāśca tathā buddhasya buddhatā (234—8), (譬如恒河沙,悉離一切過),而恒險順流,佛體亦如是(T)

"As the sands of the Ganges which always arrange themselves along the stream, so does the essence of Buddicticod [conform itself to the stream of Nirvana].

Buddhaherunadesa 354 解性.....近其(T), 012 who teaches the reason of Buddhahood.

Buddhi 27n. 152, 162, 164 if (two binds of). 202 %. The difference between buddhi and juinous is sometimes difficult to point out definitively, for they both signify worldly relative knowledge as well as transcendental browledge. Projun is distinctly the latter.

Buddhiboddhavya 116. 是 所是. Inswing and Inswina and In

(T). 鞋图所变、

Bodhi or saribodhi, 38. 菩思 or 正子 enlighterment; Bodhi eintorpada 103. 206, 翠菩思心 awakening the thought co-enlightenment.

Bodhinakshya the thirty-seven. 352 三十七知道后,which is, fully stated supertriniaddochindishing charmah, the thirty-seven items leading to enlighterment. They are:

L The Four Smrityupasthīna.四之速, the four chiects of meditation: L knyc*, 身, the body; 2 redom? . 子, sensetions; 3. cina". D. thought: L. diarma", E. the Doctrine II. The Four Samyakprikana CIFF. its fact right ways of emping down evil desires and thoughts: L to itep down evils that have not yet been done: 2 to unroot evils that have already been put in action; 2. to do good's than have not yet been done: 4 to make accds already diffe grow ever stronger. III. The Four Riddlingth Wir I R. four strong determinations to amain supernatural powers by means of concentration on: L chande. St. desire; 2 citic. 已, thought: 3. tirys. 芳達. exercy; 4 minidinac. 夏, reflection. IV. The Five Lidriya.三長, five controlling principles: L. fredelief. 医 faith; 2 ciryef. 青 L. energy; 3. smrtif, Ž. mirā'rlness: 4. samātāt "Ž. concentration; 5. grafiff, E. wisdom. V. The Five Bala. 五力, the five powers which are the same as the five Indriyas, the one is conceived as a sort of principle by which the other is manifested VI The Seven Bodhyanga, 七登支, the seven factors leading to enlightenment 1 smrition, 念, mindfulness, 2 dharmapravicayao, 擇法, a discerning judgment for the right doctrine, 3 vīryao, 精选, energy, 4 prītion, 喜, joyfulness, 5 praśrabdhion, 輕安 repose, 6 samādhion, 定. concentration, 7 upekshāon, 拾, equanimity VII The Eight Angikamārga, 八正道, the eight noble paths of righteousness 1 samyagdrishti, 正見, right view, 2 "kalpa, 正思惟, right thinking, 3 "vāg, 正語, right speech, 4 "karmānta, 正素, right conduct, 5 "vīva, 正命, right livelihood, 6 "vyāyāma, 正動, right effort, 7 "smriti, 正念, right mindfulness, 8 "samādhi, 正定, mind hightly collected

Bodhisattva, the meaning of, 345, 菩提薩埵, 菩薩, 費有情, one who seeks enlightenment not only for himself but for others, another name for the Mahayana follower, Bodhisattvecchantiko 'tra mahāmate ādiparinirvritān sarvadharmān viditvātyantato na parinirvāti (66—11), 220, 大芸, 彼菩薩一闡提, 知一切法本來涅槃, 畢竟不入 (T) "Mahāmati, the Bodhisattva-icchantika knowing that all things are in Nirvana from the beginning refrains for ever from entering into Nirvana"

Bodhyangas, 39, 菩提支, factors of enlightenment Brahma, 352, 梵 Brahmayāna, 360, 梵乘

Bhāva, 131, 193, 307, 法, 有, existence, being, sometimes =dharma, sometimes=lakshana In the following instances =dharma. Astitvam sarvabhāvānām (156—7), 見諸法實有(W), Abhāvāt sarvadharmānām (156—9), 一切法者無(W), Sarvabhāvā anutpannāniruddhāh (198—1), 一切諸法不生不減(T) Bhāva is lakshana in these examples Bhūtāvināśac ca svalakshanam notpadyate na nirudhyate (198-2), 大種不壞, 以其自相不生不滅 (T); Bhūto bhūtasvabhāvam na vijahāti (198--3), 大種不捨其 Bhāvābhāva, 128, 有無, being and non-being 白性(T) Bhāvasvabhāva, 43, 124,性自性(S), 自性(T),諸法自性(T), 法性(T), reason, being, self-nature, that which constitutes the essential nature of a thing Na mahamate yatha balaprithagjanair bhāvasvabhāvo vikalpyate tathā bhavati (163-16), 一切凡愚, 分別諸法, 而諸法性非如是有 (T). "The nature of existence is not. Mahamati, as it is discriminated by the ignorant " Tatra vitatham iti mahāmate na tathā yathā bhāvasvabhāvah kalpyate (199—16f), 言 虚妄者不如法性起類倒見 (T) "By being 'false' it is meant not to discriminate things as they are in themselves " Bhāvasvabhāva(-śūnyatā). 288. 自性空, emptiness of selfnature, one of the seven Sünyatās

Bhāskara, 354, 火, an epithet of the Buddha Bhūta, 74, 實, reality, element (mahābhūta)

Bhūtakoti, 164, 259, 262, 287, 354 實際, the limit of reality.

Bhūtatā, 213, 275, 354, 法性(?T), reality Yanmayā. . adhigatam sthitaivaishā dharmatā tathatā bhūtatā . (144—4f), 我所証真如常住法性(T) "What has been realised by me, that is the ever-abiding nature of things, suchness, reality, etc"

Bhūmi, 97, 地, stage; 353, 大地, earth Bodhisattvabhūmi, 菩薩地, of which there are ten, grading the upward course of the Bodhisattva's spiritual development, which culminates in the realisation of Buddhahood The Daśabhūmika-sūtra is specifically devoted to the treatment of the ten stages of Bodhisattvahood See J Rahder's edition, in which, however, the gātha portions are mostly omitted In the Lankāvatāra (chapter on "Abhisamaya"), the distinction between the Bodhisattva and the two Vehicles is emphasised, as the latter are unable to go up further than the sixth stage where they enter into Nirvana At the seventh stage, the Bodhisattva goes through an altogether new spiritual experience known as anabhogacarya, which may be rendered "a purposeless life" But, supported by the majestic power of the Buddhas, which enters into the great your first made by the Bodhisattya as he started in his career, the latter now devises various methods of salvation for the sake of his ignorant and confused fellowbeings But, continues the Lankavatara, from the absolute point of view of the ultimate truth (paramartha) attained by the Bodhisattva, there is no such graded course of spirituality in his life; for here is really no gradation (krama), no continuous ascension (kramānusandhi 相綴), but the truth (dharma, E) alone which is imageless (nirābhāsa, 等是设), and detached altogether from discrimination (vilulput it iktadharma). The names of the ten stages are. I. Pramuditā (欲答地), 2 Vimalā (離垢), 3. Prabhākarī(發光). 4 Areishmati, 設工, 5 Sudurjayā, 極疑膝, 6 Abhimukhī, 現前, 7. Dürangamā, 遠行. 8 Acalā, 不動 9 Sidhumati, 音響, and 10 Dharmameghi 法型. For a tabular description of each stage, see Sylvain Lévi's French translation of the Mahauana-sutralamkara by Asanga

Bhrānti, 38, 40, 118, 200, 274, 妄法, roaming, error, Bhrāntis tattvam (107—3), 119, 妄法是真質(T), 迷惑法名之為質(W); 控乱真質(S); Bhrāntih śāśvatā. (106—16), 119, 妄法是常相(T), 迷惑法常(W); 经意常(S)

Mattapurusha, 360, 各醉人, drunken man. Yathā hi mattapurusho madyābhāvād vibudhyate (135—14), 營如各醉 人, 酒消然後语(T) "Like unto a drunken man who grows conscious when the effect of liquor wears off"

Madhyamā. 163, 242, 中道, the middle way. Vinivritir vikalpasya pratipatsye ca madhyamā (311—2), 亦聲妄分別, 此行契中道(T) "When discrimination is done away with, the middle way is reached"

Manas. 84, 99, 171 ff, 177, 190, 195 ff, 282, 意, consciousness as the will-to-be

Manomayakāya, 145, 208 ff, 331, 354, 意生(成)身, the will-body

Manomayadharmakāya, 318, 如來意成法身, the Tathagata's Dharmakāya as a will-body

Manovijñāna, 38, 84, 171 f, 177 f, 191 意識, consciousness more intellectually conceived, the world of particulars.

Mano hyubhayasamcaram, 250, 意具二種行 (T), Manas walks in two ways

Manyatı, 250, 思慮, to reflect

Mahā-augha, 193, 暴流, great flood. Yathā kshīne mahā-aughe tarangānām asambhavah (127—12). 如大暴流盡 波浪則不起(T) "It is like a great flood whose force being exhausted waves are no more stirred in it"

Mahākarunā, 34, 97, 152, 177, 223, 357, 大悲, 大悲心, great love, great compassionate heart Bodhisattvāh .pūrva-pranidhānakripākarunopetāh (214—2, 3), 菩薩便愤念本願大悲(T) "Recalling them original vows growing out of a great compassionate heart, the Bodhisattvas ."

Mahāprandhāna, 230, 大願, great vows made by the Bodhisattva in the beginning of his spiritual career

Mahābhūta, 246, 大種, primary elements.

Mahāmatı, 大慧, the principal interlocutor in the Lankavatāra

Mahāyāna, 358 f. 大乘, the great vehicle

Mahāvānaprabhāna, 203, 大乘光明定, a samādhi.

Mahāyogayogin, 103n, 大修行者, he who exerts himself in the great discipline leading up to Buddhahood.

Mahāśūnyatā, 288, 大空, emptiness of the highest degree, that is, paramāi thārya jūāna, 第一義聖智大空.

Māmsacakshus, 114, 肉眼, human eye Buddhyā na māmsa-cakshā (13—3), 以禁眼觀, 非肉眼觀(T).

Mamsabhakshana, 368 ff 肉食, meat-eating

Māyā, 幻, magic, Māyāvıshaya, 141, 317, 幻境, realm of māyā

Māyopama, 97, 100, 168, etc, 如幻, māyā-like, Māyopama-

samādhi, 209, 如幻三昧, the highest samādhi in the Lan-Lāvatāra, Māyopamasamādhikāya, 140, 如幻三昧身, the body in which this samādhi is realised

Mārga, 39, 道, path, Mārgam ashtāngikam, 358, 八支道, the eightfold path See under Bodhrpakshya, Mārgasatya, 354, 道語

Muni, 36 f, 牟尼.

Mūlatathāgata, 146, 316, 根本如來, the original Tathagata, =Dharmakāva, =Dharmatābuddha

Mrigatrishnā, 112, 陽炎, 鹿谒, deer-thirst, fata morgana Mritparamānu, 187, 泥微座, clay-atom, bhyo mritpindo na cānyo nānanyah (38—9),泥则與微塵, 非異不非異(T),

"A lump of clay is neither different nor not-different from its atoms"

Maitrīvihāri, 370, 安住慈心, those who abide in compassion Moksha, 38, 132 f, 解脫, emancipation

Moha, 259, 海, folly, one of the three poisonous desires

Maunatathagata, 80, the Tathagata in silence, =mulatathagata Nothing corresponding to this in the Chinese translations

Maulatathāgata, 145n, 根本如來, the original Tathāgata

Yathātathyadarśana, 73, 如質見, seeing into the truth as it is Yathātathyamudrā. 302, 如質印, the seal of suchness Vimokshatrayādhigatayāthātathyamudrāsumudritā bhāvasvabhāveshu pratyātmādhigatayā buddhyā pratyakshavihārino bhavishyanti nāstyastitvavastudrishtivivarjitāh (166—3,5) 得三解脫,如實印所印,於性自性,得緣自覺觀察住,離有無事見相(S),得三解脫門,得已以如實印善的諸法,自身內證智慧觀察,離有無見(W),悟三解脫門,德如實印,見法自性,了聖境界,遠離有無一切諸著(T) "Let all beings realise the triple emancipation, be well stamped with the seal of suchness, abide in the intuitive understanding of the self—nature of things, which is to be gained by the inner faculty of realisation, and cease from viewing things in their relative aspect"

- Yathābhūtam, 105, 114, 115, 118, 119, 121, 122, 128, 132, 195, 197, 215, 268, 273, 274, 282, 285, 294, 335, 339, 341, 如實, truly, as it is.
- Yathābhūtasvalakshanāvasthānāvasthītam, 123n, 如實相自相分齊住(S); 住如實處(T); 住於自相如實法中(W); "abiding in the place where reality remains in its original identity"
- Yathābhūtārthasthānadarśana, Tatra nīrvānam iti mahāmate (200—6), 123, 大慧言涅槃者, 見如實處(T);...如真實養見(S);... 謂見諸法如實住處(W). "Mahāmatī, Nīrvana means seeing into the abode of reality in its true signification." The abode of reality is where a thing stands by itself, and we have in the Lankāvatāra the following (178—15) avasthāne 'vatīshthata itī na pravartata ity artho . 自處住者,是不起義(T) "To abide in one's self-station means not to be astir, [i e to be eternally quiescent]"
- Yathābhūtāvasthānadarśana, 123, 123n, 127, 278. 'm sarvadharmānām yaduta svacīttadriśyamātrāvatāraḥ (112—6), 如實度是一切法者, 謂起(超)自心現量(S); 云何住如實見, 謂入自身見諸法故(W), 是一切如實處者, 謂能了達唯心所現(T). ''By 'seeing into the abode of reality as it is' is meant 'to get mto the understanding that there is only what is seen of one's own mind, [and no external world as such]'''
- Yathārutārthābhinivishta, 77, 随言取義(T); 如設而取著(W), "to cling to the letter as fully in accordance with the sense"
- Yathārutārthābhiniveśasamdhau na prapatata (164—14),
 110, 不透如言取義深密執着 (T); 不透如所說義計著相讀
 (S), 不透執著諸法相顧不相續相 (W). The Wei text seems to differ very much from both Sung and Tang.
 But Wei and Sung agree in reading samdha as 相讀 (combination or continuation) while Tang has 深密 (hidden meaning) for it—I follow the Tang reading.

Yathālabdham (at the end of the Tibetan Lankāvatāra),
23, as far as accessible or available

Yāna, 360, 乘, vehicle The Buddhist doctrine that carries one from this side of birth-and-death to the other side of Nirvana has been compared to a vehicle of conveyance since the early days of Buddhism

Yugāntāgni, 257, 劫火, fire at the end of the world

Yukti, 132,如實, truth, 307, 相應(轉變), combination, concordance, transformation; Yuktivikalpa, 111 f, 理分別, reasoning as to the existence of the ego, one of the twelve false discriminations

Yoga, 103, 瑜伽, 修行, discipline, Yogin, 修行者, devotee

Ranga, 195, 觀伎衆(S,T), 伎兒(W), the stage, theatre.
Natavan nrityate cittam mano vidüshasādriśam, vijnānam pañcabhih sārdham driśyam kalpeti rangavat (224—2,3).
心如工伎兒, 意如和伎者, 五識爲伴侶, 妄心觀伎衆(S,T); 心如工伎兒, 意如狡猾者, 意識及五識, 證妄取境界, 如伎兒和合, 銋惑於凡夫(W) For the English, see p 125

Rākshasa, 34, 羅刹, a class of demons living in Lankā under the leadership of Rāvana

Rāga, 194, 259, 貪, greed, desire to have

Rāgadveshamoha, 269, 貪瞋痴, known as the three poisons (三毒)

Rāma, 354, 羅摩, name of a hero

Ruta, 108 ff, 文字, 語, word Katham ca bhagavan bodh-sattvo mahāsattvo yathārutārthagrāhī na bhavatı (154-9, 10), 世寧, 菩薩摩訶薩, 何故不應依語取義(T) "O Blessed One, how is it that a Bodhisattva-mahāsattva is not to grasp meaning according to words?"

Rutārtha, 113, 語典義, word and meaning Rutārthakuśalo bodhisattvo mahāsattvo rutam arthād anyannānyad iti samanupaśyati, artham ca rutāt (155—5, 6), 菩薩摩訶薩 書於語義。知語與義。不一不異,義之與語,亦復如是(T) "The Bodhisattva-mahāsattva who is well acquainted with word and meaning, recognises at once that word is neither different nor not-different from meaning, and vice versa." Rūpa, 175, 292, 292n, 色, torm, material existence; Rūpakāya, 315, 318, 色身, the physical body; Rūpadhātu, 346, 色界, world of form, material world; Rūpalakshana, 352, 色相, corporeal features, Rūpaloka. 331, 色界, world of form, Rūpasvabhāva, 188, 色自相, the self-nature of the external world.

Lakshana, 165, 182, 183, 186, 193, 288, 307, 福, aspect, sign, appearance Ābhāsa and Nimitta are also translated 福, and it is often confusing in the Chinese sutras to distinguish one from another. Lakshaṇa generally means individual "signs" by which one object is marked off from another object; nimitta is "appearance" or "tangible form"; while ābhāsa is not used by itself in the Laṅkāvatāra but in its negative form, anābhāsa or nirābhāsa, meaning "imageless," or "shadowless," i.e. "beyond the reach of the senses" Lakshyalakshaṇa, 97, 116, 133, 所相說相, predicating and predicated. This kind of antithesis appears throughout the Lankāvatāra; Lakshaṇavikalpa, 111 f, 福分別, one of the twelve false discriminations; Lakshaṇaśūnyatā, 288, 福之, emptiness of appearance, one of the Sūnyatās

Lokam vijnaptimatram (ca drishtyaugham dharmapudgalam, 270—1), 181, 如是諸世間, 唯有假施設, 諸見如暴流, 行於人法中(T); 但心如是見, 我法如暴水(W). "The world is no more than subjective construction; various views concerning it rage like a torrent, [assuming the reality of] an ego-soul and of an external world."

Vajragarbha, 226 f, 金剛藏, the chief speaker in the Daśa-bhūmika-sūtra, who, inspired by the Buddha, discourses with Vimukticandra (解脫月). That Vajragarbha is the only Bodhisattva referred to in the Lankāvatāra besides its chief interlocutor, Mahāmati, points to this sutra's connection in some way with the Daśabhūmika or the Kegon (Avatamsaka) sutra

Vajradhātu, 177, 金剛界, the universe viewed as the manifestation of Vairocana Buddha whose image is reflected in the heart of every being. See also Garbhakośadhātu

Vajrapāni, 145n, 金剛手, literally, thunderbolt-handed, a Buddhist god who accompanies the Buddha and protects him all the time

Vajravimbopama, 97, 金剛繁定 or 三昧 a samadhi It is the highest samādhi attainable by the Buddhist yogin who by this destroys the subtilest form of the Kleśa as if he wielded a thunderbolt (Cf. the Abhidharmakośa, Louis de la Vallée Poussin, Chapter VI, pp 228 f)

Vajrasamhatanakāyo nirmitakāyam daršayet, 315, 世尊金剛體, 權現於化身 (I-tsing).

Varuna, 354, 如水者 (T), or 水神, river-god, one of the immunerable epithets of the Buddha whereby he is made accessible to immunerable classes of beings

Vasumdharā, 353, 大地, the earth as wealth-container

Vaśavartin, 317, 自在, holding command over things The Buddha is regarded as sarvayogavaśavartin (11—16), 於 觀自在; acmtyadharmakāyavaśavartin, (154—14), 不思議自在法身; sarvadharmānābkogavaśavartin (181—1), 於 一切法悉得自在 (T, in which 無功用 is omitted), etc

Vasita, 39, 66, 98, 150, 209, 自在, self-control The tenfold mastery or self-control as described in the Avatamsaka (Sikshānanda, XXXVIII and LV) is as follows 1 Ayurvasita, 命自在, mastery over the duration of life, 2 Citta, 心自在, mastery over the mind which can enter into every possible form of self-concentration, 3 Parishkāra, 天具 (or 財)自在, power over an infinite variety of embellishment whereby the Bodhisattva enriches the worlds, 4 Karma, 業自在, submitting himself to the working of karma as the case requires, 4 Upapatti, 受生 (or 生)

自在, mastery over birth so that he can be born in any world; 6 Adhmukti, 解自在, the power of seeing the Buddhas filling up the entire universe; 7. Prandhāna, 國自在, the power of attaining enlightenment at any moment and in any place as he wills; 8 Biddhi, 神力 (or 如意)自在, the power of exhibiting all kinds of miraculous works; 9. Dharma, 法自在, the ability of teaching Buddhism in all its possible aspects; and 10. Jñāna, 智自在, the power of understanding whereby he reveals in every thought of his the Tathagata's wonderful powers and perfect serenity (abhaya) leading to the realisation of the Bodhi, Vastu, 119, 274, 305 f, 306, 本有, 妙物, 事, 事物, fact, event, reality. Vastu is a flexible term, generally having 事 for it, but its variations are frequently met with For example, for vidyate tathatāvastu (147—6), T'ang has 有異如妙物, Wei 如其本有, and Sung 有事悉如如. Chtravastutva(108—8) is rendered 種種事物 in T'ang and 種種法體 in Wei; and na vastu nāvastu (108—9) is 非即是物, 亦非非物(T) Broadly speaking, however, vastu (事) means a particular object discriminated by the mind, but it may also designate ultimate reality conceived as an object of transcendental intuition.

Vastuprativikalpajñāna, 189 ff, 336, 事分別說, 1 e. empirical mind or consciousness as the faculty of discriminating particular objects.

Vāksamatā, 351, 語平等, the sameness of all the Tathagatas as regards their power of commanding sounds and languages.

Vāgaksharasamyogavikalpa, 108, (云何為語), 謂言字妄想和合(S), "false discrimination in union with [i.e. as expressed in] words and syllables"

Vāgvikalpabuddhigocara, 163n, 言語分別智慧, Paramārthas tu mahāmate āryajñānapratyātmagatigamyo na vāgvikalpabuddhigocaraḥ tena vikalpo nodbhāvayati para-

mārtham (87—12, 13) 第一義者是聖智自內證境, 非言語分別不能顯示(T) Sung mainly agrees with T'ang, but Wei as in other cases widely diverges 第一義者, 聖智內證, 非言語法是境界, 以言語能了被境界(W) "The ultimate truth points to the realisation of supreme wisdom in the inmost consciousness, and does not belong to the realm of words and discriminative intellect, thus discrimination fails to reveal the ultimate truth" But the lamp of words is useful to illuminate the passage to final enlightenment Vāgvikalparutapradīpena bodhisattvā vāgvikalparahitāh svapratyātmāryagatim anupravišanti (155—11), 109, 普薩因語言意入離言說自證境界(T)

Vāsanā, 98, 108, 119, 121, 128, 133, 152, 167, 176, 178 f, 183 ff, 199, 201, 206, 208, 習氣, 漢智, perfuming impression, memory, habit-energy, Vāsanāvīja, 189, 蒸智種子, memory-seed Every act, mental and physical, leaves its seeds behind, which is planted in the Ālaya for future germination under favourable conditions. In the Vijnaptimātra school of Asanga and Vasubandhu, this notion plays an important rôle

Vikalpa, 26, 72, 96, 108n, 155 ft, 200, 201n, 274, 分別, (false) In the Lankāvatāra discrimination stands discrimination contrasted to intuitive understanding which goes beyond In ordinary worldly life, discrimination (avikalya) Vikalpa, if properly dealt with, works to produce good effects, but it is unable to penetrate into the depths of consciousness, where the ultimate truth lies hidden awaken this from a deep slumber Vikalpa must be aban-Hence the Lanka's strong arguments against it The following are regarded as synonyms of Vikalpa, by which it is meant that they are all productions of dis-Ayur ushmatha vijnanam alayo jivitenerimination drīyam, manaš ca manovijnānam vikalpasya višeshanam (323-2,3),252 漆(命W) 及於緩離,阿賴(梨,W) 耶命

根, 意及與意識。皆分別異名(T).

Vikalpapratyaya, 346, 分別緣, conditions of discrimination; "prapanca, 84, 分別戲論, discrimination and futile reasoning; "mātra, 281, 唯分別; "mātrain tribhavam (bāhyam ārtham na vidyate, 186—16), 281n, 三有唯分別(外境悉無有), "the triple world is no more than [the product of] discrimination, there is no such thing as an external world"; "lakshanagrāhābhinivesaprashṭhāpikā (-buddhi), 27n, 取相分別執着智, which makes one cling to signs of individuality and work out false discrimination. This Buddhi is contrasted to the Pravicaya (觀察智). (Nirābhāsa-) vikalpaviviktadharma, 277, 無所有妄想寂滅法, truth which is imageless and detached from discrimination. See also Viviktadharma, 寂滅之法, the solitary, the eternally serene.

Vikrīdita, 66, 遊戲, literally, sportive. This is an important conception describing the life of a Bodhisattva, which is free from every form of constraint and restraint. It is like that of the fowls of the air and the lilies of the field, and yet there is in him a great compassionate heart functioning all the time freely and self-sufficiently. =Lalita

Vicārāparapraņeya, svapratyātmabuddhyā (133—11), 273, (自覺)觀察不由於他(S), to examine with one's own intelligence, not depending upon another

Vicikitsä, 359, 疑, doubt

Vicitratva, or vicitratā, 160, 272, 種種, multiplicity, manifoldness, multitudinousness.

Viciyate, 190, 250, to divide, to put in order; but the Chinese translators read "to accumulate extensively." Manasā ca viciyate (46—17). 意能废積集(T); 意名废採集(S); 意能 觀集境(W). On p. 302 we have "jñānena ca viciyate," 智於中分別(W); and on p 158 "jñānena vidhīyate," 不 採集為智(S); 智能了分別(W); 觀察法為智(T). See also Vidhīyate and Cittena cīyate karma

Vijānāti, 251, to distinguish, to recognise. Vijnānena vijānāti drišyain kalpeti pañcabhih (46—18), 了別故名識 對現境說五 (T); 諸誠誠所識, 現等塊設五(S); 藏能了所識, 五誠現分別(W). "Cognition goes on by the Vijñāna, whereas the discrimination of what is presented [as an external world] is done by the five [Vijñānas]"

Vijnapti. 181, 279, 280, 282, representation translated in the Chinese texts 1 20 or 20 na svabhavo na vijnaptir na vastu na ca alayah (167—16), 無自性無 设,無事無依處(T); —— 無相賴(S), 無自體無識, 無阿 梨耶識 (W) 2. 假名, 設言数, 施設名, nimittam vastu vijnaptim manovispandıtam ca tat (168-9), 相事設言数 意亂極震掉(S):相事及假名,心意所受用(W):假名諧事 相,動亂於心識(T) Vijnaptimātravyavasthānam (169—5), 是施設量建立 (S): 境界唯是假名 (T), 善知唯是內心 (? W deviates greatly and is hard to get at the original). 3. 表示, (T), Cittam vikalpo vijňaptir mano vijňanam eva ea (323-17), 心意及與證, 分別與表示(T), 心分別及證, 意及於意識 (W). 4. 假施設, lokam vijnaptimātram ("Sagāthakam" 44), 如是諸世間, 唯有假施設(T), 但心 如是見(W suggests a different text) 5 Vijnapti appears in other connections where the Chinese point to ceratin Vijnaptimätram tribhavam ("Sagāthadiscrepancies kam" 77), 三界唯是心 (T, W) Param ālayavijnānam vijnaptir ālayam punah ("Sagāthakam" 59), 顯示阿賴 耶, 殊勝之藏識(T), 阿賴耶本識, 意及於意識(W) Tarkavijnaptīvarjītam (Sagā 28), 離於妄計度 (T), 離於諸覺觀 Dehah pratishthā bhogas ca grāhyavijnaptayas trayah, manodgrahavijnaptıvıkalpo grahakas trayah (Sa v. 72). 身套及所住, 此三為所取, 意取及分別, 此三為能取 (T). W has nothing corresponding to this, while T omits vijfiapti; but the body, property, and abode, Manas, holding-on, and discrimination—these are evidently vijficptis, i e ideas or representations Vijnaptimātra, 181, 239n, 278 ff, 唯識 or 假施設, ideas only. *vyavasthānam (164 —5), 181, 281n, 境界唯是假名 (T). Vijnaptidvayavarnta. 360. 遺離於二取(T, 数 S), free from dualistic recognition Dyaram hi paramarthasya vijuaptidvayavariitam. yänatrayavyavasthänam niräbhäse kutah (65-13, 14). 第一義法門, 遠離於二取(数), 住於無境界(無所有), 何建 立三乘(T,S), —— 建立於三乘,為住寂静處(W), Wer differs greatly in the translation of the second half verse, but Sung and Wei agree in having # for what corresponds to vijnapti I take viiñapti as meaning in this case "comprehension," ie "cognition" Vijnaptivishaya, 189, field of representations Atha canvonväbhinnalakshanasahitä pravartante virnaptivishavaparicchede (44-18) This is one of the difficult sentences as it is seen from the various renderings given to it 俱時 而起。無差別相, 各了自境(T), 而彼各各壤相俱轉, 分別 境界分段差別(S), the sense of which is hard to make out, 而彼各各不異相,俱現分別境界(W) Evidently, W and S have 分别 for visitants here

Vijnāna, 42, 66, 67, 154, 169, 171 ff, 175n, 182 ff, 融, cognition, discrimination, consciousness, but as any one of these does not cover the whole sense contained in Vijnāna, the term has been left untranslated in this book, Vijnānamātra, 181, 239n, 276 f, 278, =vijnāptimātra, but in this case vijnāna may better be understood in the sense of knowledge dealing with the relative aspect of existence Vijnānamātram will then mean that existence is merely relative; Vijnānataranga, 74, 188, 議後, waves of mentation

Vijñāna, 272, the relative knowledge. This is also rendered to by all the Chinese translators even when it is used as in the present case in contradistinction to jūāna in purely intellectual sense. Jūāna is transcendental knowledge dealing with such subjects as immortality, non-relativity, the unattained, etc, whereas Vijūāna is attached to duality of things.

Vitatham, 266, 虚妄(T), 不如實(S), 額倒(W), falsehood.

Tatra vitatham iti mahāmate na tathā yathā bhāvasva-bhāvaḥ kalpyate nāpyanyathā (199—17) 頭倒者如心分別,此法如是如是,而彼法不如是如是(W);不如實者不爾如性自性,妄想亦不異(S); 虛妄者不如法性起頭倒見(T).

Vitarka, 201n, 計度, 蹬度, speculation, supposition. In the Abhidharmakośa, it is generally translated as & (reflection) and found coupled with vicāra (何 investigation) Tathāgatā na vitarkayanti na vyavacārayanti (240-7). 如來無覺無觀 (T, W); 如來 (常定故) 亦無慮亦無象 (S) Vitarkadarsana, 186 Ayam tathagatagarbhalayavijnanagocarah sarvaśrāvakapratyekabuddhatīrthyavitarkadarśanānām prakritiparišuddho 'pi sannašuddha ivāgantukleśopaklishtatayā....(222—14f) 此如來意意證. 一切聲聞 緣登心想所見。雖自性淨,客座所覆故禮見不淨(S), 此如 來心阿梨耶證如來設證境界,一切聲聞辟支佛證外道皆不 能分别,何以故,以如來發是清淨相,客塵煩惱,垢染不淨 (W); 此如來凝藏證, 本性清淨, 客逸所染, 而爲不淨, 一 切二乘及諸外道證度起見,不能現證(T). "This realm of the Tathagatagarbha which is [another name for] the Alayavıjuana, is beyond the views based on the imagination of the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas and philosophers; although its original nature is pure, it loses this purity by being contaminated as it were by external dirt "

Vidūsha, 195, jester; Mano vidūshasādriśam (224—2), 黄如和伎者 (T)

Vidhiyate, 250, 觀察 (fT), 了分別 (W), 不採集 (fS), to arrange.

Vināyaka, 354, 唐導者 (T),廣導者 (S), 將者 (W), remover of obstacles.

Viparyāsa, 118, 274, 類倒, confusion, perversion. Bhrāntur āryāṇām viparyāsāviparyāsavarjītā (106—14, 15) 諸聖於此惡亂,不起類倒覺,非不顯倒覺(S); 諸聖人迷惑法中,不生類倒心,亦不生實心(W); 諸聖者於妄法中,不起類

- 倒非頭倒覺(T). "To the wise, [what is to be ordinarily regarded as] an error, [that is, this world of particulars] appears neither perverted nor unperverted."
- Vipāka.
 206, 208, 251, 314, 322 f, 成就, 異然, maturing, ripening.
 Vipākaja(-buddha). 142, 325, 報生係; Vipākabuddha, 316, 324, 334, (異熟條?) 報係; Vipākasthabuddha, 142, 324, 報(住) 佛. (異熟住係?).
- Vibhāvana, 200, 观察 (T), 善分別 (S), 誊知(W). penetrating comprehension. Svacittadriśyavibhāvanatayā (79—18), 觀察自心所現故 (T), "by thoroughly comprehending that the world is the manifestation of one's own mind."
- Vimoksha, 39, 143, 351, 解脱, emancipation; "mukha, 解脱門, emancipation-entrance; "traya, 138, 166n, 362, 363, 三解脱, the three emancipations, which are: 1. Śūnyatā (李 emptiness), 2 Animitta (無相, having no-signs), and 3. Apraņihita (無額, desirelessness); they are also called the three Samādhis.
- Vivarjana, 200, 遠離, free from. Utpādasthitibhangadrishtīvivarjanatayā (80—1), 遠離生性減見故"by freeing oneself from the view [that is based upon the reality] of birth, abiding, and disappearance."
- Vivikta, 245, 260, 266, 宏波(T), 宏静(S, W), disjoined, solitary, alone, eternally serene; "dharma, 221, 226, 宏波之法, that which is alone, the truth solitary. Na...paramārthe kramo na kramānusandhir nirābhāsavikalpaviviktadharmopadeśāt (215—7, 8). 第一姜中亦無大第,無大第行,諸法寂静亦如歷空(W); 於第一姜無大第相滾託,無所有妄思叔法(S);第一姜中, 無有大第, 亦相氮, 這一切境界分別, 此則名寂滅之法(T). Viviktadharmamatibuddhi, 221, 寂滅楚(T), 寂滅智慧是(S); 知覺諧法寂静(W).
- Vivecya, 162, 現象 (reality) discerned (from falsehood).
- Visuddhi, 38, 清淨, purity, or purification.
- Vishaya, 171, 174, 180, 196, 264, 272, 282, 境界, individuation. external world, world of particulars; generally distinguishable from artha, which means each particular sense-

field or a particular sense-object; "pavana, 67, 188, 190, 垃圾風, wind of objectivity; "paricchedalakshana, 110, 差別投相, the aspect of individuation

Visamyoga, 323, 離緊果, release from bondage, one of the five "fruits" (phala), q.v.

Vîrya, 366 f, 精進 energy, one of the six virtues of perfection (pāramstā)

Vritti, 174, 轉, evolution, differentiation.

Varpākika Buddha, 23, 325, 報佛.

Vyavasthānam, 175, 270,建立, construction, 安立, a resting abode Cittamātram vyavasthānam kudrishtyā na prasīdati (54—16), 心量安立處。惡見所不樂(S),唯心所安心,惡見者不信(T);但心安住處。惡見不能淨(W),說但是於心,邪見不能淨(W in the "Sagāthakam", 439) See also under Vijāaptimātravyavasthānam.

Vyavahāra, 163, 世俗, the worldly way of thinking Na cotpādyam na cotpannah pratyayo 'pi na kim ca na, samvidyante kvacit kecid vyavahāras tu kathyate (85—8,9). 無能生所生, 亦復無因緣, 但隨世俗故, 而說有生滅(工), 非已生當生, 亦復無因緣, 一切無所有, 斯皆無言說(S), 如是等諸法, 自體是空無, 亦無有住處, 為世間說有(W) "Nothing is produced, nothing is producing, and even causality is nowhere there exists nothing whatever even causality is nowhere, there exists nothing whatever anywhere, but in conformity to our worldly experience, it is talked of [them as if things were really existent] "

Vyāsa, 354, 毗耶娑(W), a celebrated sage.

Vyāvrītti, 253, 轉依, revulsion, turning-over Manovijāānavyāvrīttam cittam kālushyavarjītam (296—11), 意識岩轉 依心則難濁亂 (T)

Sakra, 353, 帝釋天.

Samathasukha, 78, 者摩多樂, the blass of tranquillisation Samatha is the practical art of keeping the mind serene and undisturbed by evil thoughts and passions, while Vipasyana (親, or 距鉢合那) is meditation fixing one's mind upon a definite subject or proposition. When the mind is tranquillised by Samatha, it is ready for intellectual activity of the higher sort. The Lankavatara is not, however, quite explicit on this point as is The Awakening of Faith in the Mahayana.

Sarīra. 92, 199, 319, 353, 舍利, 體, 身; Sarīravat, 319, 如舍利, Sarīra-like; solid, indestructible substance Ato jñānātmakās tathāgatā jñānaśrīrāh (20—2, 3) 是故如來以智為體, 以智為身(T); 如來為智身智體(W). Śarīravatām hi mahāmate nāśo bhavati, nāśarīravatām dharmaś cāśarīrah (232—14-16) For this, Sung has 大慧,身法者有壞,如來法身非是身法; Wei:大慧,一切有身皆是無常磨滅之法,非無身故,諸佛如來, 唯法身故, T'ang·大慧, 以有身故. 而有滅壞, 法身無身故無減壞 While all these three Chinese translations have "dharmakāya" (法身), the Sanskrit has only "dharma" "Those that have the [material] body are subject to annihilation, but not those that have no body, and the Dharma has no body"

Sasavishāna, 302n, 更角, hare's horns This generally goes in pair with kūrmai opa, 龜毛, the tortoise's hair. One of the favourite comparisons used by Buddhist scholars who by this attempt to illustrate the nature of existence as both real and unreal

Santi, 121, 寂静,寂诚, tranquillity.

Sāśvata, 119, 123n, 常, opposed to uccheda (斷), eternal, constant, Śāśvata-uccheda, 116, 常斷. Śāśvatocchedavarjaś ca lokeh (22—10), 世間遠離於斷常(T) Śāśvatavāda, 120,常見, the philosophical school that upholds the eternity of existence as it is.

Šīla, 366 f, 形, morality, one of the six Pāramitās

Silavrataparāmarša, 359, 武禁取, taking hold of the merit accruing from the observance of the rules of morality. One of the three knots (三結, saṃyoga) tying up the followers of the two Yānas See also Satkāyadrishi; and Vieikitsā.

Śuka, 354, 戌迦, one of the Buddha's epithets; nothing corresponding to this in Sung and Wei Also the name of Rāvana's minister. 瑜迦, 68.

Śuddhisatyātman, 254, real immaculate ego

Sūnya, or śūnyata, 38, 41, 43, 74, 94n, 101, 115, 116, 118, 123n, 126n, 128, 141, 166, 167n, 168, 170, 239, 259, 286, 354. 延若多, 本, empty, emptiness, void Mahayana Buddhism is popularly identified with Sünyatā philosophy. this is right as far as it concerns the denial of the substance theory as held by the realistic schools of Buddhism, but we must remember that the Mahayana has its positive side which always goes along with its doctrine of Emptiness The positive side is known as the doctrine of Suchness or The Lankavatara is always careful Thusness (tathatā) to balance Sunyatā with Tathatā, or to insist that when the world is viewed as śūnya, empty, it is grasped in its Naturally, such a doctrine as this goes beyond the logical survey based on our discursive understanding as it belongs to the realm of intuition, which is, to use the Lankā terminology, the realisation of supreme wisdom in Iha śāriputra rūpam śūnyatā, the immost consciousness śünyataıva rūpam, rūpān na prithak śünyatā, śünyatāyā na prithag rūpam, yad rūpam sā śūnyatā, yā śūnyatā tad rūpam (Prajñāpāramītāhrīdaya), 338n 舍利子。(色是空空 是色) 色不異空, 空不異色, 色卽是空, 空卽是色 () Śārīputra, this phenomenal world (or form) is emptiness, and emptiness is truly the phenomenal world. Emptiness is not different from the phenomenal world, the phenomenal What is the world is not different from emptiness phenomenal world that is emptiness, what is emptiness that is the phenomenal world

Śūnyatānutpādanihsvabhāvādvaya, 291 f, 冬, 無生, 無自性, 無二 (T), emptiness, no-birth, no-self-substance, no-duality. Deśayatu bhagavāñ chūnyatānutpādādvayanihsvabhāvalakshanań sarvadharmānāṁ yena śūnyatānutpādad-vayamhsvabhāvalakshaņāvabodhenāham cānye ca bodhisattvā mahāsattvā nāstyastivikalpavarjitāh kshipram anuttarām samyaksambodhim abhisambudhyeram (73—12-16). 國為我說一切空無生無二無自性相,我及諸菩薩悟此相故,離有無分別,疾得阿耨多羅三藐三菩提(T). "Pray tell us about the aspect of existence in which things are said to be empty, unborn, non-dual, and without self-substance; when I and other Bodhisattva-mahāsattvas have a thorough understanding as regards this aspect of existence we shall quickly come to the realisation of the supreme enlightenment"

Śrāvakayāna, 360, 學聞乘, "class of hearers," generally referring to the Buddhists not belonging to the Mahayana. Śrīvatsa, 76, 德字(卐), that is, swastika Śrotravijāna, 178, 耳識, auditory sense.

Samvriti(-kāya), 311, 應身(1). The body assumed by the Buddha for the benefit of the masses.

Samvrit, or Samvritisatya, 160, 163 f, 311, 世俗, 世諦(W), 俗諦, relative, worldly knowledge, or truth Samvritih paramārthaś ca tritīyam nāstihetukam, kalpitam samvritir hy uktā tae chedād āryagocaram (131—2, 3), 世俗第一義第三無因生, 妄計是世俗, 斷則聖瓊界(T). Sarvam vidyate samvrityām paramārthe na vidyate, dharmānām nihsvabhāvatvam paramārthe 'pi drišyate, upalabdhimisvabhāve samvritis tena ucyate (280—8-10). 世諦一切有,第一義則無。諸法無性性,說為第一義。於無自性中,而有物起者(²), 是名爲俗語(T). "According to relative truth all things exist, but in absolute truth nothing is; in absolute truth one sees that all things are devoid of selfnature, there is, however, a perception where there is no self-nature, hence relative truth."

Samvrityā deśanā, 38, 160, 隨俗說, relative teaching.—katham (25—4, 33—5). 云何隨俗說 (T). See also Vyovahāra

Samsakta, 160, 計著, tied Angulyagram yathā bālo na grihņanti mišākaram, tathā hy aksharasamsaktās tattvam na vetti māmakam (223—224) 如恐見指月,觀指不觀月, 計著文字者, 不見我真實(T).

Samsāra, 34, 97, 100, 116, 128, 129, 290, 312, 346, 生死, birth-and-death. Samsāranirvāņasamatā (42—7) 生死涅槃子等 "The sameness of birth-and-death and Nirvana" is one of the spiritual attainments of the Bodhisattva, who, however, practises "effortless" deeds and "skilful meins" born of a great compassionate heart

Samskrita, 260, 279 有為 distinguished from 無為, asamskrita. Dharmas are grouped under the two heads, and those belonging to the first (samskrita) are seventy-two and those of the second are three according to the Abhidharmakośa, whereas the Vijñaptimātra or Yogācāra school has ninety-four Samskrita-dharmas and six Asamskrita. It is not easy to give one English equivalent for samskrita, it means anything that does something and productive of some effect, anything that can be brought under the law of causation and mutual dependence 有為 "doing something," (yu-wei) is a very good Chinese substitute for samskrita and 無為, "doing nothing," (wu-wei) for asamskrita

Samsthana, 241, 307, 形, 處, form, position

Sakridāgāmin, 368, 斯陀含, 一來, one who comes back once more to this earthly life before he is fully enlightened, the second of the four ascetic fruits (phala) See also under Anā āmin

Sakridāgāmiphala, 148, 斯陀含果, 一來果, the state of coming back once more

Samketa. 156, 269, 假名, sign, provisionary symbol Nāmasamjñāsamketābhinivešena mahāmate bālāšcittam anusaranti (225—6,7) 凡悉不知名是假立,心隨流動(T), 悉夫計著俗數名相, 隨心流散(S), 一切凡夫計著名相, 隨順生法(W) "As they are attached to names, mages, and

- signs, Mahāmati, the ignorant allow their minds to wander away.''
- Sangha, 364, ffff, brotherhood, one of the three treasures (raina): Buddha, Dharma, and Sangha.
- Saincodana, 151, 令覺知 (W), inspiring, wakening. Apramāṇaḥ sattvaparipākasaineodanam upādāya (232—6), 欲為 成熟無量条生 (T); 為化条生令受知故(W); Pürvakuśalamūlasaineoditasya (9—12, 13). 往昔所種書根力故 (T); 以過去世書根力故 (W). Both T and W here have no corresponding words for saincodana, 開發.
- Saminanirodha, 368, 透波, cessation of thought.
- Samdha, 213,答意, 答語, secret meaning; Samdhi(-artha), sarvadharma*, 349, 一切法深密義, the secret meaning of existence.
- Satkāyadṛishṭi, 359, 身見, thought of an ego, one of the "Three Knots" (三結, trīṇi saṅyojanāni). There are two ways in which one comes to conceive the real existence of an ego: the one is subjective imagination and the other the objective conception of relativity.
- Sattva, 130, 有情, 未生, being, sentient being.
- Satya, 114, 168, 諦, truth; Satyatā, 212, 275, 354, 諦性, truth, true-ness.
- Sadasat, 35, 112, 115, 117, 118, 121, 122, 133, 134, 139, 201, 215, 229, 有無, being and non-being.
- Saddharma, 154, 正法, true teaching, right doctrine. Saddharmaparigrahācca mahāmate buddhavanisasyānupacchedaḥ krito bhavati (195—13, 14). 岩能概受正法則不斷的種(T). "When the right doctrine is comprehended, Mahāmati, there will be no discontinuation of the Buddhafamily."
- Santati, 139, 相義, continuity. Here (79—11) it is evidently one of the views held by the philosophers. In other places the "triple continuity" (trisamtati) is referred to, although its content is not known as far as the Lankävatära is concerned. See pp. 9—18 and 146—17.

Samtrāsamāpta, 286, 激情, terror-inspiring

Samtrāsīta, 284, 怖 terrified Bālānām nairātmyasamtrāsapadavivarjītārtham (78—9), 為令為夫難無我怖(T), 為斷 為夫提無我句故(S), 為諸一切恐癡凡夫, 閱說無我生於意 怖(W) "In order to dispel the feeling of fright which is cherished by the ignorant as they listen to the doctrine of non-ego"

Samatā, 99, 310, 346, 354, 平等, sameness, Samatājūāna, 273, 360, 平等者, the knowledge that grasps the principle of sameness.

Samatikram, 224,超過, going beyond

Samādhi, 39, 66, 85, 121, 132, 140, 148, 三昧, 定. Cittam samādhīyate (58—8) 心得寂止 (8),心住一致(T), 得心三昧(W), Samādhimada, 360, 三昧酒, liquor of samādhi, Samādhisukha, 75, 77, 78, 80, 三昧樂, the bliss arising from a concentrated state of mind Those who have not yet been able to rise to the rank of Bodhisattvahood are too deeply drunk with the beatitude of a samādhi, forgetful of the outside world where so many unenlightened ones are waiting for emancipation This class of self-complacent Buddhists is severely indicted by followers of the Mahayana, Samādhisukhasamāpattimanomayakāya, 210,三昧樂正受意生身, one of the three will-bodies (manomayakāya).

Samāpatti, 39, 74, 75, 140, 150, 正受, 等待, 定, 三摩鉢底, 三摩鈸提 Samāpatti, Samādhi, and Dhyāna are synonymously used in all the sutras except that each has its own usage and shade of meaning They designate a concentrated state of mind in which the subject is completely identified with the object of meditation Psychologically, it is a state of consciousness in perfect equilibrium, 16 "tranquillised"; Samāpattisukha, 356, 正受樂, 三味樂

Samāropa, 157, 165, 180, 247, 建立, assertion, or theory-making. Samāropa stands against Apavāda (refutation), that is, as 建立 versus 誹謗. Samāropa and Apavāda on p. 226—10 are however rendered by Śikshānanda (T'ang) as 报益(loss and gain)—a unique instance in this translation. Samāropāpavādāntadvayakudrishtivivarjitam.... 遠離报益二邊惡見(T); 以離有無邪見故(W); 捨離二見建立及誹謗(S).

Samānārthatā, 365, 同事, engaging in the same work. This is one of the four sympathetic deeds known as Catvārisangrahavastūm (四張法), which are: 1. dāna, 布施scharity, 2. priyavacana, 受語, kindly talk; 3. arthacaryā, 利行, useful deeds, and 4 samānārthatā, 同事, engaging in the same work.

Samāhita, 174, 定, collected state of mind

Sambandhavikalpa, 111 f, 相屬分別, discrimination as to dependence, one of the twelve Vikalpas.

Sambodhi, 104, 127, 曼, 正覺, enlightenment.

Sambhāra, 227, 361, 賽程, moral provisions, preparatory material

Sambhogakāya, 308 ff, 347, 142, 應身, Body of Recompense; Sambhogabuddha, 328, 報身, 受用身, Recompense-Buddha.

Samyagjñā, or Samyagjñāna, 26 ff, 155 ff, 278, 正智, right knowledge, one of the five Dharmas.

Sarvakalpanāvīrahitam, 118, 遠離一切諸分別, being free from all discrimination.

Sarvajña, 354, 一切智, all-knowing.

Sarvadharma, 123n, 168, 一切法, 諸法, all things, existence in general, the world; "tathatā, 342, 諸法如, 一切法具如, the thusness of all things; "nirabhilāpya(-śūnyatā), 288, 一切法不可說空, emptiness as the unnamability of existence, one of the seven Emptinesses, "aparigrihīta. 283, 於一切法無強受定 (Hsūan-chuang), a samādhi, "śūnyatā, 154, 一切法空the emptiness of all things; Sarvadharmānām śūnyatā-anutpāda-advaya-nihsvabhāvalakshana, 215, 一切法空無生,無二,無自性相, the aspect of existence in which

all things are to be regarded as empty, unborn, non-dual, and without self-substance, Sarvadharmānām anutpāda, 125, 286, 300 一切法不生, all things are unborn, Sarvadharmā nirātmānah, 135, 一切法無我, all things are egoless, Sarvadharmānupādāna, 283, 於一切法無執取定 (Hsuan-chuang), a samādhi, Sarvadharmā bhangotpādavarnītah (199—14, 15), 291, 一切諸法(亦爾), 離於生滅 (丁), =saīvabhāvā anutpannā nīruddhāh (198—1), 一切諸法不生不說 (丁), Sarvadharmavašavartīn, 77, (世季)於法自在(丁), master of all the world

Sarvapramāna (-indriyavinivrittah, 242—9), 146, (難) 諸 (根) 弘 (T), beyond all senses and logical measurements Sarvabhāva. 124, 155, 200n, 諸法, same as Sarvadharma, both being used indiscriminately in the Lankāvatāra

Sarvabhūtātmabhūta (-sya kripātmanah sarvam māmsam abhakshyam bodhisattvasya 248—15 f), 367, 菩薩慈念一切杂生獨如已身.. 不應食肉(T) "The Bodhisattva who legards all beings as himself ought not to eat meat"

Sarvābhogavigata, 224, 捨一切功用行 (Śikshānanda), discarding all effortful works

Sarvarūpāvabhāsam hī yadā cittam pravartate (276—12), 241, 杂色由心起 (T), 現話一切色,心法如是生 (W)

Sahāloka, 353, 娑婆世界, a world of endurance, that is, this world

Sādhumatī. 78, 善悲地, one of the Dasabhūmi (十地, ten stages of Bodhisattvaship)

Sāmānyalakshana, 139, 其相, generality, or those marks that are common to all things conditioned, such as impermanence, pain, emptiness, and egolessness

Siddhānta, 40, 109, 349, 350, 宗, proposition, intuitive truth, self-relisation Drishtāntahetubhir yuktah siddhānto deśanā katham (30—11) 云何因醫驗, 相應成悉複(T), 譬喻因相應, 力說法云何(W), 譬因成悉被(S) The Lankāvatāra takes special care to make a sharp distinction between rufa (letter) and artha (meaning), p 154, and between desang (teaching) and siddhanta (realisation), pp 148, 172, for what comes through the letter and teaching does not in truth belong to one's self, and it is only that which comes out of one's own mind that destroys the fetters So we read Nayo hi dvividho mahyam siddhanto deśanā ca vai, deśemi yā(?) bālānām siddhāntam yoginām aham (172-17, 18), 我說二種法, 言教及如實, 教法示凡 夫, 管盒修行者(T). "I teach the twofold truth realisation and teaching I teach the ignorant, realisation is for those who discipline themselves [in Buddhism]." Siddhäntas ca nayas cāpi pratyātmasāsanam ca vai, ye paśvanti vibhāgajñā na te tarkavašam gatah (149-2.3). 宗趣與言說。自證及致法,若能善知見,不隨他妄解 (T) "Self-realisation and philosophy, inner perception and doctrinal teaching—those who see into their differences and understand well will not be influenced by mere speculation" Cf the Abhidharmakośa, Chapter VIII, Louis de la Vallée Poussin's French translation, p 218 f. where the Good Law of the Master is said to be of twofold nature · āgama, doctrinal teaching, and adhigama, realisation

Siddhi, 160, 成就, valid, perfected

Sugata, 68, 善逝, en epithet of the Buddha.

Sumeru, 77, 須彌山, a mythical mountain

Sūkshmamatı, 74、妙慧(T), exquisite knowledge

Sthit, 182, 佳, abiding, generally in this combination, utpādasthitimrodka (or bangha), 生性減, birth-abiding-disappearance

Srotaāpanna, 368, 須陀洹(預流), he who has entered the first of the four ascetic fruits See under Anāgāmm

Srotaāpattiphala, 148, 須陀渲果, the state of entering upon the stream

Skandha, 39, 189, 347, 350, 陰, 蘊, aggregate According to Buddhist philosophy, each individual existence is composed of the five elements or aggregates, which are . 1.

r ūpa, 色, material element, 2 vedanā, 受, sensation: 3. samjūā, 抵, perception or ideation, 4 samskāra, 行, formative principle, and 5 vijnana, it, consciousness. Skandhatā, 242, 擔性, the substance of a Skandha, that which makes the Skandha what it is Skandhanam skandhata tadvat pramaptyā na tu dravyatah (153-11) 諸蘊蘊假名, 亦告無官事(T). Skandha-dhātu-āyatana, 81, 98, 143, 167. 168, 194, 218, 259, 262, 321, 塩, 界, 處 The combination sums up the individual and his world The Skandhas are the constituents of an individual personality as mind and body, whereas the Dhatus and Ayatanas make up the objective world where the six Vijuanas take in each its own field of perception The eighteen Dhatus (fields or spheres) and the twelve Ayatanas (seats or abodes) are distinguished, but they are rather two different ways of classifying the same objects The twelve Ayatanas are inner and outer The mner ones are 1 cakshurāyatana, 眼處, 2 śrotra°, 耳處 3 ghrāna° 弘彪, 4 yihva° 舌處, 5 kāya° 身處, and 6 2 śabda* 母處, 3. gandha* 香處, 4 rasa* 味處, 5 sparshtavya°, 陶處, and 6 dharma° 法處. The eighteen Dhātus are the following six added to the twelve Ayatanas 1 cakshurvijfiānadhātu, 眼識界, 2 śrotravijfiāna°, 耳識界,3 ghrāṇavījāāna° 乌藏界,4 jīhvavījāāna°,舌識 界, 5. kāyamīnāna°, 身識界, and 6 manovīnāna°, 意識界. Skandhebhyo nanyo nananyas tathagatah, (188-16), 186, "The Tathagata is neither 如來與蘊非異非不異 (T) different noi not-different from the Skandhas "

Svacitta, 272, 自心, self-mind. (Cittamanomanovijfiānamātram traidhātukam samanupaśyati, ātmātmīyavigatam svacittavikalpodbhavam) na ca bāhyabhāvalakshanavaieitryapatitam anyatra svacittam eva (212—7), 272, 菩薩摩訶薩, 見於三界但是自心, 心意意識離我我所法, 唯是自心分別, 不墮外法穩種諸相(W), 菩薩摩訶薩觀三界, 心意意識雖我, 心意意識難, 就我, 而意外法穩種諸相(W), 菩薩摩訶薩觀三界, 心意意識是, 離我我所, 自妄想修墮外性種種相(S), 觀察三界一

切唯是心意意識自分別起離我我所,不見外法種種諧相(T). "The Bodhısattva-mahāsattva sees that the triple world is no more than [the creation of] the citta, manas, and manovijnana, that it is brought forth by falsely discriminating one's own mind, that there are no signs of an external world where the principle of multiplicity rules, and [finally] that it is just one's own mind " Svacittamätram traidhātukam, 243, 三界唯是自心. "The triple world is no more than one's own mind " Svacittadrisya, 180, 自心所現。 manifestation of one's own mind Svacittadriśvadhārāviśuddhi, 179, 205 ff. 淨自心現流 Katham bhagayan syacittadrisyadhārā visudhyati yugapat kramavrittyā vā (55 一4)、世章, 云何淨諸衆生自心現流、爲漸淨, 爲頓淨耶(T)。 Svacittadriśyamātra, 72, 179, 267, 唯自心所現, no other than the manifestation of one's own mind

Svaparınıdhānādhıshthāna, 140 Pürvabuddhasvapranidhānādhıshthānatah pravartate (50—6). 由諸佛自本願力所加持故, 而得生起 (T)

Svabuddhabuddhatā, 134, 139, 自覺性, the essence of Buddhahood. Deśayatu me bhagavāms tathāgato 'rhansamyaksambuddhah svabuddhabuddhatām yenāham cānye ca bodhisattvā mahāsattvās tathāgatasvakuśalā svamātmānam parāmś cāvabodhayeyuh (187—4-6) 世尊顯為我說, 如來應正等覺自覺性,今我及諸菩薩摩訶薩,而得善巧自悟悟他(T) "Bleased One, pray tell me about the nature of the mner enlightenment attained by the Tathagata, Arhat, Fully-enlightened One, whereby I and other Bodhisattvamahāsattvas may get properly enlightened not only for ourselves but for others"

Svabuddhi, 108, 304, 自智. Svabuddhyā vāsanāśrayaparāvrittipūrvakaḥ (155—2) 自智境界, 轉諾智氣(T). "By means of his own intelligence the Bodhisattva causes a revolution in his inmost abode where his former memory is stored."

Svabhāva, 73, 101, 111, and Ātman, 166, 268, 288, 自性,體性,

The term is used in the Lankavatara at least in two senses When it means self-substance making up the substratum of the individual being, it is synonymous with Atman and This may be seen from such phrases as "sya-Pudgala bhāvasūnyatā," 自性生, or "nihsvabhāvāh," 一切法無自 It also means the reason or suchness of existence, in which case it is identical with Tathata. Svabhavo 'nupalabdhih tathatālakshanam (228—13), 自性不可得,是如如 相(T) "The self-nature unattamable is the mark of suchness "Further. svabhāva is used in the sense of "nature" or "what makes up the being of a thing" Rutam evartha iti rutasvabhāvāparījnānāt (193—16). 是人不了言音自性, 謂言卽淺 "It is owing to his not perfectly understanding the nature of words that he regards them as identical with the sense " Seven forms of Svabhava are enumerated, but as no explanation is given of them, it is impossible to know what they really signify (39-9-12) 1, samudayasvabhāva. 集自性. collection or aggregate: 2 bhāvasvabhāva. 性自性, being. existence. 3 lakshanasvabhāva. 相自性 sign, symbol, 4 mahābhūtasvabhāva, 大種自性, the elements. 5 hetusvabhāva. 因自性 cause, reason, 6 pratya-1/asvabhāva, 綠自性. condition, causation, and 7 nishpattisvabhava. 成自性, perfection As regards the three Svabhāvas, see below Svabhāvam ekam desem tarkavijňaptivarjitam (. svabhāvadvayavarntam, 267— 13, 14), 277 我唯說一性, 雜於妄計度, 自性無有二. 我說一實法, 離於諸覺觀 離二法體相(W) Svabhāvatraya or svabhāvalakshanatraya, 29 f, 66, 154, 157, 161, 168, 194, 211, etc. 三自性(相) Svabhāvadvaya 18 also mentioned (pp 99 f) as regards our attachment to words (abhilapa, 言說) and things (vastu. 諸法) when they are imagined as having the signs of self-nature or reality Generally, the two Svabhavas in the Lankavatara refer to the first two of the three Svabhāvas, which are 妄 野性, parikalpita, imagination, and 依他起性, paratantra, reality Svabhāvavıkalpa, 111 f, 自性分别 discrimination as regards self-nature; one of the twelve Vikalpas Svabhāvabuddha, 328, 自性佛, the Buddha as he is.

Svayam evādhīgatayāthātathyaviviktadharma, 277, 如實證 寂靜(T), 自得如實空法(S), 自身如實證法(W).

Svayambhuva, 354, 無師者 (T), 自覺者 (S), 自在者 (W), self-existing one as one of the Buddha's epithets

Svalakshana (=svabhāva), 135, 139, 首相, individuality, or individual marks which distinguish one class of beings from another; for instance, matter has its own characteristics as distinguished from mind, and mind from matter, and so on The following combinations are quite frequent, Svalakshanasāmānyalakshana, 116, 自相與其相, Svasāmānyalakshana, 168, 304, 140, 143, 158 f, 自其相

Svasiddhānta, 98, 100, 自悉檀, self-realisation. Bodhisattvena mahāsattvena svasiddhāntakušalena bhavitavyam (43—12, 13) 菩薩摩訶薩於自悉檀應善修學(T); 諧菩薩 摩訶薩修行自內法故(W)

Svahetulakshana, 303, 因自性, self-cause-character, that is, reality Vāgvikalpamātrain hi mahāmate śaśavishāṇain svahetulakshanābhāvat (61—7) (外道常不思議) 唯是分別, 但有言說、何故、彼因同於更角, 無自因相故(S). "It is no more than mere verbal discrimination, Mahāmati, it is the hare's horn, there are no real signs of selfhood"

Hasta, 292, 353, 手, hand.

Hetu, 40, 165, 192, 307, 323, 图, cause, antecedent, condition; reason, principle The combination, "hetupratyaya," meaning causation or causality, is frequently met with. Hetu and Pratyaya are really synonymous, though they are differently enumerated, that is, six Hetus and four Pratyayas In this case, Hetu is regarded as a more intimate and efficient agency of causation than a Pratyaya Other synonyms are kāraņa, mdāna, and nimitta. The six causes (hetu) are. 1 Kāranahetu, 能作因, the reason that makes the existence of anything possible, 2 Sahabhū°. 俱有因, the law of mutuality, that is, the state of being mutually conditioned, 3 Vipāla*, 異熟因, the law of retribution, or fruition: 4 Samprayulta*, 相屬因, the law of association. 5 Sarvatraga*. 和行因, the law of generality, which is applicable to certain mental qualities making the common ground for others; and 6 Sabhaga. 同類因, the law that like produces like The Lankavatara gives another group of six Hetus, pp 83 f· 1 Bhavishyaddhetu, 當有因, the possibility of anything becoming cause to others, 2 Sambandha*, 相区因, mutual dependence, 3 Lakshana*, 相因, uninterrupted continuity of signs; 4 Kārana°, 能作因, a causal agency that wields supreme power like a great king; 5 Vyanjana, 順了因, the condition in which things are manifested as if illumined by a light, and 6 Upeksha, 觀待因, the law of discontinuation

Hetuvikalpa, 111 f, 因分别, one of the twelve wrong discriminations.

Hetupratyaya, 122, 因緣, causation; also one of the four secondary causes which are 1 Hetupratyaya, 因緣, the general law of causation, 2. Samananta; a°, 大剪緣, (or 等無間緣), condition governing the succession of events, 3. Alambana°, 所緣緣, condition of becoming an object of cognition; and 4. Adhipati°, 增上緣, =Kāranahetu, the "supreme" condition.

INDEX

Akāśagarbha Bodhisattva, 自空歌 李隆、311. Akshobhya Buddha, 阿提佛, 309, 356. Akthobhya, Sutra of the Land of, A 取佛亞經. 356. Amalaka, 雅(阿)庭勒果, 106, 263 Amitābha, 阿彌陀佛, 23, 309, 332, 356. Amrs, 卷廷果, 207. Angulimāla, or Angulimātika Sūtra. 滑掌經, 5, 368 Apu (atom), 發度 or 極微, 139, 156, 187, 264, 270, 293 Āryamañjuárīmülakalpa, the, 聖文 装卸利银本機數、23 Asanga, 無著, 181, 239, 278, 308, Ashtasāhasrīkā-pramāpāramītā Sūtra, 八千级般若疑, 3, 95, 215, quoted 342ff. Ašoka garden, 45 5, 69, 71. Asura, 河佐西, 39. Aśvaghosha, 馬鳴, 10, 182, 282. Atom, see Anu Avalokitesvara, 製色費, 356, 365n Avatamsaka school, 華默宗, 6n, 55 Avatamsaka Sūtra, the, 攀戴径, 4, 6n, 8, 89, 95 f, 103 181, 223n, 224, Awakening of Faith in the Mahayāna, the, 大乘起價論, 182, 282, 334.

Baby, 109.
Barren woman's child, 石女之子 Chang-shno, 疑忱, 60.
Chia-chih-li, 加持力, 203.

(bandhyāputra), 72, 117, 134, 306. Bendall, Cecil, 125n, 223n, Bhaishayya guruva iduryaprabhāsatathāgata Sūtra, 菜蔬菜鸡光如来罐, Brographies of the High Prieste, (# 高信傳), 44, 45. Bodhicitta, on the Awakening of. 發菩提心論, 128n. Bodhidharma, 菩提達磨, 11, 44 ff, 46, 48, 50, 52, 59, 64, 89, 90, 102, 104, Bodhiruci, 菩提法支, 6, 6n, 7, 9n, 10, 48. Bodhisattva, and Nirvana, 218ff. Brahma, creator, 270, 342, 354. Bubble, 117, 268 Buddha-mind, 47. Buddhapratacanahridaya, the, 😩 醫心(經), 20. Buffaloes (mahisha), 150, Bull-king (wrshabha), 华王, 354. Burnouf, M. E., 125n. Bulsugoshin Ron, the, 佛體心論 44n.

Candle-light 167.
Catalogue of the Buddhist Literature of Great T'ang. 大唐內臭錄, 5.
Cataract, of the eye, 譽 (imura), 72, 120.
Ceylon, 8.
Champaka, 婚物花色, 204.
Chang-an, 長安, 9, 11.
Chang-shuo, 延载, 60.

64.

Chuang Chih-chi, 蔣之奇, 56年, 57年, 61. 63. Chi-fêng, 凭鉴, 10 Chih-huan Ssu, 紙迈寺, 7 Chih-yuan Catalogue, the, 五元餘 Chin-ch'an Ssu, 清禪寺, 8 Chur-shih. 久認. 8 Chos-grub, 12, 13, 14 Chuang-tzu, 非子, 333 Clay, 138 Cloud, 167, 268 Cocoon, 349 Conch-shell, 171, 256 Cow. 26, 136 Creator, ff & (Larana), 198 Crocodiles, 150

Daśabhūmika, 十地經, 3, 106, 195, 223n, 224, 225, 226, 228
Deer, 165, 291, 246
Dhārani, 於羅尼, 17
Dharmākara, 法該菩滾, 205
Dharmārakshan school, 法相宗, 89
Dharmāraksha, 益地流, 4, 311n
Diamond, 199
Diamond Sūtra, the, 金剛經(Vajracchedicā), 19n, 341
Dīvākara, 地邊地麵, 6n
Dream, (saapna), 34, 72, 96, 127, 173, 210, 267, 271, 290, 304, 306, 350

Eastern Buddhut, the, 92n Echo, 120, 127, 268, 117 Ekayāna school, 一彩歌, 54 Elephants, 150, 351 Eternalism, 常見 (śāśvatadarśana), 35 f. 123

Fa-chang, 法武, 18. Fa-ch'ung, 法钟, 51 ff, 55, 61, 63 Fa-lan, 法篇, 10

Fa-tsang, 法談, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 42, 63, 65, 217 Fang-yen, 方言, 9n Fata morgana, 72 Fén-tuan, 分段(生死), 212 Finger, or Finger-tip, 106 n. 109. 109 n. 195 Fire, 81, 129, 150 f, 167, 327, 367 Fire-wheel, or Fire-circle, (alātacakra), 72, 117, 268 Fishes, 150 Flower, 85 f. 171 Fly. 167. Fo Shou-chi Ssǔ, 佛授記寺, 8. Four Noble Truths, the, 四點薄, 126 n Fruit. 171. Fuel, 256 Fu-h, 位选, 9

96, 230 n Gandharva, 乾隆婆, 72, 79, 96, 124, 266, 267, 271, 291 Ganges, 恒河, 118, 148, 318, sands of the, 228 Garment, (vastra), 256 Gem (mans), 105 Genko Shakusho, the, 元字释書, 处, 64 Ghee, 151. Ghost, the walking, 167 Gold, 161, 199, 255 Gridhraküts, Mount, 望宏华, 91 t. Gunabhadra, 求那政论题, 4, 5, 7, 10, 11, 18, 48, 52, 142 Gunas, the six, 181

Gandavyūha、the. (入法外品), 8, 28,

Harr-net, or harr-carcle, 毛铃 (keśondukam), 81, 117, 268, 271 Haneda, Toru, 18 n Hare's horns 東角 (śaśaviskāņa),

124, 134, 301, 302 n, 306. Hastikukshya Sūtra, 象路經, 368 Herb, medicinal, 256 Hgos, 12 History of Orthodox Buddhism, 釋 門正統, 49 Honey. 171 Horse, 26, 136 Hridaya-hain, 鼓架太心, 42. Hsr-chi (vāsanā), 質氣, 128, 178 See under vasana in the Glossary Haut-ta Ssǔ, 徐多寺, 14 Hsuan-chuang, 玄奘, 6n, 8n, 55, 348 n Hsüan-1, the, 玄蕊, 42 Haun-han, 黨督, 178 Hur-k'6, 沙可, 5, 11, 45, 47, 48, 50, 51. 52 ff. 90 Hui-kwan, 诗聪, 7, 7n, 52. Hurneng, 李能, 6 n, 46, 54, 61 f, 62 n, 63 Hui-yu, or Tao-yu, 對音, 道音, 52, 54 Hur-yuan, #32, 10

Idzumi, Hokei, 65, 230 n Indra, 医陀羅, 79, 292, 351 Ishihama, Juntaro, 13 n Išvara, 自在天, 130, 139, 158, 187, 264, 270, 293, 854 I-tsing, 義淨, 15, 810, 314 n

Hung-16n. 资格山弘弘、54, 59

Jan-chiu, 再求, 58
Jar, 26, 27, 81.
Jātaka Ta'es, 本生記, 830.
Jēn-t'ien Yen-mu, the, 人天戰員, 48, 50
Jātanagupta, 風歌組多, 814 n.
Joy, stage of, 數玄地 (pramuditā), 24
Ju-lai, 如來, 841.

Ju-lêng-chia hem heüan-1, 入榜伽心 玄礁, 6n . 7

Kar-huang Catalogue of the Tripitaka. the, 肥息龄, 42. Kar-yuan Lu, 開元錄, 4, 5, 8n. Kāla (tume), $\, 156, 187, 270 Kalavinka bırd, 迦欧銀迦, 852 Kalinga, 郊্沙滩, 93 Kanakamuni, 拘那含伞尼, 851 Kan-chou, 甘州, 14 Kanjur, 12, 14 Kapila, 迦兒腦, 354 Kāsyapa. 迦紫佛, 351 Kegon-kyo, 革酸經, 230. Kern. H. 125n, 310n Kettle-drum, 256 Kinnara, 緊那腦。79 Kokwan Shiren, 虎腳卸錄, 19n, 44. Krakucchanda, Buddha, 拘留孫佛, Kshitigarbha Bodhisattva, 地藏菩薩。 310, 356 Kshungarbha Sutra, the, 地遊經, 310. 356. Kumārajīva, 地摩延什 (遺落), 19 Kumbhakarna, 翌年, 69 Ku-tsang, 姑越, 4

Lahta-ustaru, the, 普遍經 (大遊數 經), 3 Lamp, 260, 298 Land of Bhss, or of Happiness, 穩 榮, 23, 24 Language, 106 ff Lankā, 楞伽, 3, 66 Lanlāhridaya, the, 楞伽心, 42 Lantern, 120, word-lantern, (rutapradīpa), 109 Lévi, Sylvain, 108 n, 125 n, 228, 278, 309n Lightning, 115, 268 Lin-te, 終25, 5n.
Lions, 150
Lokāyata, the, 路边耶克, 14, 357, 369.
Lo-yang, 洛男, 8.
Lunar reflection, 156, 210
Lute, 258

Machine, 187. Madhyamika, the, 中现宗, 164, 170, 239, 285, 300, 353 Magic formulas, 121; Magical art, 320; Magical creation, 267, 306. Magical figures, 294 · Migician. 144, 101 Mahāmegha Sūtra, the, 大江經, 368 Mahāparınırvāna Sūtra, the, 大股型 穆粹、4 Mahāvyutpatis, the,設評名從集,218n. Mahāyāna-partsameraha-šāstru. the, 攝大乘論, 53, 239 Mahāyānasūtralamkāra, the, 大乘莊 嚴經論, 309 n. Mahoraga, 陰遠羅伽 (大腹行), 79 Makara, Mis. 68. Malaya, Mount, 摩班耶, 68 f, 102 Man, 滋澤節, 51. Mandhatri, king, 漫陀轉給王 (Sung), 顶生王 (Wei and T'ang), 351 Marici, mirage, 96 Ma-t'eng, 摩脸 10 Ma-tsu, 馬祖, 46, 47, 60 Max Muller, 125 n. Māyā, 13, 72, 96, 97, 100, 114, 115, 116, 118, 121, 122, 123, 124, 127, 182, 156, 160, 210, 225, 271, 290, 850 Milk, 171. Mirage, 100, 117, 127, 156, 271, 291 See also Marici Mirror, 190, 195, 210 Muror-mage, 117, 133, 173, 268

Mi-t'o-shan, 新於山, 9, 42. Mitsui, Shoshi, 65 Monkey, 167 Moon, 106 n, 109, 120, 195, 204, 205, 222, 243, 327, 355

Na, 那种部, 51
Naga, 形像, 79.
Nagahvaya, 能料, 24.
Nagarjuna, 能料, 23, 42, 163, 239, 316, 320
Nakano, Gisho, 64
Nakano, Tatsuye, 63
Nan-che-chu-p'an, 南海伊毅阳, 42
Nangō, Bunyū, 3, 13, 90
Nāraka, 李洛独, 243
Nihilsm, 斯贝 (ucchedavāda), 34, 35 f 123

Nihon Darzokyo, Explanatory Notes to the, 日本大款經解題, 64 Miridga Sutra, the, 世數經, 218 n, 368

Ocean, 171, 188, 190, 192, 196, 200, 247, 360
Oil, 151.
Omura, Seigai, 64

Painter, 174
Painting, 268
Pal-lha-bisan-po, 18
Pao-lin Chuan, the, 資林傳, 45, 48
Pao-yun, 實致, 7, 7n.
Paramārtha, 武語三藏, 810, 886 £.
Parrot, 351
Peacock, 131
Pelliot P, 13 n.
Phantom creation, 167
Physician, 174
Picture, 116, 174, 367
Plantain tree, 350
Plaything, 164

Porpoises, 150
Potter, 188, 145 n.
Pradhana, 跨性 or 跨秒, 189, 156, 187, 270, 298, 354
Prajāpati, 荣生主, 284
Prajāā, 股若三藏, 230
Projāāpāramitā kūtra, the, 94, 95, 103, 239, 285, 285, 296, 338 n, 357
Precious stone, 131, 255
Purandara, 能被告者(Wei), 292
Purusha, 士夫 187

Rajendralala Mitra, 235
Ral-pa-can, 13
Rāmacandra, 16
Rāmāyana, 16
Rat, 362
Rāvana, 孤姿形王, 8, 4, 66 ff
Records of the Transmission of the Lamp, 陈雅俊, 45, 46, 47.
rGya, 12, 16, 37, 66 ff, 102, 267
Rope, 158
Rouse, W H D., 125 n, 223 n
RyōgakyōKōyoku,the,诺伽經難到,64

Saddharma-punduriks, the, 法举经 3, 89, 91, 125 n, 310, 314 f, 356, 865 n. Sakra, 奇稈, 66 年, 292, 342, Sakrendra, 建基框因, 370. Sakurabe, Bunkvo, 12 n. Šākyamuni, 释迦牟尼, 92. Salt. 171 Samādhīrāja, the, 三昧王樞, 8 Samantabhadra, Bodhisattva, 普及 慈盛, 96, 107, 280. Samdhi-nirmosana Sutra, 無禁密經, Sankhya, the, $12, 44, 158 n. 357. Sintideva, 全天, 125 n San Yang palace, 三路宫, 10. Barana, 空刺那, 68.

Bāriputra, 含利弗, 215 f. Seed, (vija), 81, 129, 167, 176, 249, 258, 260 Sêng-lang, 僧朗, 8n Sha-chou, 沙州, 14. Shadow, 127, 350 Sheep. 26 Shen-ham, 神秀, 6n, 60, 61 f Shih-yuan, 哲顧, 205 Shōtoku, prince, 聖德太子, 268 n. Sikahānanda, 宿沙難陀, 4, 6n, 7, 8, 14, 48, 65, 126 n, 336 f Šikshasamuccaya、the、菩薩大乘學 悠治、125 n. 228 n Silkworm, 113, 349 Simhasaudasa, 鄭子奴王 (Wei), 剛子 旗陀婆王 (Sung), 370 Sky, 161, 290, 298, 367 Snake, 158 Soma, 蘇陳, 354 Sraddhutpāda, the, 抵償證, 55 Śrīmālā, queen. 膀堂夫人. 263. Srimālā sūtra, 唐紫經, 5 Srīnālamātrī. 遊子母堂, 289 Sthiramati, 安徽, 106 n, 278, 282. Stream, 167, 260 Subbata. 須菩提. 283, 341, 342 ff. Sudhana、善財童子,230 Sugar, 257 Suka, 輪撫, 68 Sukhāvatī. 福樂. 23. 24 Sukhāvatīnyuha, the, (無量審極), 89, 92 f, 125 n, 126 n, 356, 357. Sumeru, Mount, AMIII, 39, 92, 284. Son. 171, 173 Sunetra. 善融, 351 Sütralamkära, the, 莊默輕論, 110, 125 n, 186 n, 228 n, 278, 280, Su Tung:per, 茲東坡, 6n, 56, 68. Suvar aprabhāsa Sutra, the. 金光朝 挺、 3, 15, 92, 240, 310, 311, 314 f. Swedenborgians, 331.

Tai-fu-hsien Ssü. 大脳先寺, 10 Tax-t'ang Ner-tren Lu, 大唐內典錄, 5 Takakusu, Junjiro, 278. Ta-kuan Tan-ying, 造製量額, 48年. Tālānga tree, 多疑樹, 79、 Tao-an. 直安, 10 Tan Yang, 丹以, 7 Tao-chan, 道漢, 8 n Tao-hsuan, 流江, 5, 44, 51, 56, Taoists. 331 Tao-yuan, 近原, 45 Tathāgataguhya Sūtra, the, 如來點 密經, 3, 110 n. Theatre, 251 Theosophists, 331 Thorn, 131 Tien-tai philosophy, 49 ff Tokugan, Yoson, 德醛姿存, 64 Tortoise, 124, 150. Tree, reflected in water, 117, 268. Trimsilavijnaptikarika, the, M.A. 三十年, 106n, 108n, 279n, 280, 281 Tse Tien, the Empress, 则天武后, 6n, 7, 8, 10, 48 Tu-hua-lo. 吐火路. 9, 42. Tun-huang. 無線, 14 Tushita, 都率天, 141 Twelvefold Chain of Origination, † 二因株, 126 n Tzü-lu, 子路, 58

Udumbara, 任義準, 149 f Ummon, 委鬥, 57 Upendra, 79

Varieshika, the, 有世節之 (唐濟), 44 Vajracchedskā, the, 全剛殺若經, 56, 59, 60 ff, 95 Vajragarbha, 全職家, 204, 226 f Vasubandhu, 低親, 106 n, 126, 181, 278 ff.
Vedalı, 吠陀利, 24
Vijfiaptimātralariddhi, the, 成階議
全, 278
Vimalakirti Sūtra, the, 接摩極, 89
Vishnu, 思紹, 354
Vulture, Mount, Holy, 爱蒙山, 314
Vyāsa, 毗耶之, 351.

Water, 161.
Water-drawing wheel (ghatsyantra), 156
Waves, 171, 190, 192, 200, 201 247.
Wên hu, 文章, 13, 14.
Wheel, 167
Wind, 167, 171, 188, 196
Wogihara, Unrai, 219 n, 278
Womb, and its contents, 256
Wooden man, or mechanical man, 未入 (yantrapurusha), 117
Word-lamp, 監官於 (rutapradīpa), 349

Yakusan, 泰山, 57
Yamakamı, Sögen, 65.
Yang-shan Chı, 仰山家, 48 f
Yen-chang, 延昌, 10
Yogācāra school, 瑜伽宗, 54, 89, 94, 103, 170, 179, 181, 182, 239, 278, 280, 281, 309, 353, 316
Yuan-chia, 元淑, 7, 10
Yüch-shan, see Yakusan
Yun-men, see Ummon:
Yung-neng Ssü, 永孝寺, 8
Yung-t'ang Ssü, 永唐寺, 14
Yu-t'en, 干风, 8, 42, 48

Zen Buddhism, Essays in, 17 n

was the inevitable outcome of their psychology as well as of their logic. But the Dharmakaya was still too abstract and could not give full satisfaction to their deep-seated religious longings. These longings so innate to the human heart were combined in the case of the Buddhist with the doctrine of Karma, and as the result the Vipāka or the Nishyanda Buddha, or Pao-shên (報身), came into existence in his ideal glorification. Amitābha Buddha, the Lord of Infinite Light, who is one of these Pao-shên Buddhas sits now securely in his Land of Bliss and Purity, surrounded by his worshippers and inviting us poor earthly struggling mortals to join him there

Between the Vipāka-Buddha and the Nirmāna-Buddha it will take some more research to ascertain the historic priority of the one or the other, whatever we may say about the self-enjoyment of the Bodhisattva or Buddha, he could not be a Buddha if he would not manifest himself in every possible form for the spiritual benefit of all beings original vow (pūrvapramdhāna) was to save his fellowbeings when he attained enlightenment, now that he has achieved that end, how can he stay quietly in Akanishtha Heaven absorbed in a Samadhi of the highest order and enwrapped in the glow of supernatural nature? Even if he does not leave his lotus mansion (padmavimāna), he ought to despatch, at least, one of his transformation-bodies wherever and whenever that is desired by sentient beings. Or, to state the case in terms of suffering souls, they must be able to approach the Buddha in some way If the Buddha himself is so transcendental and detached from a world of individual objects, suffering souls must be allowed to come into intimate relationship with his shadow or Transformstion-Body, transformed (numita-numāna) for the sake of unregenerate mortals This is why Avalokitesvara has his thirty-three bodies, and why Kshitigarbha his mnumerable representations

Thus, the existence of the Nirmana-Buddha can be

understood in two ways: one from the standpoint of the Buddha himself, whose loving heart cannot help resorting to every possible means of salvation, and the other from the standpoint of sinful mortals who desire every possible help from a power higher than themselves. This mutuality has filled the world with Nirmita-nairmānika Buddhas. Wherever we turn we come across one of these transformations, and if we are earnest and sincere and longmg from the depths of the heart, we can see even the real Buddha himself in and through them. This is an idea pregnant with results both good and bad. When it is not judiciously handled, religion becomes a mass of superstition and idolatory grows rampant

The relation of the three Buddhas to one another may be understood in the analogy of an individual person there is something ultimate making up the reason of this individual existence is to be granted, because the very conception of individuality is impossible without postulating something behind it This something is variously designated m philosophy and religion, and also variously interpreted and speculated on. Even the denying of the existence of this something is in truth asserting it, for both denial and assertion are based on the same principle We cannot escape this, and what makes it thus mevitable for us either to assert or deny it is the principle of individuality. corresponds to the conception of the Dharmata, or when personified, to the Dhamata-Buddha.

Now this individual person stands in every possible manner of relationship to his fellow-beings, human or otherwise As Chuang-tzŭ says, a woman may be regarded by her companions as the most beautiful person and as such admired and adored and loved. But when she comes near a pond and reflects her shadow on water, all the aquatic inhabitants will flee away from her as a most dangerous enemy is one man's poison is another's clixir of life. The same individual is not the same at all times to all others

a table standing in this room does not look alike to all spectators. As it is observed from different angles and with different frames of mind the object before them is not only physically not of the same size and colour, but psychologically not at all of the same value and significance. In the case of a living person this variability, temporal and constant, reaches its limits. The person himself has not apparently changed but he assumes or seems to assume different forms to his neighbours. May not this aspect of his being be called his Nirmāna value? In spite of all these external and relational mutations, the individual has not at all changed to his own consciousness. That he is himself he at all times knows and he enjoys his personality. This corresponds to the Vipāka-Buddha, or Sambhogakāya.

Every conscious being may thus figuratively or rather metaphysically be said to be the owner of the Triple Body. In the case of the Buddha, the doctrine is filled with religious significance and it has played a most important rôle in the development of Mahayana Buddhism. One thing we have to notice here is the replacing of the Buddha-trinity by that of the Body (kāya) That Buddhist philosophers have come to talk of the Trikava instead of Buddhatrays. It is not a matter of mere change of terminology, it involves a deeper meaning. The reason is that Kaya has a more synthesising value, while Buddha suggests more of individuality. The three different kinds of Buddhahood make one think of three different, separate individuals, but the Trikāya means one personality with three aspects In the conception of the Triple Body we trace a systematising The Lankavatara, therefore, marks a step toward thought this systematisation

١

١

The conception of the Body of Enjoyment is interesting from the point of view of karma, for the Mahayana has not ignored the effect of karma on the individual life though it teaches in the doctrine of Parindhana (vows) and Parinamana (transfering of merit) that there is a power transcending karma and working towards universal enlightenment and salvation.

The Triple Body in the Awakening of Faith in the Mahayana

With the author of the Awakening of Faith in the Mahāvāna, the theory of the Triple Body assumes a more finished form The following deals with the subject.

"And again by the functions of Suchness (tathatā) 18 meant that all the Buddha-Tathagatas while they were still on the stage of self-discipline awakened great love and compassion, practised all the virtues of perfection, and embraced all beings making great vows, in which they expressed the desire to emancipate the entire world of beings without distinction and exception, nor have they set any limit to the number of ages, for their vows reach the furthest end of time They regard all beings as if the latter were Yet they do not assume the form of a [particular] being. Why is this so? Because they really (yathābhūtam) know that all beings and themselves are of Suchness; that they both are of the same nature (samatā), without any distinguishing marks. As they have such great Upāyajñāna, dispelling ignorance, they see the Dharmakāya in its original essence, and without being conscious of it, perform wonderful deeds, a variety of activities They are indeed like Suchness itself manifesting themselves all over the universe, and yet they leave no marks whereby their activities can be traced. Why? Because the substance of all the Buddha-Tathagatas is no other than the Dharmakāya m its pure form of intelligence. There are no parts in Absolute Truth that correspond to worldly truths, it has nothing to do with [the constraints of] achievement It, nevertheless, benefits all beings, as they catch glimpses of it through their senses, and thus we speak of its functionings

Interally, updyajāāna means, "knowledge of means," which is generally contrasted with "knowledge of reality" (tativajādna). The latter sees into suchness of things, whereas the former goes out to a world of particulars The Buddha is provided with both kinds of knowledge.

"Of these functionings we distinguish two kinds What are they? The one is dependent on the Individualising Mind (vastuprativikalpavifiāna) and is perceived by the minds of the two-vehicle followers. It is known as Responding Body (ying shên) 1 As they do not know that this is projected by their Evolving Mind (Pravritivifiāna), they take it for something external to themselves, and making it assume a corporeal form, fail to have a thorough knowledge of its nature.

"The second one is dependent on the Karma-consciousness,2 that is, it appears to the minds of those Bodhisattvas who have just entered upon the path of Bodhisattvahood as well as of those who have reached the highest stage is known as the Recompense Body, 報身(pao-shên) 8 The Body is visible in infinite forms, each form has infinite marks, and each mark is excellent in infinite ways, and the world in which the Body has its abode is also embellished in manners infinitely varying As the [Body] is manifested everywhere, it has no limitations whatever, it can never be exhausted, it goes beyond all the conditions of determination According to the needs [of all beings] it becomes visible and is always held by [by them], it is neither destroyed nor lost sight of All such characteristics [of the Body] are the perfuming (vāsanā) effect of the immaculate deeds such as the virtues of perfection and also the work of the mysterious perfuming [innate in the Tathagatagarbha]. As it is thus in possession of immeasurably blissful qualities, it is called Recompense Body (pao-shên) 4 Those

¹ This corresponds to the Nirmanakaya, or the Nirmana-Buddha of the Lankavatara Sikshananda has Hun-shan (代意).

² By Karma-consciousness is meant the first awakening of consciousness whereby all kinds of activities, psychical, logical, and physical, are stirred up ^{*} Šikshānanda has here 委用其 (shou-yung-shên, sambhogalāya).

His text evidently differed from that of Paramärtha Sikshänanda has here, "It is also known as Pao-shên" This also is significant, seeing that it was first called Shou-ying shên.

which are visible to ordinary mortals are of coarser corporeality, appearing differently according to which one of the six paths of existence a man lives in. These different forms conceived by different beings are not of blissful character. Therefore, they are known as the Responding Body (una shên).

"And again, as the Bodhisattva who has first entered upon the path of Bodhısattvaship has a firm faith in the truth of Suchness. he is granted to have a partial glimpse [of the Recompense Body]. He knows that the forms. characteristic marks, embellishments, etc. belong to [the Recompense Body], are in their nature neither coming nor going, are beyond the categories of determination, that they are only visible depending upon the mind and not detached from Suchness But in [the mind of] this Bodhisattva there is still individualisation as he has not yet entered upon the rank of Dharmakaya When, however, his heart is thoroughly purified, he can see things of finer quality, and his activity will be more excellent than ever At the culminating stage of Bodhisattvahood, his vision reaches its height2, and when the Karma-consciousness is no more, there is nothing for him to see: for the Dharmakaya of all the Buddhas has no forms, no marks whatever, of which there is any possibility of mutual perception.

"If the Dharmakaya of all the Buddhas has nothing to do with forms and marks, how is it possible for it to manifest itself in forms and marks?

"Because the Dharmakāya is the substance of all forms, it manifests itself in forms. From the very beginning, indeed, mind and form are not two, the essence of form is knowledge. Because the substance of form is not material, it is known as the Knowledge-body (jūānakāya), and be-

Hua shên, by Sikshananda.

shkshananda has thus inserted here "Thus subtle activity is the Enjoyment Body, as there is Karma-consciousness, the Enjoyment Body is visible" cause the essence of knowledge is form, it is known as the Dharma-käya,¹ which is omnipresent and whose visible forms have no limiting conditions. They appear according to the mind. In the ten quarters of the world there are innumerable. Bodhisattvas, inumerable Bodies of Recompense,² innumerable embellishments; they are all distinct one from another, and yet they are not subject to limiting conditions, nor are they mutually exclusive. This is beyond the discrimination of a discerning mind, for it is due to the absolute activity of Suchness. ''3

In this case, Dharma is evidently understood in the sense of form (rûpa) and not in the sense of truth or law. It stends constructed to jüüna which belongs to the mind. The duality of jüüna and dharma, of mind and form, disappears when it is understood that they are after all one, as is stated most emphatically in the Projudparamits. The surprise rupom survey survey and price of survey survey and price of survey survey and price of survey survey survey and survey sur

² Shou-yung-shên, according to Sikshānanda

Skshänanda differs somewhat as has been noticed above The author's translation of the Awakening of Fasth in the Mahayana was published in 1900 by the Open Court Publishing Co., Chicago, which has, however, been out of print for some time. The author is contemplating the issue of a revised translation before long

4. THE TATHAGATA

The Lankavatara-Sutra being one of the principal Mahayana texts treating of the inner truth realised by the Tathagata (protyātma-vedya-gati-dhormam tathāgatānām). it behoves us to have some knowledge of the Tathagata himself, as far as it is given us in the sutra. In fact we already know something of him when we have investigated what this inner truth is, for it constitutes the very essence of Tathagatahood. who would not be himself if he had it not. Not only that, his whole life is regarded as to be given up to the propagation of Pratvatmadharma The identification of the Tathagata with Pratyatmadharma does not require any specific proofs as this, indeed, composes the contents of the Lankāvatāra itself But the Pratyātmadharma alone of itself does not make up the whole being of the Tathagata who requires something more to move among the ignorant and confused and who desires to lead all beings up to the same elevation where he himself is. The realm where he moves along with his inner revelations (pratyatmagatigocara) 18, indeed, beyond that of the philosophers and the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas, as we are repeatedly reminded in the Lankāvatāra, but this self-enjoyment of the blissful Samādhi is not what we expect of the Tathagata He must show something more, he must be more than himself, go beyond his inner revelations This means that he must be a personality

As was elsewhere noted, a great compassionate heart (kripā or karuņā), is to be awakened in the wise men who have seen yathābhūtam into the inner truth of things, for this is what makes all great souls really living. To be a person means among other things to be a living being, to have a feeling heart, to live among the ignorant and confused, and not to remain isolated in his own intellectual transcendentalism. So all the Tathagatas of the past, present, and future must be endowed with this affection for the world The supreme wisdom (aryaiñana) by which they are able to realise in themselves the inner truth of things must not be merely intellectual, there must be an element of affection This is, indeed, what distinguishes the Mahavana from the The reason why the Lankavatara is persistent in dwelling upon the mental attitude (gocara) of the Tathagata toward the world as in such contrast with that of the Śrāvakas and the Pratvekabuddhas and also the philosophers (tirthakara) is that the Tathagata's (or the Bodhisattva's) comprises this tenderness for others in spite of his enlightenment which transcends the categories of being and non-being, of coming into existence and passing out of it. The supreme wisdom then distinguishes itself by three marks 1 The first is the Nirābhāsa, meaning "free from all false appearances," "beyond semblance," "shadowless," or "mageless", the second is the Buddha's own will and power, and When these the third is the realisation of the inner truth three aspects or characteristics of supreme wisdom (arya jñāna) are in perfect combination and operate harmoniously, a Bodhisattva is said to draw near Buddhahood say that supreme wisdom which is the essence of Tathagatahood is composed of the will of the Tathagata plus this nondualistic understanding Aryajñāna is Prajñā supported by Pranidhana that is, by "the ten inexhaustible vows," while the unsupported Prajna is designated as a lame donkey (khañjagardabha) 2 When this plase of Buddhist teaching is comprehended, we have mastered more than half of its secrets

¹ Pp 85-86, 214-216, of the present work.

What is the meaning of Tathagata? This has been much discussed by scholars but so far nothing conclusive has been reached Tathā means "thus," but the question is whether to divide tathāgata into tathā and gata, or into tathā and āgata In the first case, gata is "gone" or

"departed." and in the second case, if it is agata, it means "is come" or "is arrived." The Chinese translators have adopted the second reading as they have rendered tathagata by 如來 (ju-lai), but the Tibetans have 국 지역국 제외의 for it. In point of fact it does not matter whether the Tathagata is the "One thus come." or the "One thus gone." When his appearance in the world is made the centre of interest, he is the "One who has thus come": on the other hand if we think more of his disappearance from among us, he is the "One who has thus departed." The main question, however, with the Mahayanists is this.-Why is he designated "thus"! What does this "thus" mean! This is what we wish to know.

There is no doubt the tathā is connected with the Mahayana conception of the ultimate truth as tathatā (suchness or thusness) and also with the idea of seeing into the nature of things yathābhūtam. When the Tathagata's coming into existence and his passing away from it is considered from the yathabhūtam point of view, that is, as neither coming nor departing, as not subject to the category of being and nonbeing, his being and his doings may well be characterised as having the quality of "thusness." There is no other good way of describing them. Hence the appellation, the "One who has the nature of thusness in his coming and going," that is, the Tathagata.

In the Diamond Sutra2 we have: "But if, O Subhuti, there is a man who would say, 'The Tathagata goes, he comes, he stands, he sits, or he lies,' that man understands not the meaning of what I say. Why? Because the Tathagata is he who goes nowhere and who comes from nowhere. Therefore, he is called the Tathagata, Arhat, Fullyenlightened One (29)."

[&]quot;The Buddha is also called, Sugata (書稿) "one who has gone

^{*} S.B.E , Vol. XLIX, p. 142.

The interpretation of Tathagata as the thusness of things (sarvadharmatathatā) is given in the Ashţaśahasrikā-prajñāpāramitā-sūtra in a most characteristic manner as follows:

"At that time the Venerable Subhūti spoke to the Blessed One thus This truth is preached by thee that all things are beyond the grasp of the understanding This truth knows no obstruction whatever; there are no signs of obstruction in it; being like space no traces are left in it, it allows no similitude because of its having no companionship, it has no equal because of its standing above all opponents; it leaves no footsteps because of its never having assumed itself, it has never been born because of its being above birth and death; it has no tracks to follow because of no tracks ever being traced here, [it allows of no idle speculation because of its having nothing to do with words and discrimination. The Blessed One said to Subhūti So it is, so it is, just as you say 2]

"Sakra, chief of the gods, Brahman, lord of the world, and the gods belonging to the world of Desire and that of Form, said to the Blessed One Subhūti, the noble Śrāvaka and the Elder, is truly the one who is born after the Buddha Why? Because the truth which he declares, he declares indeed in accordance with the doctrine of Emptiness (śūnuatā).

"Then the Venerable Subhūti said to Sakra and the other gods. As to what the gods say about Subhūti the Elder's being born after the Buddha, he is indeed such because of his having never been born. Subhūti the Elder is born after the thusness [or suchness] of the Tathagata, that is, one who is thus come. As the Tathagata's thusness neither comes nor passes away, so does Subhūti's thusness neither come nor pass away. So, indeed, Subhūti's thusness neither

¹ Rajendralala Mitra's edition, pp 306-309

^{*} Added from Hsuan-chuang's Chinese translation

^{*} Anustic, meaning "a younger brother."

comes nor passes away. So, indeed, is Subhüti the Elder born after the Tathagata in accordance with the thusness of the Tathagata, indeed from the first is Subhüti born after the Tathagata in accordance with the thusness of the Tathagata Why? What is the thusness of the Tathagata that is the thusness of all things; and what is the thusness of the Tathagata as well as the thusness of all things, that is the thusness of Subhüti the Elder? Subhüti the Elder is born after this thusness, therefore he is the one who is born after this thusness is Subhüti born. So indeed is Subhüti the Elder the one who is born after the Tathagata. What the Tathagata's permanency is, that is the permanency of thusness, and by this permanency Subhüti the Elder is the one who is born after the Tathagata

"As the Tathagata's thusness is changeless, free from change, not discriminating, free from discrimination,1 so is mdeed Subhūti's thusness changeless, free from change, not discriminating, free from discrimination. So indeed Subhüti the Elder, who is by this thusness changeless, free from change, not-discriminating, free from discrimination, is the one born after the Tathagata And as the Tathagata's thusness is changeless, free from change, not-discriminating, free from discrimination, nowhere obstructed; so is the thusness of all things changeless, free from change, notdiscriminating, free from discrimination, and is nowhere obstructed Why? What is the Tathagata's thusness and what is the thusness of all things, that is just one thusness; this thusness is not two, is not a duality, it is not a twofold thusness, this thusness is nowhere, is from nowhere, and belongs to nobody. As this thusness belongs to nobody, so it is not two, it is not a duality, it is not a twofold thusness. Even so is Subhūti the Elder born after the Tathagata's uncreated thusness What is uncreated thusness, that is in no time no thusness 1 Since it is thusness that is not thusness in no time, this thusness is not two, is not a duality, is not a twofold thusness. So indeed is Subhūti the Elder born after the Tathagata. As the Tathagata's thusness is everywhere in all things without discrimination, free from discrimination, even so is the thusness of Subhūti everywhere in all things without discrimination, free from discrimina-So is Subhüti transformed by the thusness of the Tathagata, and yet there is no splitting into duality, it is not split into two. splitting is not obtainable is Subhūti the Elder's thusness not different from the thusness of all things What is not different from the thusness of all things, that is nowhere not thusness, it is just that thusness, the thusness of all things It is admitted that Subhūti the Elder in accordance with the same thusness follows that thusness. it is not admitted that his following is somewhere somehow. So indeed is Subhüti the Elder born after the Tathagata.

Heilan-chuang's Chinese translation has one more qualification:

"As the Tathagata's thusness belongs neither to the past, nor to the future, nor to the present, so indeed does the thusness of all things not belong to the past, nor to the future, nor to the present. Just so is Subhūti the Elder born after this thusness, he is said to be born after the Tathagata. Following thusness indeed by the thusness of the Tathagata, he follows thusness of the past by the thusness of the Tathagata. He follows the Tathagata's thusness by thusness of the past. By the Tathagata's thusness he follows thusness of the future. By thusness of the future he follows thusness of the present. By thusness of the present by thusness of the present. By thusness of the past, future, and present. By thusness of the past, future, and present.

¹ The sense is This uncreated and uncreating thusness remains so all the time, never losing its absolute identity in spite of its presence and activity in all things

he follows the Tathagata's thusness Thus indeed Subhūti's thusness and thusness of the past, future, and present, and the Tathagata's thusness—the thusness indeed is not two, it is not a duality; so the thusness of all things and Subhūti's thusness is not two, it is not a duality. What is the thusness of the Blessed One and of one who is becoming a Bodhisattva, that is the thusness of the Blessed One who is fully awakened in the highest perfect enlightenment. This thusness by which the Bodhisattva-Mahāsattva is fully awakened in the highest perfect enlightenment is designated by the name of 'Tathāgata'

"Now when this discourse on the thusness of the Tathagata was going on, the great earth shook in six different ways with eighteen great signs: is swayed, trembled, rattled, writhed, thundered, just as it did at the time when the Tathagata was awakened to the highest perfect enlightenment."

One of the ways of determining the conception of the Tathagata is to know what are the essential constituents of Bodhisattvaship, not only after his attainment of an ideal Buddhist life but while he is perfecting himself for such life. A Bodhisattva is a sentient being whose inherent possession is Bodhi, or who is disciplining himself for the realisation of Bodhi or enlightenment. He is thus far from being a Tathagata, but the difference is that between potentiality and actuality, that is, between one who is to be and one who is When we know what the one is aiming at, we can guess what the other is after arriving at the goal.

What are the constituents of Bodhisattvahood? What are the essential qualities of the Bodhisattva? According to the Lankāvatāra. he is the one who endeavours:

1. To get rid of all the perverted views of existence (prapaica-darśana) which he has been cherishing since the very beginning of time:

¹ Pp. 42-45; see also pp 97 ff and pp 213 ff, of these Studies, where the Bodhusattva is described.

- 2 Thereby to liberate himself from the conditions of discrimination (wkalpapratyaya), and to rise above the net of phraseology woven by erroneous imagination (parkalpita-abhidhāna),
- 3 And further to realise that an external world so called of particulars is no more than the construction of the Alayavijāna,
- 4 To attain a mental attitude by which he views Nirvāna and Samsāra as two aspects of one and the same fact $(samat\bar{a})$.
- 5 To be furnished with (a) great compassionate heart (mahākarunā), and (b) skilful means (upāyakauśalya),
- 6 To perform effortless deeds (anābhogocaryā), to walk the road of formlessness (animitapatha), to enter upon a mental state of non-semblance (citanirābhāsa),
- 7. To attain the perfection of Samādhi in which things are viewed as above all forms of perturbation and as unborn,
- 8 To be in the perfection of Prajñā, whereby to live always in the thusness of things (tathatā),
- 9 To manifest finally the Buddha-body which, now being endowed with the ten Powers, the six Psychic Faculties, and the tenfold Self-mastery, is able to assume any form at will to visit all the Buddha-lands, and to lead all beings to the perception of the truth of the "Mind-only"

When these are achieved, a Bodhisattva or in fact any being is regarded as having reached Tathagatahood. Aside from the question, what the Buddha-body or the Tathagatabody really is—this has partly been discussed in the previous chapter entitled "The Trikāya"—we may mention that the full attainment of this body takes place in the Akanishtha heaven which is the highest of the Rūpadhātu (world of form) According to this, as long as we are staying in this world of desire where we mortals are not able to escape the bondage of coarser matter, we cannot attain to the perfection of the Tathāgatakāya, which is evidently a kind of spiritual body able to take on any form as desired either by oneself or by others. Hence the conception of the Sambhogakāya and the Nirmāņakāya.

This is referred to in several places, for instance, pp 51, 38, 56, 215, 269, etc

The treatment of the Tathagata in the Lankāvatāra may be divided under two heads: (1) the Tathagata as he is, and (2) the Tathagata in his relation to sentient beings As to the first head much has already been said, and in fact, the previous chapter on the relation of Zen Buddhism to the Lankāvatāra may be regarded in a way as an exposition of the inner consciousness of the Tathagata. The following quotations which are concerned with the essence of Tathagatahood are more or less repetitions confirming the views already expounded.

"[The essence of enlightenment] goes beyond all logical measurement and the senses, it is neither effect nor cause; it is not intellective, nor is it to be reached by reason; it is not qualifying, nor is it to be qualified (79).

"The Skandhas, causation, and enlightenment—these are not seen by anybody anywhere. How can anyone anywhere make any assertion [or discrimination] about that which is not seen? (80).

"It is not something made, nor something unmade; it is not an effect nor a cause it is not the Skandhas, nor no-Skandhas, nor is it any other composition (81).

"It is not to be discriminated as something existing, it is not so seen, this something unseen is not to be known as nothing, for it is that which constitutes the essence of all things (82).

"Something first in being, and there is non-being; nothing yet in being, and there is being; therefore, non-being is not to be attained, and being is not to be discriminated (83).

"Those who do not comprehend what is ego and what

Cf "The Essence of Buddhahood," p. 183 et seq, of the

is non-ego, get themselves attached to words only They drown themselves in dualism, they are ruined themselves and ruin the ignorant (84).

"When they see my doctrine which is liberated from all error, they see truthfully, they do not harm the Leader (85)."

When Mahamatı asked what constituted Tathagatahood, the Buddha answered ² They are Tathagatas and Buddhas, who understand the twofold egolessness, descard the twofold hindrance (avarana), keep themselves away from the two forms of death (cyuti), and from the two classes of evil desires (Llcśa). Whether they be Śrāvakas or Pratyekabuddhas, they are equally Tathagatas if they thus qualify themselves, and in this respect, the Buddha says that he teaches only one vehicle impartially carrying all classes of sentient beings The twofold hindrance to the realisation of the inmost truth is the hindrance of evil desires and the hindrance of knowledge, we may say, the constive hindrance and the intellectual hindrance The two kinds of death are death of discontinuity, and death of mysterious transformation (acintuaparināma) The first is that which takes place on a corporal plane and the second is a form of subtile transformation proceeding in the consciousness of a higher By the two kinds of evil desires are meant, (1) those that are stirred in us by the agency of ignorance, and (2) those that follow from this fundamental evil

One of the significant teachings of the Lankāvatāra concerning the discourse of the Tathagata on the truth of Buddhism, is its insistence on the distinction between the truth itself and an exposition of it. This follows from the Mahayanistic attitude toward the use of language in Buddhism, which is this, that meaning is to be separated from words, for the latter by no means exhaust the former and there is always something that is escaping which can never be adequately expressed in words. Of course we must use words when something has to be transmitted from one person to another, but words are mere indication and not the thing As the sutra says, we have to resort to the word-lamp of discrimination to enter into the inner truth of experience which goes beyond words and thoughts 1 But it is perfect folly to imagine that this lamp is everything 2 The Lankāvatāra is quite positive about this, for it says merely following words and making discriminating attempts to formulate a proposition concerning the truth as it is, a man falls straightway into the bottom of hell on account of this very proposition ''s Again "when the ignorant not comprehending the secret meaning (samdhs) endeavour to take hold of the knowledge of existence with words, they find themselves hopelessly, like the silk-worm, in a cocoon spun by their own false discrimination '4 Thus Mahāmati in this sutra is always anxious to ask the Buddha concerning the relationship between the truth itself and its expression in words; for he is convinced that when this relationship is made clear, the Bodhisattvas including himself will have advanced many steps ahead toward the attainment of supreme enlightenment (anuttara-samuak-sambodhi).

¹ Pp. 190-191

P. 140.

This relationship is known in the Lankavatara as that between siddhanta and deśana, that is, between realisation and instruction in words "This most excellent realisation goes beyond words and letters of discrimination, for it belongs to the realm of non-outflowings (anasravadhātu), and is characterised with the inwardness of perception whereby one enters upon the stage [of Tathagatahood] By destroying all the philosophers' erroneous views and evil ways of thinking, one shines forth in the light of inner truth As to

Väg-vikalpa-ruta-pradipena bodhisattvä mahäsattvä väg-vikalparakıtak svapratyatma-'ryagatım anupravısantı (p. 156)

See also also p 105 ff, of the present work. P 156, g 34

P. 163, g. 87

the Tathagata's instruction in words, it is expressed in the nine divisions in which is given the doctrine of non-dualism transcending the categories of oneness and otherness, of being and non-being, but the main thing in them is to lead sentient beings by skilful means to the end after which their own believing hearts are striving

"There are the truth of realisation and its instruction in words, the inner perception and its preaching, those who see well into the distinction will not be influenced by mere intellection (15)

"In the truth itself there are no such discriminations as are cherished by the ignorant. In non-being there is emancipation, indeed! Why do they not seek it there—they that are addicted to reasoning (16)?

"When we survey this world of things made, we see nothing but a continuation of birth and death; and [the ignorant] are nourishing their dualistic views and because of their perversion they fail to see [the truth] (17)

'This one alone is the truth, Nirvana is not to be taken hold of by thinking. The world as subject to discrimination is like the stem of a plantam tree, it is māyā, a shadow (18).

"There is no greed, no wrath, no folly, nor even a person; from desire, indeed, there rise the Skandhas, they are all like objects seen in a dream (19)".

This distinction between realisation (siddhānta) and discoursing (deśanā) is repeated further below in the sutra in almost identical words. The latter is meant for the ignorant, and the former for those who earnestly discipline themselves in it. The statement that the Tathagata uttered not a word since his enlightenment refers to the truth of realisation.

Reference has been already made once (and will be made again later—this time more in detail) to the Buddha's teach-

² Freely rendered, pp 148-149, these gathas are repeated in the "Saguthakam."

² Pp 171-172

Pp 143, 144, 240, 194

ing of One Vehicle (ekayana), in which all the Buddhists who see into the truth inwardly realisable are carried, no matter to which of the Triple Vehicle they may belong. Because of one universal Vehicle, all the Buddhas, Tathagatas, and Arhats are now said to be of one nature (samatā), and even that they are all one, i.e., of one substance In the Mahayana sutras allusions are frequently made to Buddhas of the past, present, and future, and they are an immense number even at present abiding each in his Buddha-land, which fills the universes seen and unseen. Though the Lankavatara does not make any positive affirmation, we can quite reasonably infer that all these Buddhas are really one Buddha, revealing himself in time and space and thus mysteriously multiplying himself infinitely, altogether beyond the possibilities of our limited thinking. This is the conclusion we naturally come to when the idea of Samatā (oneness or sameness) is pursued logically.1

"Mahāmati asked the Blessed One. in what secret sense speakest thou in the assembly of thy being all the Buddhas of the past? and also in thy former births of thy having been King Mandhatri, or the elephant, the parrot, Indra, Vyasa, or Sunetra, on such and such occasions?

"Said the Buddha We talk of this in the assembly because of the secret teaching of fourfold sameness (samatā), that I was in ancient days the Buddha Krakucchanda, Kanakamuni, or Kāśyapa What are these four? (1) Sameness in letters (akshara), (2) sameness in words (vāc), (3) sameness in the body (kāyā), (4) sameness in the truth (dharma) attained

- "(1) By 'sameness in letters' is meant that the title Buddha is equally given to all the Tathagatas, no distinction being made among them as far as these letters, B-U-D-DH-A, go.
- "(2) By 'sameness in words' is meant that all the Tathagatas speak in sixty-four different notes or sounds with

² Pp 141-142.

which the language of Brahma is pronounced, and that their language sounding like the notes of the Kalavinka bird is common to all the Tathagatas

- "(3) By 'sameness in the body' is meant that all the Tathagatas show no distinction as far as their Dharmakäya, their corporal features (rūpalakshaṇa) and their secondary marks of excellence are concerned. They differ, however, when they are seen by a variety of beings whom they have the special design to control and discipline
- "(4) By 'sameness in the truth' is meant that all the Tathagatas attain to the same realisation by means of the thirty-seven divisions of enlightenment"

That all the Tathagatas are one in the truth they have inwardly realised (pratyātmadharmatā)1 is readily understood, but how are they one in their bodily form? This is an important teaching in the Lankavatara The conception of an originally-abiding-essence-of-things (paurana-sthiidharmata)2 may help us in this and also of that of the Tathagata-garbha The identification of this Dharmata idea and the Tathagata-garbha has not been effected in any explicit manner in the Lankavatara The relation between the thus-identified-somewhat and the Dharmakava is not also determined to such extent as to permit us to say definitely that the Buddha's Dharmakava is in each one of us, that we are manifestations of Dharmakāya, and, therefore, that we are Buddhas even as we are, and, finally, that Mind, Buddha, and all sentient beings-these are of one essence and nature The Lankavatara is not a systematised and substance treatise devoted to the exposition of a definite set of doctrines, but a mine containing all sorts of metals still in the state of ore requiring analysis and synthesis It is full of suggestive thoughts which must have been fermenting at the time in the Mahayana thinkers' brains and hearts The two great schools of Mahayana Buddhism, the Madhyamika and the Yogācāra he here in an incipient stage of development and differentiation.

¹ See also p 143

² P 143

While all the Tathagatas are one in the Dharmakāya, they may be variously known to various classes of beings, who imagine their object of worship to be exclusively their own. Indeed, there are so many synonyms for the name Tathagata that we cannot begin to enumerate them all. The wise know this well, but the ignorant may refuse to acquiesce in this way of understanding even after they have been instructed. Hence the following remarks in the Lankāvatāra:

"Said the Buddha, O Mahamati, listen to what I tell thee. The Tathagata is not the non-existent (abhāva), he is not the holder of all that is unborn and undying in all things, he is not one who waits for conditions; I declare him to be the Unborn One, whose synonym is the Dharmakaya who manifests itself as it will. This is beyond the understanding of all the philosophers, Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and those Bodhisattvas who have not yet passed the seventh stage.

"It is like Indra who is known as Sakra and Puram-dara (city-destroyer); it is like the word hasta (hand), for synonyms of which there are hara and pani; it is again like tanu, deha, śarīra, meaning the body; like prithivī, bhūmi, vasumdhara, meaning the earth; and also like kha, ākāša, gagana, meaning the sky. Any object may thus be known under several names though they are not to be adhered to as designating several different objects, each with its own irreducible characteristics. No false judgment must be formed here

"I come into the hearing range of the ignorant in this Sahaloka world in hundreds of thousands of three asamkhyeyas of names, and they talk to me under these names, yet they fail to recognise that they are all my own appellations. There are some who call me the Self-existing One (avayambhwa), the Leader (nāyaka), the Remover-of-obstacles (vināyaka), the Guiding One (parināyaka), Buddha, Rishi, Bull-king, Brahma, Vishnu, Išvara, the Originator (pradhāna), Kapila, the Destroyer (bhūtānta), the Imperishable (arishta), Nemina, Soma, Fire, Rāma, Vyāsa, Šuka, Indra, the Strong One, or Varuna, there are others who know me as Immortality (anirodhānutpāda), Emptiness, Suchness, Truth (satyatā), Reality (bhūtatā), Real Limit (bhūtakoti), Dharmadhātu, Nirvāna, Eternity (nitya), Sameness (samatā), Non-duality (advaya), the Imperishable (anirodha), Formless (animita), Causality (pratyaya), Teaching the Cause of Buddhahood (buddha-hetūpadeša), Emancipation (vimoksha), Truth-paths (mārgasatyam), the All-knowing (sarvajāā), the Conquering One (jina), or the Will-body (manomayakāya)

"While I am thus known in hundreds of thousands of three-asamkhyeyas of titles, not only in this world, but in other worlds, my names are not exhausted. I am like the moon casting its shadow on water, I am neither in it nor out of it. Those who know me will recognise me everywhere, but the ignorant who cannot rise above dualism will not know me

"They pay respect and make me offerings, but they do not understand well the meaning of words, do not distinguish ideas, the true from the false, they do not recognise the truth itself, clinging to words of teaching they erroneously discriminate that the unborn and undying means a non-existence. They are thus unable to comprehend that one Tathagata may be known in many different names and titles."

This infinite multiplicity of names in which the Tathagata is known to all beings, though they do not themselves realise the fact, betrays the pantheistic tendency running through all the Mahayana schools of Buddhism, and at the same time leads us to the conception of the Transformation-body of the Buddha There is no mystery in the Trikäya

¹ Pp. 192-193

doctrine of Buddhism. If the Buddha is compassionate enough to see suffering beings, there is no other way to satisfy his heart's desire than that of the dividing himself into so many different forms and approaching sufferers. The latter, however, may think that they have what they want exclusively in the form revealed to their minds. fact the Tathagata is not at all dividing himself: if it seems so, it is due to the discrimination of his devotees Transformation-body is thus a creation on their part, it is not an emanation of the Tathagata. I have said that he had to divide himself to satisfy his heart, but this is no more than a conventional and human way of speaking fore, the sutra compares the activity of the Tathagata to the moon reflected in water. The moon is divided into thousands of reflections, as many indeed as there are dipperfuls of water. This is due to the presence and working of the original vows in the hearts of all the Buddhas, and the working is altogether effortless and without any designs; and yet how purposeful it all appears! This is one of the principal messages communicated in the Lankavatara We now see that the Transformation-body is most intimately connected with the Pranidhana of the Buddha, and this Pranidhana is the spiritual echo or response to the suffering of beings. When sentient beings begin to be conscious of the contradictions within themselves, they have an intense desire (āśaya) awakened for some sort of unity or harmonisation, which may be called emancipation, or enlightenment, or salvation, according to the point of view taken of the situation intense desire thus awakened in the hearts of sentient beings cannot remain without calling forth some response somewhere, because the feeling is the cry that issues forth from life itself, and if there is anything living in the Dharmakaya of the Buddha he can never remain in the quiet of Samādhi. he must move out of his lotus-seat This moving-out is. in the terminology of Mahayana Buddhism, his Pranidhana or vow The Lankavatara, as one of the Mahayana literature, does not forget to touch on this subject. Properly, the sutra is devoted to the elucidation of the inner truth to be realised within oneself, but to neglect the mentioning of the Pranidhāna would be a grievous fault on the part of the writer.

The whole significance of the idea of the Pranidhana is in short this: "The Bodhisattva also realises the inner truth as attained by the Śrāvakas, but because of his compassionate regard for all sentient beings and of his original vows which are now astir in him, he has no heart for the bliss of cessation (nirodha-sulha) and for the bliss of self-absorption (samāpatti-sukha)." The Lankavatara alludes occasionally to the ten yows of a Bodhisattya2 which he has made in the beginning of his career. They are principally concerned with the Bodhisattva and not with the Tathagata; but they may be taken at least in their principle as concerned with the life of the Tathagata as well. Amitābha's forty-eight vows mentioned in one of the Chinese versions of the Sulhāvatīvuūha-sūtra. Akshobhya's vows in the Sutra of the Land of Akshobhya. Kshitigarbha's ten vows in the Suira of the Vows of Kshitigarbha, Bhaishajya-guru-vaiduryaprabhāsa-tathāgata's twelve vows in the sutra bearing his name. Avalokitesvara's vows in one of the chapters in the Saddharmapundarika, etc., are all so many developments of this idea of Pranidhana.

As regards such subjects as the Buddha's power being added to his devotees (adhishthāna) or its moving them from within and enabling them to act in this way or that way (prabhāva or anubhāva), they have been treated although somewhat briefly in the previous part of this work, that is. pp. 202–205.

² Pp. 277, 214, 161, 123, etc.

P. 58. Cf. also pp. 49, 66, 89, 123, etc., and for further exposition of the subject see pp 220-235 of the present Studies

5. OTHER MINOR SUBJECTS

Among other subjects which are treated more or less briefly and in a detached way in the Lankavatara, the following have been selected as important. With these I hope the sutra has been explaind somewhat thoroughly as far as the main ideas making up the grand fabric of Mahavana Buddhism are concerned. I have purposely neglected making reference to the Sāmkhva and Lokāvatika views refuted by the author of the Lankavatara. These are valuable when the historical position of the sutra is to be determined. which will be attempted later when a complete English translation of it is published. I have confined myself in this book to the study of such Mahayana thoughts as have engaged the attention of the writer of the sutra. He has by no means exhausted all the Mahayana doctrines, perhaps the sutra was compiled too early for that; one thing, however, I may mention at this juncture is that one of the ideas most distinctive as Mahavanistic has not received the slightest attention in the Lankavatara, not even bare mention of the term. By this I mean the doctrine of turning over individual merit towards attaining enlightenment, or towards helping others to do the same thing. That is known as Parinamana, transferring of merit.

Parinamana follows from the conception of Parinidhana. In fact, Parmidhāna (vowing), Mahākarunā (great love), Upāyakauśalya (skilful means), and Adhishthana (power added and sustaining) are all most intimately related ideas: when any one of them is awakened and set to work out its own consequences, the rest mevitably follow it. The Prainapāramitā-sūtras considered to be one of the earliest Mahayana literature constantly refer to Parinamana, and also in the Avatamsaka and in the Sukhāvatīvyūha it is one of the characteristic terms. Seeing this, it is strange that the Lankāvatāra is altogether silent about it.

The subjects to be mentioned below are (1) One Vehicle

and Triple Vehicle, (2) The Five Fatal Sins, (3) The Six Pāramitās, (4) Four Dhyānas, and (5) Meat-eating.

1 Ekayana (pp 133 ff)

The Buddha is often compared to a great physician who can cure every sort of illness by skilful treatment 1 As far as the science of medicine goes, there is just one principle which, however, in the hands of an experienced doctor finds a variety of applications The teaching of the Buddha does not vary in time and space, it has a universal application, but as its recipients differ in disposition and training and heredity they variously understand it and are thereby cured each of his own spiritual illness. This one principle universally and infinitely applicable is known as One Vehicle (ekayāna), or Great Vehicle (mahāyāna) "My teaching is not divided, it remains always one and the same, but because of the desires and faculties of beings that are infinitely varied, it is capable also of infinite variation There is One Vehicle only, and refreshing is the Eightfold Path of Righteousness "2

Mahāyāna and Ekayāna are used synonymously m all the Mahayana texts The idea of likening the Buddha's teaching into an instrument of conveyance was doubtless suggested by that of crossing the stream of Samsāra and reaching the other side of Nirvana The Mahayana stands contrasted to the Hinayana, and the Ekayāna to the Dviyāna (twofold vehicle) The Dviyāna comprises Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas, whereas the Ekayāna is meant for Bodhsattvas The readers of the Lankāvatāra are naturally Mahayanists who have a penetrating insight into the nature of all things, know well the distinction between words and their meaning, and lead others to share also properly in the bliss of No-form (animita-sukha). Those of the two Yānas are

ı

² P 204

^{*} Based on p 204, g 117.

^{*} P 195.

indeed free from the thought of an ego-substance known as Satkäyadrishti, have no doubt(vicikitsa) as to what they have realised within themselves, and do not wish for any external rewards accruing from their observance of morality (silavrata-parāmarśa); but they have not yet reached the realm of the inconceivable wisdom which belongs to the inner life of the Tathagata; and for this reason they have no desire to benefit others or to sacrifice themselves for the sake of others. They rest in the enjoyment of their Samādhi, for in them a great compassionate heart has not been stirred up as is the ease of the Mahayana Bodhisattva. The latter is a follower of the Ekayāna.

Besides this Ekayāna and Dviyāna, the Mahayana sutras generally speak of Triyāna, which consists of the Śrāvaka-yāna, Pratyekabuddha-yāna, and Bodhisattva-yāna. But we must remember that the Ekayāna has really nothing to do with the number of Yānas though eka means "one"; eka in this case rather means "oneness," and Ekayāna is the designation of the doctrine teaching the transcendental oneness of things, by which all beings inclusive of the Hinayanists and Mahayanists are saved from the bondage of existence. So we have.

"My Mahāyāna is not a vehicle, or a voice, or letters; nor is it what may be termed truth, or emancipation, or realm of no-shadows

"Yet when one is taken into the Mahāyāna one enjoys the sense of perfect freedom issuing from the Samādhi, and one can transform oneself into any form one may wish and, adorned with flowers, become absolute master of all things."

This is the positive view of Mahāyāna or Ekayāna, and from another point of view which has been designated transcendental, these assertions concerning the Yāna are surely conventional, they are for the benefit of the ignorant.

"I preach the Triple Vehicle, the One Vehicle, and no-

² Tathägatäcıntya-gatı-mshaya-gocara p 117 ff ⁸ P. 187. az 1–2

Vehicle, but they are all meant for the ignorant, the littlewitted, and for the wise who are addicted to the enjoyment of quietude.

"The gate of the ultimate truth is beyond the dualism of cognition (vijfiapti); when it is abiding in the realm of no-shadows, how can there be the establishment of the Triple Vehicle!"

Further we have:

"The Vehicle for the Gods, the Brahma-Vehicle, the Vehicle for Śrāvakas, one for Tathagatas, and one for Pratyekabuddhas—these Vehicles I preach.

"As long as mind evolves, these vehicles cannot be done away with; when it experiences a revulsion (parawritti), there is neither vehicle nor driver.

"I speak of a variety of vehicles, but there is no real establishment of them; I speak of a variety of vehicles in order to induce the ignorant

"There are three forms of emancipation; realisation that there is no self-substance in anything, knowledge of sameness, and the liberation from evil desires

"Like a piece of wood drifting in the ocean, tossed about by the waves. the Śrāvaka, weak in wisdom, is tossed about by appearances.

"[The Śrāvakas] are indeed disjoined from these outstanding evil passions, but still under bondage to the passions arising from memory (vāsanā); drunk with the liquor of Samādhi, they tarry in the world of non-outflowings

"For them there is as yet no reaching the utmost limits of that world, nor is there any more sliding-back. For him who is thoroughly absorbed in Samādhi there is no hope even unto eternity for his awakening therefrom

"Like a drunken man who is awakened only after the effect of the liquor has disappeared, the Śrāvakas will realise, when they are awakened, my body known as the Buddhadharma" "22"

² P. 65, gg 131-132.

² Pp. 134-145.

Lastly, what is the path of the Ekayana? How does one realise it?

"The way to realise the path of the Ekayāna is to understand that the process of perception is due to discrimination, when this discrimination no longer takes place, and when one abides in the suchness of things, there is the realisation of the Vehicle of Oneness. This Vehicle has never been realised by anybody, by the Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, or the Brahmans, except indeed by myself. Therefore, it is called the Vehicle of Oneness."

Why does the Buddha speak of the Triple Vehicle, and not of the Vehicle of Oneness? This is asked by Mahamati. Answers the Buddha "There is no truth of Parinirvana to be realised by the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas all by themselves, therefore, I do not preach them the Vehicle of Their emancipation is made possible only by means of the Tathagata's guidance, discretion, discipline, and direction; it does not take place by them alone have not yet made themselves free from the hindrance of knowledge (sneyavarana) and the working of memory, they have not yet realised the truth that there is no self-substance in anything, nor have they attained the inconceivable transformation-death (acintyparinamacyuti) For these reasons I do not preach the Vehicle of Oneness I preach the Triple Vehicle to the Śrāvakas When their evil habit of memory is all purgated, when they have an insight into the nature of all things that have no self-substance, and when they are awakened from the intoxicating result of Samadhi which comes from the evil habit of memory, they rise from the state of non-outflowings When they are thus awakened, they will supply themselves with all the moral provisions on a plane which surpasses the state of non-outflowings where they have hitherto remained "22

¹ Pp. 138-184.

P. 184

2 The Five Deadly Sins1

The following five deeds are regarded by Buddhism as the worst offences to be committed by its followers murder of the mother, (2) of the father, (3) of the Arhat. (4) disturbing the peace of the Brotherhood, and (5) making the Buddha bleed with an evil motive They are called the "five immediate or uninterrupted sins" because the offender is to be subjected to an uninterrupted series of tortures in hell The Lankavatara gives this its opposite interpretation as follows "Who is the mother of all beings? Thirst (or Desire, trishnā) which is regenerative and, accompanied by pleasure and greediness, is the nursing mother The fatherly quality of ignorance (avidyā) causes one to be born in the community (or hamlet) of the six houses (āyatana-grāma) When the root of these two is cut off it is called the slaving of father and mother. To extirpate completely the passions that pursue a man like a deadly enemy and excite him furiously like a poisoned rat-this is the slaving of the Arhat What is the breaking-up of the Brotherhood? To destroy completely the root of mutuality and solidarity that holds together the five Skandhas-this is the breaking-up of the Brotherhood O Mahamati, to destroy completely the system of eight⁸ Vijnanas which perceives an external world as constructed on the principles of individuality and universality altogether independent of mind, and to do this by means of a discrimination which is injurious [to the working of the Vijfiāna system] but which is productive of a triple emancipation devoid of the

¹ P 138 et seq ² Pañcānantarām

^{*} It is significant that Sung has here "seven" instead of "eight". The eighth Vijāāna is the Alaya where a revulsion (paraviriti) takes place and consequently a complete change of one's spiritual outlook. When the Mahayanists refer to the doctrine of mind-only, this mind ultimately means the Alaya, or eighth Vijāna, for it is here that memory (vāsanā), since the beginningless past, is stored up from which the whole external world evolves outflowings (anasrava),—this is called an "Immediate" (anantarvaka), because it causes the bleeding of the Buddhabody of the Vijnanas with an evil motive.

- "O Mahāmati, these are the inner five "Immediates." For those who commit these deeds, be they sons or daughters of a good family, there is an immediate realisation of the truth
- "Again, O Mahāmatı, I will tell you about the external 'Immediates,' so that you and other Bodhisattvas may not in the future harbour any doubt about them By the external 'Immediates' I mean those mentioned in the sutras Those who commit those deeds will never have any sort of realisation of the triple emancipation (vimokshatrava). except those who attain to the realisation by the superadded power (adhishthana) of the Transformation-Buddha When the Śrāvaka supported by the power of a Bodhisattva or by that of a Tathagata sees others committing deeds of the 'Immediate' nature, and, wishing to make them abandon their evil deeds, so that they will be free from the yoke of their errors, is moved to wake them up, he is supported by the supernatural power of the Transformation-Buddha¹ and will attain realisation But there is no such realisation for those who are simply addicted to the 'Immediate' deeds. But he will have realisation (abhisamaya) who, understanding the doctrine that all things are no more than the manifestations of mind, abandons the view that there really is a world of particulars where the body, property, and the abode, are distinguished, cuts himself off from the idea of an ego-

¹ The theory of Transformation-Buddha is also illustrated in the following classification of the Arhats "There are three kinds, (1) those who are single-mindedly intent on walking the path of quietude, (2)) those who, disciplining themselves in a life of enlightenment, lay up a store of ment, and (3) those who are forms of the Transformation-Buddha The class one is of Sravakas, but the other two are of Bodhsattvas and the transformations of the Buddha who manifest themselves in consequence of skilful means derived from their original vows and also in order to adorn the assembly of the Buddhas " (P. 120)

substance and what belongs to it, befriends good companions whenever and wherever they are met who will induce him to another world, and is able to release himself from the faults of self-discrimination. It is thus said

"Thirst is indeed the mother, and ignorance is the father, when from the understanding of an objective world there rises Buddha-knowledge

"The passions are the Arhat, and the five Skandhaaggregates are the Brotherhood, as these and no other 'Immediates' are to be destroyed, here is indeed a set of deeds called 'Immediate'."

In this quotation I wish to draw the reader's attention to the reference to nirmita-adhishthana The term is somewhat casually introduced here, but the idea indicated here is an important one, for it shows that there has been since the early days of Buddhism a notion that not only the Tathagata but even a Bodhısattva when he reaches a higher state of spirituality is able to manifest himself in a variety of forms if necessary for the welfare and salvation of all beings. If a Bodhisattva wishes to save a wretched drunkard, for instance, he may turn himself into one of his companions if he thinks that is the best way to approach him and awaken him from the wretchedness of his position. For when the Bodhisattva remains in his original purity and, saintliness, the drunkard may not come within the range of his moral influence, like seeks like, and consequently drunkards find it easier to associate with one another, they hate a mixed society, especially with him who is decidedly opposed to them and openly anxious to save their souls in Buddhism, the Bodhisattva in his apparent transformation puts on the garb of a drunkard himself and mixing himself with his bacchanalian friends he awaits a chance Perhaps he may show that he has been regenerated and raised to a higher plane of spirituality His friends may now wonder how a drunkard could be so reformed, and so on When this wonderment is once grafted into the consciousness of his drunkard-friend, the Bodhisattva will redouble his efforts, and making use of his "skilful means" (undua), see to it that the grafted idea at first occupying only an obscure corner of the intoxicated consciousness, a former friend of the Bodhisattva, strike root gradually, stezdily grow, and finally cause a sudden awakening (paravritti) in the soul that was hitherto in a most wretched state of spirituality, or rather of non-spirituality. This Bodkisattva who in this case has proved to be an instrument of salvation is said to be a transformation-body of the Tathagata led by his supernatural power (adhishthana). The shilful means he has resorted to here is technically known as samānārihata (同事 in Chinese), engaging in the same work. which is a kind of proletarian morality. The aristocracy of saintship cannot penetrate into the depths of an ordinary soul and to understand this a Bodhisattva has to become an ordinary character himself. The doctrine of Upāya-kauśalya ("skilful means") is an interesting one in the evolution of Mahayana Buddhism. The thought is organically and intimately connected with the great compassionate heart that constitutes the centre of existence I

3. The Six Paramitas (p. 236 ff)

This is one of the marks most characteristically distinguishing the Mahayana from the Hinayana. In most Mahayana sutras the six Pāramitās are stated specifically as meant for Bodhisattvas. All the virtues that are meant for Bodhisattvahood are included herein, and, indeed, it was as the result of the six Pāramitās that the Buddha was able to gain the grand enlightenment about two thousand and five hundred years ago. If he did not practise all these virtues to their utmost in his past lives he would never have gained an insight into the truth of existence. Pāramītā may mean either "reaching the other shore," or "perfection" In the Chinese sutras it is in most cases left untranslated as 波羅蜜 (pa-lo-mi).

¹ See also the Soddhornopundorito, Kern's English Translation, p. 410 et seq., where the Bodhisattva Avalohitesvara and his transformations are described.

The six Pāramitās are · (1) charity (dāna), (2) morality (śila), (3) patience or humility (kshānti), (4) energy, or strenuosity (vīrya), (5) meditation (dhyāna), (6) wisdom, or intuitive understanding of the ultimate truth of things (prajāā)

The Lankāvatāra gives three kinds of Pāramitās (1) worldly, (2) super-worldly, and (3) super-worldly m its highest degree The worldly kind is practised by worldly people who cling to the idea of an ego and what belongs to it, they are unable to shake themselves off the fetters of dualism such as being and non-being, and all the virtues they would practice are based on the idea of gaining something material as a reward They may gain certain psychic powers and after death be born in the heaven of Brahma. The super-worldly kind is practised by Śravakas and Pratyekabuddhas who, clinging to the idea of Nirvana, are determined to attain it at all costs, they are like the worldly people who are attached to the enjoyment of egotism Pāramitās that are super-worldly in the highest sense are practised by a Bodhisattva who understands that the world is dualistically conceived, because of the discriminating mind, and who is detached from erroneous imaginations and wrong attachments of all kinds, such as mind, form, characters, etc He would practise the virtue of charity solely to benefit all sentient beings and to lead them to a blissful state of mind To practise morality without forming any attachment to the condition in which he binds himselfthis is his Sila-paramita Knowing the distinction between subject and object, and yet quietly to accept it without waking any sense of attachment or detachment, this is the Bodhısattva's Kshāntı-pāramıtā To exercise himself most intently throughout the night, to conform himself to all the requirements of discipline, and not to evoke and discriminating mind—this is his Vīrya-pāramitā. Not to cling to the philosopher's view of Nirvana and to be free from discrimination—this is Dhyāna-pāramitā. As to Prajñā-pāramitā, it is not to evoke a discriminating mind within oneself, nor to review the world with any kind of analytical understanding, not to fall into dualism, but to cause a turning at the basis of consciousness. It is not to destroy the working of a past karma, but to exert oneself in the exercise of bringing about a state of self-realisation. This is Prajñā-pāramitā

4 The Four Dhyanas (pp 97 f)

The classification of Dhyāna under four heads has been treated previously in my Essays in Zen Buddhism,¹ and I will not repeat it here except to quote the gāthās which appear after the prose

"There is (1) Dhyāna that surveys the meaning, (2) Dhyāna practised by the ignorant, (3) Dhyāna depending on suchness, and (4) the Tathagatas' pure Dhyāna

"The practiser (yogm) may see [while in meditation] something in the shape of the sun or moon, something like a lotus-flower, or like the lowest region, he may see something resembling the sky, or fire, or a picture, or something heaped up (pūnjān?)

"All these forms, a variety of things, but lead the yogin to the path of the philosophers, and make him fall into the realm of Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas

"When all these are abandoned and he is in the state of no-shadows, all the Buddhas will come together from their lands and with their shining hands anoint the head of the blessed with unguents, his [mental] state is in full conformity with suchness $(tathat\bar{a})$ "

Further down there is another statement concerning the attainment of the Dhyanas

² Series I, p 81 et seq.

³ P. 98

"All the Dhyanas, Apramanas,, Arupas, Samadhis, the Cessation of Thought,—all these are mental constructions, nothing of the sort is really attainable

"The fruit resulting from the life of a Srotāpanna, of a Sakridāgāmin, or of an Anāgāmin, or of an Arhat—all this is mental confusion

"The Dhyāna practised, Dhyāna itself, and the subject of Dhyāna, the abandonment, the seeing of the truth,—all this is discrimination, he who understands is released"

5 On Meat-eating (p 244 et seq.)

The motive for having this chapter appended to the Lankavatara, when it has no organic connection with the text proper, seems to he in a passage towards the end According to it, the Buddha evidently dislikes the idea of being thought of as the one who has permitted meat-eating among his followers He says, there may be some unenlightened followers of mine after my death, who, not knowing the spirit of my teaching and training, may wrongly conclude that I allowed them to eat meat and that I myself ate it This would be disastrous For how can those who are abiding in a merciful heart, disciplining themselves in asceticism, and trying to follow the path of Mahayana, tell others to est animal food? Indeed. I have elsewhere given rules as to the eating and not eating of meat, ten rules for avoiding and three rules for accepting it But in this Lankavatara as well as m the Hasirkakshya, Mahamegha, Nervana, and Angulimälika sutras, meat-eating is absolutely forbidden Not only in the past, but in the future and now, all my followers are to shun animal food no matter how it has been prepared If there is any one who would accuse me of eating meat myself and allowing others to eat it, he will surely be born in an undesirable region Holy people refuse to eat even the food of ordinary people, how much more so with meat-eating! Their food is the food of truth

¹ P 121.

(dharmāhāra), the Tathagata's Dharmakāya is supported by that ¹

According to this, there must have been the accepting of meat-food among the followers of Buddhism in the time when the Lankāvatāra was compiled Evidently, the Buddha did not object to their eating it if the animal was not especially killed for them. This caused unfavourable comments among the other religions, for instance, the Lokāyatas, and the Buddhists naturally did not like them, and this must have started the new effort to prohibit meat-eating altogether among the Mahayana advocates.

The following are the reasons for not eating animal food as recounted in this sutra.

- (1) All sentient beings are constantly going through a cycle of transmigration and stand to one another in every possible form of relationship. Some of these are living at present even as the lower animals. While they so differ from us now, they all are of the same kind as ourselves. To take their lives and eat their flesh is like eating our own Human feelings cannot stand this unless one is quite callous. When this fact is realised even the Rakshasas may cease from eating meat. The Bodhisattva who regards all beings as if they were his only child cannot indulge in flesh-eating.
- (2) The essence of Bodhisattvaship is a great compassionate heart, for without this the Bodhisattva looses his being. Therefore, he who regards others as if they were himself (sarva-bhūtātmabhūta), and whose pitying thought (kripātma) is to benefit others as well as himself, ought not to eat meat. He is willing for the sake of the truth to sacrifice himself, his body, his life, his property, he has no greed for anything; and full of compassion towards all sentient beings and ready to store up good merit, pure and free from wrong discrimination, how can he have any longing for meat? How can he be affected by the evil habits of the carnivorous races?

- (3) This cruel habit of eating meat causes an entire transformation in the features of a Bodhisattva, whose skin emits an offensive and poisonous odour. The animals are keen enough to sense the approach of such a person, a person who is like a Rakshasa himself, and would be frightened and run away from him. He who walks in compassion (maitrī-vihāri), therefore, ought not to eat meat
- (4) The mission of a Bodhisattva is to create among his fellow-beings a kindly heart and friendly regard for Buddhist teaching. If they see him eating meat and causing terror among animals, their hearts will naturally turn away from him and from the teaching he professes. They will then lose faith in Buddhism
- (5) If a Bodhisattva eats meat, he cannot attain the end he wishes, for he will be alienated by the Devas, the heavenly beings who are his spiritual sympathisers and protectors. His mouth will smell bad, he may not sleep soundly, when he awakes he is not refreshed, his dreams are filled with inauspicious omens, when he is in a deserted place, all alone in the woods, he will be haunted by evil spirits, he will be nervous, excitable at least provocations, he will be sickly, have no proper taste, digestion, nor assimilation, the course of his spiritual discipline will be constantly interrupted. Therefore, he who is intent on benefitting himself and others in their spiritual progress, ought not to think of partaking of animal flesh.
- (6) Animal food is filthy, not at all clean as a nourishing agency for the Bodhisattva. It readily decays, putrifies, and taints. It is filled with pollutions, and the odour of it when burned is enough to injure anybody with refined taste for things spiritual.
- (7) The eater of meat shares in this pollution, spiritually Once King Simhasaudāsa who was fond of eating meat began to eat human flesh, and this alienated the affections of his people. He was thrown out of his own kingdom. Sakrendra, a celestial being, once turned himself.

SOME OF THE IMPORTANT THEORIES 371

into a hawk and chased a dove because of his past taint as a meat-eater. Meat-eating not only thus pollutes the life of the individual concerned, but also his descendants

(8) The proper food of a Bodhisattva, as was adopted by all the previous saintly followers of truth, is rice, barley, wheat, all kinds of beans, clarified butter, oil, honey, molasses, and sugar prepared in various ways. Where no meat is eaten, there will be no butchers taking the lives of living creatures, and no unsympathetic deeds (gataghrinā) will be committed in the world

A SANSKRIT-CHINESE-ENGLISH GLOSSARY

In the following Glossity, the figures after each Sanskrit term refer to pages in the present work, the figures in parentheses to pages and lines in the Sanskrit text of the Lankdratära, thus 28—7,8 means p 28, lines 7 and 8, of the Sanskrit text, the figures accompanying "The Sagalthalam" refer to the verses T=the T'ang translation, W=the Wei, and S=the Sung

A SANSKRIT-CHINESE-ENGLISH GLOSSARY

Akanıshtha (-bhavana), 208, 324, 327, 329, 331, 332, 346, 色究 竟天 阿迦默吒天; Akamshtha literally means "not the least" or "not the smallest," and the heaven so designated is regarded as situated at the highest end of the Rupadhātu or Rūpaloka, the world of Form According to Dr Unrai Wogihara (Mahāvyutpatti, "Notes," p 306), aka must have been originally agha, and agha ordinarily means "evil" or "pain." but Buddhists understood it in the sense of form, perhaps because pain is an inevitable accompaniment of form Hence the Chinese 色究竟. that is, the limit or end of form In the Lankavatāra (28-Kāmadhātau katham kena na vibuddho 7.8), we have vadāhi me, akanishthe kim artham tu vītarāgeshu budhyase 云何於欲界,不成等正學,何故色究竟,離染得菩 The idea that the Bodhisattva attains his supreme 提(T) enlightenment when he is reborn in the Akanishtha Heaven and not while he is on earth, i.e., in the world of Desire (kāmadhātu), recurs throughout the Lankāvatāra. Kāmadhātau tathārūpye na vai buddho vibudhyate, rūpadhātvakanıshtheshu vitarageshu budhyate ("Sagathakam," 774), 欲界及無色, 不於彼成佛, 色界究竟天, 離欲得菩提 So long as we have desire (raga) based on egoistic impulses, we are barred from really spiritual realisation; and when we have it, we are no more in this world of Desire where existence is too deeply tinged with indivi-The Sambhogakāya, therefore, belongs to the heaven where form or individuality reaches its utmost end as the spirits here are no more bound by the mutually exclusive sense of a bodily existence Does the belief in the attamment of Supreme Enlightenment upon one's being reborn in the Pure Land come from this notion of the Akanishtha Heaven? For references in the Lankāvatāra see pp 28—7, 8, 33—15, 16, 51—8; 56—9; 215—14; 269—4; 361—6. Akanishtho virājate, 324, 色光色激素, That this Heaven is filled with brightness is natural, seeing that form obstracts and excludes while light intermingles, and the Akanishtha is the abode of Shining Buddhas and Bodhisattvas

Akshara, 109, 文字, word, letter, syllable. Tattvam hy aksharavarjitam (48—12), 異實際文字(T), "The truth is detached from letters" Niraksharatvāt tattvasya (190—6), 異實之法離文字故(T), "because of the truth being detached from letters" Na ca mahāmate tathāgatā aksharapatitam dharmam dešayanti (194—3), 大髮如來不說確文字法(T), "The Tathāgatas do not preach the doctrine that has degenerated into mere words." Aksharasamatā. 351. 字平等, sameness of letters

Acalā, 78, 225, 262, ABBR, immovable, the eighth of the ten stages of Bodhisattvahood When the Bodhisattva reaches here, he gets rid of discrimination and has a thorough understanding of the nature of existence, realising why it is like māyā, etc., how discrimination starts from our innate longing to see existence divided into subject and object, and how the mind and what belongs to it are stirred up, he would then practise all that pertains to the life of a good Buddhist, leading to the path of truth all those who have not yet come to it This is the Bodhisattva's Nirvana which is not extinction See above, p 215

Acitta, 201, 283, 手心, no-mind, beyond mentation; Acittatā or acittatva, 284, 286, 手心, no-mind-ness Such abstract terms as these are frequently met with in the sutras belonging to the Prayñāpāramitā class of Mahayana literature

Acintya, 146, 201, 317, 不思議, beyond mentation; Acintyajiiana, 208, 不思議智, knowledge or wisdom that is beyond the understanding, that is, 不思議諸佛如來智慧境界, (acintyajñānajinagocaravishaya); Acintyaparināmacyuti, 212, 348, 361, 不思議變易死, death of mysterious transformation or inconceivable transformation-death. This has nothing to do with corporeal existence. It happens only to such spiritual beings as Bodhisattvas; Acintyavāsanāparināma, 178, 不思議意變, mysterious transformation that takes place within the mind (citta), making it comprehend an external world of particular objects

Ajāta, 227, 不生, not born

Ajñānakarmatrıshnā, 167n, 無明·業·爱, ignorance, karma, and desire—the three motive powers that keep the present world a-going Ajñānatrıshnākarmādih samkalādhyātmiko bhavet (203—14), 無明與愛業是則內釣鎖 (T'ang). "Ignorance, desire, karma, etc are the inner fetters" (See also 68—11, 177—18) Bhagavān apyajñānatrishnākarmavikalpapratyayebhyo jagata utpattim varnayati (197—14, 15), 世尊亦說無明愛業妄想為綠生譜世間 (Sung) "According to the Buddha, too, the world rises from such causal combinations as ignorance, desire, karma, and discrimination."

Atyantaprakritipariśuddhi, 180n, 畢竟自清淨; Tathāgata-garbhah prakritiprabhāsvaraviśuddhah (77—15), 如來藏本性明亮清淨 That the original essence of the Garbha is pure and transparent, means that it is absolutely neutral and transcends all the logical categories that are derived from the dualism of subject and object This is Suchness, the state of being unborn

Advaya, 123n, 354, 無二 or 不二, non-duality; Advasta, 166, 287, 不二 or 無二, non-duality

Admgamāvabodha, 273, 體知, realisation.

Adhipatiphala, 323, 增上果, one of the Pancaphalam, see under Phala

Adhishthāna, 79, 203 ff, 356, 363, 365, 加持力, or 威神力, the spiritual power of the Buddha which is added to a Bodhisattva and sustains him through his course of discipline This is one of the conceptions peculiar to Mahayana Buddhism Amitāyushas tathāgatasya pūrvaprandhānādhishthanena (Sukhāvatīvyūha, 55—14), 無以咨佛 威神力代, 本原力故 (Samghavarman) "Owing to the sustaining power of the original vows made by the Tathāgata Amitāyus" Aśraushīd rāvano . .tathāgatādhishthānāt (2—10), 和婆那以佛神力聞佛語(T)

Anāgāmin, 268, 阿那含(不疑), one who returns not Anāgāmiphala. 148, 阿那含果(不疑果), the state of not-returning. One of the four "fruits" of the Buddhist ascetic life (沙門 śramana), which are 1 Srotaāpanna, 須陀道(預流), he who has entered upon the stream; 2 Sakridāgāmin, 斯陀含(一來), he who returns once to this life; 3 Anāgāmin, 阿那含(不認), he who never returns, and 4 Arhat 孤淡, he who has attained the highest end of the Buddhist life

Anabhmirvritti, 227, 無起, not rising

Anavabodha, 274, 不覺, not knowing Vastusvabhāvābhinivešah svacittadrisyamūtiānavabodhāt pravartate (100—4,5), 引自性相計著者, 從不覺自心現分齊生(S); 何老執 若性事體相, 謂不如實知唯是自心見外提界故(W); 執着 試法自性相者不覺自心所現故起(T). "One's attachment to the self-nature of realities takes place owing to one's not knowing the truth that what is presented [as an external world] is no more than the mind itself" Observe how variously vastusvabhāva here is translated by the Chinese translators

Anābhāsa, sometimes Nirābhāsa, 168, 無影像, 無影, 無相, See also Nirābhāsa

Anābhoga, 43, 無功用, 無開發 (Sung), effortless, purposeless, not being aware of conscious strivings Anābhogapūrvapranidhānavišvarūpamanisadrišavishayānantalakshanapracāram (89—6,7), 以無功用本顧力故, 如如意實書現一切無邊境界(T), 依本顯力,如如意實,無量境界修行之相自然行故(W),無開發本顧,譬如衆色摩尼,境

界無邊相行(S) "Owing to the original vows which have no purposeful motives, he manifests himself like a many-coloured gem in all possible conditions and with infinitely varied signs." Anābhogacandrasūryamanimahābhūtacaryā gatigamāh (161—1, 2), 無方便行, 猶日月摩尼四大(S); 譬如四大日月摩尼,自然而行(W);以無功用,種種變化, 光明照曜, 如日月摩尼地水大風(T). "Their course of life is purposeless like the moon, the sun, the gem, and the four elements" Anābhogacaryā, 99, 216, 222, 346, 無功用行, 無開發行, purposeless deeds, a life free from conscious strivings One of the very significant conceptions of Mahayana Buddhism

Anāsrava, 276, 無源, non-flowing. Āsrava (有漏) is something which cozes or flows out of the mind and spoils generally the upward career of the Buddhist life; to get rid of this is the aim of the ascetic discipline. The four principal poisonous outflows are lust (kāma), clinging to life (bhāva), speculation (drishti), and ignorance (avidyā) Anāsrava is a state free from these impurities Anāsravadhātu, 349, 360, 無漏界, realm of non-outflowings

Animitta, 97, 259, 287, 954, 無相, formless, no-form, devoid of appearances It is generally used in connection with śūnyatā and aprandistam Animitta—nirābhāsa Animitta—patha (or animittādhishthāna), 346, 無相違, 無相處, path or abode of formlessness; Animittasukha, 358, 無相樂, bliss of formlessness Svātmānam ca samyaganimittasukhena prīnayanti parāmśca samyanmahāyāne pratishthāpayanti (195—7,9), 彼則能以正無相樂,而自娛樂,不等大乘建立衆生(S);爾時自身於無相樂亦而自娛樂,不等大乘建立衆生知(W),則能令自身受無相樂亦能令他安生大乘(T) "They will thus make themselves properly enjoy the bliss of formlessness and also make others properly abide in the Mahāyāna"

Anirodha, 354, 不減, not subject to destruction; Aniro-

dhānutpāda, 292 ff, 354, 不減不生, immortality, being above birth and death.

Anishthita, 227, 無盡, not extinguished

Anujāta, 342n, 隨生, born after Yathā tathāgatatathatā 'nāgatā 'gatā evam hi subhūtitathatā 'nāgatā 'gatā, evam hi subhūtih sthavirastathāgatatathatām anujātah (Praj p 307—1, 2), 如來與如無來無去,本性不生,善現與如亦無來無去,本性不生,故善現解如來生 (Hsuan-chuang),如如來如不來不去,須菩提如,從本己來,亦不來不去,是故須菩提隨如來生 (Kumārajīva) For the English translation see The Studies, pp 242 f

Anuttara-samyak-sambodhi 206, 287, 349, 阿耨多羅三藐三 菩提, 無上正等正覺, the supreme enlightenment realised by the Buddha

Anutpatti, 141, 不生, no-birth

Anutpattikadharma, 228n, 法不生, the eight The eight ways in which the conception of no-birth is established are as follows adau tattve 'nyatve avalakshane svayamathänyathäbhäve, samklese 'tha viseshe kshäntir anutpattidharmoktā (Sūtrālamlāra, x1, 52), 本來及真實, 異相及自 相,自然及無異,染汗差別八,(Prabhākaramıtra) (1) Things (dharmas) have never been born because the idea of birth-and-death does not obtain in reality that which precedes there is that which follows, and there is no difference between antecedents and consequents, and no absolute beginning can be assigned to anything If anything is already here nothing else can take its place unless we assume an independent origin, which is impos-(4) The notion of self-substance comes from the imagination which is not based on reality (5) Because of relative dependence (paratantra) we assume natural origin, but in reality there is nothing that can be called self-substance (6) The absolute oneness of perfect knowledge (parinishpanna) excludes the idea of otherness (7) When the knowledge of complete destruction (kshayamana) is realised there is never again the assertion of evil passions (8) In the Dharmakāya of all Buddhas there is perfect unity, and no differentiating individuation. When this eightfold notion of no-birth is realised one attains the recognition of the birthlessness of all things

٤

1

Anutpattikadharmakshānti, 75, 107, 125, 126n, 211, 226, 227f, 287, 298, 無生法忍 This is the recognition that nothing has been born or created in this world, that when things are seen yathabhutam from the point of view of absolute knowledge, they are Nirvana itself, are not at all subject to birth-and-death In this connection Kshanti seems to be somewhat differently understood from when it is used in opposition to Jñana as in the Abhidharmakośa Mahayana Kshānti is an independent notion, and final as far as its spiritual value is concerned, for when one gams Anutpattikadharmakshänti one has realised the ultimate truth of Buddhism The attainment of this Kshānti is adhigama, realisation (12-10).

Anutpanna, 166, 227, 無生, unborn Anutpannasvabhāvah, 122, 自性不生. If there is anything to be called selfsubstance, it cannot be subject to birth-and-death

Anutpāda, 34, 43, 94n, 96, 123n, 168, 239, 283 ff, 不生, nobirth Anutpādam sarvadharmānām. 諸法不生. pādo nīrvānam, 295, 涅槃者不生, Nīrvana means no-birth. (Anything that is subject to birth and death is not Nirvana)

Anupalabdhya, 306, 不可得, unattainable, unknowable; Anupalabhyamānatva, 286, 不可得, unknowability. Bhāvasvabhāvalakshanāsattvāt sarvadharmā nopalabhyante (115—16, 17), 謂一切法無性相故, 不可得故 (T), "All things are beyond the reach of knowledge because there are no such things as self-substance and its outward signs " Cıttamātravınırmuktam brahmādir nopalabhyate (210-1), 若離於心者, 一切(梵天等) 不可得 (T), "Apart from the Mind-only such notions as Brahma, etc. are not to be known "

0

- Anubhāva, 203, 356, 威神力, 神力'威力, Buddhānubhāvena utthāyāsanāt (22—2, 3), 承佛神力從座而起, "Havmg risen from his seat through the power of the Buddha"
- Anulomikikshānti, 126n, 柔順忍, Kshānti of obedience
- Anuvyañjana, 352, (八十)随好, secondary marks of excellence which are reckoned eighty For detail see the Mahāvyutpatti, xviii
- Anyonyahetuka, 191, 互為因 mutuality, Dve 'pyete 'bhinnalakshane 'nyonyahetuke (37—18), 此二融無異相互爲因 "These two have no differentiating marks, they condition one another"
- Aparapraneya, 73, 202, 不由於他, not depending upon another Svapratyātmabuddhyā vieārayatyaparapraneyah (133—10, 11), 自覺觀察不由於他 (8) "Not depending upon another he reflects with his own intelligence"
- Apavāda, 157, 165, 180, 247, 誹謗, controversy, refutation Kudrishtisamāropasyānupalabdhipravicayābhāvād apavādo bhavati (71—6, 7), 於諸惡見所建立法, 求不可得, 不善觀察,遂生誹謗(T) "A controversy takes place when the impossible nature of a proposition based on wrong views is not clearly comprehended"
- Apracarita (-śūnyatā), 288, 無行 (空), Emptiness of nonaction, one of the seven Emptinesses
- Apratishthita, 95, 無所住, not-abiding This idea of not abiding anywhere is more in evidence in the Prajāāpāra-mitā Sūtra than in the Lankāvatāra = anabhinivishta, = anābhoga, = apranihita, etc
- Apratisamkhyānirodha, 264, 293, 手擇槭, annihilation taking place without premeditated efforts One of the three Asamskritas(無為)
- Apramhita, 138, 141, 259, 287, 無額, being without constrained efforts One of the three Vimokshas
- Apramāna, 39, 148, 368, 無量, immeasurable Apramānāni, 126n, 四無量心, the "four virtues of infinite greatness"

are (1) mastrī 慈, (2) karuņā 悲, (3) mudstā 喜, and (4) upekshā 捨

Apravishtam, 110, 不入, not entered Udakacandra ivāpravishtanirgatam (193—5), 如水中月不入不出(T), "like the moon on water, which is neither in it nor out of it." Apravitti, 127, 227, 無轉, not changing, not taking place.

Apsarā, 69, 70, 来女.

Abhāva, 103, 269, 305, 353, 非有, non-reality Abhāvasva-bhāva, 227, lacking in self-substance. 無性爲性, (Śikshānanda), 無所有性, (Kumārajīva).

Abhijñā, 39, 66, 97, 150, 210, 六神通, six supernatural faculties In the Lankāvatāra these are generally found together with the tenfold self-control (vasita) and the ten powers (bala) as possessed by a full-fledged Bodhisattva. The six Abhijñās are 1 Dwyam cakshus, divine sight, 天眼通, 2 Dwyam śrotra, divine hearing, 天耳通; 3 Paracittajñāna, the faculty of reading others' thoughts, 他心道, 4 Pūrvanivāsānusmritijñāna, the faculty of remembering one's former abodes or lives, 宿命通; 5 Riddhividhijñāna, the knowledge that transforms one's modes of life at will, 如意通, 6 Asravakshayajñāna, the knowledge that destroys the evil outflows (impurities), 潘松通

Abhidhāna, 133, 語言, naming Abhidhānavinirmuktam abhidheyam na lakshyate (187—2), 若離於語言, 其義不可得 (T), 若離於言說, 亦無有所說 (S), 離於言語法, 可說不可得(W)

Abhidheya, 133, 義, meaning

Abhidheyavikalpa, 111, 所說分別, wrong discrimination regarding what is described, one of the twelve subjects of wrong discrimination (vikalpa)

Abhmirhara, 79, 行, (引發).

Abhmrvesa, 105, 128, 200, 執着, attachment Abhimvesa-samdhi, 113, 密執, close attachment Aparmito mahāmate sarvadharmānām yathārutārthābhimvesasamdhih (161—10-11), 大慧, 於一切法, 如言取義, 執着深密其數無量

(T); 無於一切豁法, 如所說義, 計著相談(S); 一切諸法, 相類不相顧相者... (W). "Innumerable, O Mahāmatı, are signs of close attachment to the world by taking letters as exactly corresponding to meaning" The Sutra enumerates a few of them as typical.

Abhinnalakshana. 191, 異相, differentiating marks

Abhilashana, 200, earnestly desiring, 專來 (T), 樂修 (W), 珍樂(S). The Sanskrit text has abhilakshana instead of abhilashana, but the Chinese translations seem to have read it differently. Svapratyātmāryajñānādhigamābhilashanatayā, 專求自證整智故 (T); "By earnestly seeking for the realisation of the supreme wisdom which is in one's inmost consciousness" (80—1, 2)

Abhilāpavikalpa, 111 f, 言政分別, wrong discrimination concerning sounds and expressions; one of the twelve Vikalpas Vicitrasvaragītamādhuryābhiniveśah (128—9, 10), 執著種程美妙音詞, 是名言說分別 (T); "getting attached to various pleasant sounds and songs—this is abhilāpavikalpa"

Abhisheka, 78, 流頂, anointed When the Bodhisattva reaches his last stage (dharmamegha) of self-discipline, he is anointed by the Buddhas with their own hands and formally inaugurated as one of them Dharmameghābhishekābhishiktās tathāgatapratyātmabhūmim adhigamya (123—6.7). 至法零地而受流頂入於佛地(T).

Abhisamaya, 321, 363, 現證, inner realisation This is more than an intellectual understanding of the truth, it is spiritual Buddhism abounds in terms of this order

Abhisambodha, 273, 證, being fully awake

Abhūtaparikalpa, 190, 虛妄分別, false judgment Arthavividhavaicitryābhūtaparikalpābhinivešān mahāmate vikalpah pravartamānah pravartate (150—9, 10), 種種義,種種不實妄想, 計署妄想生(S); 於種種境...計能所, 取虚妄執着, 起諸分別(T); 執着不實虛妄想者從見種種虛妄法生(W). "As a variety of false judgments is given to objects conceived in their multiplicity, there takes place a strong clinging [to the external world]; O Mahāmati, this is the way discrimination goes on asserting itself "

Amitābha-Buddha, 325, 無量光佛, often 無量壽佛.

Ayāna, 148, 非乘, triyānam ekayānam ca ayānam ca vadāmy aham (65—11), 我所立三乘, 一乘及非乘(T).

Arishta, 354, 無盡者, the imperishable

Arūpyacārın, 39, 無色行, formless deeds What this exactly means is difficult to know. Does it refer to the life in the world of no-form? or is it to be regarded as synonymous with anābhogacaryā? The mention of arūpya (-dṛishti) in connection with tīrthyadṛishṭi confirms the first interpretation.

Artha, 108 ff, 義, or 境, or 財, meaning, or object, or wealth.

When the term is used in the first sense, it stands contrasted to words or letters, and the latter are thought inadequate to fully describe the former When it means objects in general it is almost equivalent to the external world, which is, however, better expressed by Vishaya. Vishaya seems to have a more collective sense than Artha when both refer to the objective world.

Arthapravicayam, 367, 觀察義禪, one of the four Dhyānas mentioned on p 97, which consists in examining the meaning of a proposition or theory.

Arthavikalpa, 111 f, 財分別, one of the twelve Vikalpas (128—5). Suvarnarūpyavıvidharatnārthavıshayābhilāpaḥ, 謂取著種種金銀等實而起言說, (T); "To get attached to gold, sılver, and other various treasures and to the talking about them—this is discriminating about wealth (artha).

Arhat, 363n, 368, 阿羅漢, one who has realised the highest fruit of the ascetic life, the ideal saint of Hinayana Buddhism The Mahayana ideal is the Bodhisattva and not the Arhat, for the Bodhisattva does not enter into Nirvana like the Arhat, but stays in this world as long as there is even one of his fellow-beings left unsaved. Arhattva, 148, 羅漢, the state of being an Arhat.

Alakshana, 227, 無相, without marks or recognisable signs.

Alabdha, 173n, 不可得 Pu-k'o tê (不可得) is frequently used for na lakshyate as well as for na vidyate, and in these cases it simply means "not existing." But when Tattvam is spoken of as pu-k'o-tê (alabdha), it refers to its transcending the reach of relative knowledge or discursive understanding. Tattvam bhūtam niścayo nishthā prakritih svabhāvo 'nupalabdhiḥ tat tathālakshanam (228—12, 13), 真貨,(不虛),決定,完竟,根本,自性,(不)可得,是如如相(丁) "Truth, reality, certitude, limit, origin, self-nature, unattainability, incomprehensibility—these are the marks

Alātacakra 96, 旋火輪, fire-circle, one of the several comparisons adopted by the Lankāvatāra to illustrate the illusive nature of existence A real wheel or circle comes into view when a fire brand is rapidly turned round, but in reality there is no wheel, being a mere vision of Suchness " See also under Anupalabdhya

.Avalokiteśvara, 332, 观自在菩薩

Avastu, 119, 非物, non-reality, Sā ca na vastu nāvastu (108—9). 非即是物, 亦非非物(T)

Avikalpa, 106, 無分別, non-discriminating, Avikalpajñāna, 279, 296, 無分別智, non-discriminative wisdom, Avikalpaparacāra, 72, realm of non-discrimination, Avikalpapracārasthitāsya (9—12), 住無分別(T), 不住於分別心中(W).

Avidyā, 74, 81, 362, 無明, ignorance

Avidyamānatva, 284, 無所有, not existing Avidyamānatvena tasya samādhes tam samādhim na jānāti na samjānīte (Ashtasāhasrika, 24—8, 9), 如是睹空無所有故,於如是空無解無想(玄奘譯,大般若第五百三十八卷,縮刷,八十二丁,六行).

Avınāśa, 159, 不壞, not to be destroyed; Avınāśıta, 227, 無壞, not dissolved Samyagjñānam tathatā ca mahāmate avināśatvāt svabhāvah parinishpanno veditavyah (227—15-17),

正智如如,不可壞故,固成性(T) "As Right Knowledge and Suchness are indestructible, they are to be regarded as Perfect Knowledge, of the three Svabhāvas"

Ashtottaram padasatam, 40 f, 百八句, the 108 clauses, Ashtottaram prasnasatam, 38, 百八問, the 108 questions.

Asambhūta, 227, 無成, not combined

Asamskrita, 119, 264n, 279, 無為 The Hinayana philosophers divide existence into two main groups, Samskrita (有為法) and Asamskrita (無為法) The Samskrita comprises such dharmas as are tied to chains of causation and capable of producing effects, while the Asamskrita exists unconditioned The three dharmas belong to this head space (ākāśa), Nirvana, and a negative state due to the absence of proper conditions

Astināsti, 112, 116, 有無, being and non-being

Asvabhāva, 287, 無自性, being without self-nature, asvabhāva=sūnya=nairātma=anutpanna Asvabhāvatva, 39, 無自性, the state of being without self-nature

Ākāśa, 137, 264, 293, 303, 353, 藏空, sky, space.

Agata, 340, ※, come, arrived

Agantukleśa, 186, 客塵 Kleśa literally means "pain," "external dust," "affliction," or "something tormenting" and is translated as 煩惱 As there is nothing so tormenting spiritually as selfish evil desires and passions, kleśa has come to be understood chiefly in its derivative sense. In the present work the term is rendered "evil passion" arising from egotistic impulses, that is, from the conception of a permanent individual soul-substance. Here both the Tang and the Wei have 客塵, "external dust," for āgantu-kleśa, while the Wei has 煩惱 besides 客塵, as if the latter were not sufficient. For further account see under Kleśa

Ātman, 94, 180, 169, 289, 我, ego-soul; ātman=svabhāva= pudgala Ātmakatva, 134, 體性, self-substance Ātman means anything substantially conceived that remains eternally one, unchanged, and free When an ego-soul (pudgala) is thought as such, that constitutes the ātmadrish! (我是) When the reality of an individual object (dharma) as such is denied, this is what is meant by dharmanairātmya (法表我)

Atmaxāda. 138, theory of ego Tīrthakātmaxādopadešatulyas tathāgatagarbhopadešo na bhavatı (78—18, 79—1), 我說如來說. 不同外道所說之我 (T) "The tathāgatagarbha of which I speak is not like the doctrine of the ego maintained by the philosophers"

Ātmasukha, 141, 自樂, self-enjoyment Yathawa bālā ātmasukhanırvāṇābhilāshinah (237—10), 如恐癡凡夫為於自身求足意樂(W) "Like those ignorant people who seek after Nirvana for their self-enjoyment" Ātmahitam. 214, 自利, benefitting oneself.

Adarsavimba (or prativimba), 188, 競中像, mirror-image Adarsavimbadarsanavat (44—10), 穿如明鏡現象色像 (T); like a mirror reflecting images

Ādānavijāāna, 258. 阿陀那識, or 執持識

Anantarya, 363, 無間(素), the five most sinful deeds that result in the offender's being subjected to an "uninterrupted" series of tortures in hell

Abhūsvaravimāna. 261, 光音宮 or 極光辞天, a heaven, belonging to the world of Form (rūpaloka), where no sounds are heard according to a commentator, when the inhabitants wish to talk, a ray of pure light comes out of the mouth, which serves as speech

Āyatanagrāma, 362, 六良聚落, hamlet of six houses

Ārūpya, 148, 368, 無色定 There are four Samāpattis (等至 = coming together = mental collectedness) belonging to the world of No-form (arūpaloka) 1 Ākāšānantya-āyatanam 空無邊院 When the mind, separated from the realm of form and matter, is exclusively directed towards infinite space, it is said to be abiding in this form of concentration

١

2. Vijāānānantya。 設無邊處. When the mind going beyond infinite space is concentrated on the infinitude of consciousness it is said to be abiding in this Samāpatti.

3. Ālimcanya。 無所有處 When the mind going even beyond the realm of consciousness finds no special resting abode, it acquires the concentration called "knowing nowhere to be" 4 Naivasamjāānāsamjāa" 非想非形態 The first three Samāpattis are designated from the disciplinary point of view of the yogin himself, while the fourth gains its title in regard to the nature of the concentration which is neither in the sphere of mental activities nor out of it.

Ārya, 143n, 305, 聖人, or 賢聖, the wise as distinguished from the ignorant 無智 (avidvat), the simple-minded 愚夫 (bāla), the confused 迷者 (bhrānta), and also from the philosophers 外道 (tirthaka)

Āryajñāna, 38, 81, 102, 119, 128, 140, 141, 143, 147, 279, 288, 340, 整智, supreme wisdom whereby one is enabled to look mto the deepest recesses of consciousness in order to grasp the immost truth hidden away from the sight of ordinary understanding Āryajñāna=prajñā In the Lankāvatara, it is generally found in such combinations as svapratyātmāryajñāna or āryapratyātmajñāna Āryajñānacakshus, 114, 建智眼, the eye of supreme wisdom, also called prajnānacakshus (慧眼); Āryajnānasvabhāvavastu, 277, 305, 警智自性事, supreme wisdom as constituting the ultimate fact of existence. Kim idam. . viviktadharmopadeśābhāvaśca kriyata āryajñānasvabhāvavastudeśanayā (165-9,10),何以故,不說寂靜空無之法,而說聖智自性 事(T);何故說空法非性而說聖智自性事(S);何以故以 言賭法寂靜無相聖智法體如是無相故 (W). "How is it, O Blessed one, that thou demest the truth of negation by upholding the existence of a reality which makes up the substance of supreme wisdom?" [性.

Āryavastusvabhāva (=āryajūānasvabhāvavastu), 305, 聖事自

Alambana, 183, 192, 所終 or 樂線 resting or depending upon Tad hetvālambanatvāt. . saptānām vijūānānām pravrittir bhavati (126—17, 18), 以彼為因及所終故七識 77生(T), 彼因及彼樂縣故七識不生(S); 以依彼念與有故於融滅上識亦滅(W) Observe how widely the three translations differ from one another T'ang agrees with the Sanskiit, Wei gives no sense, while Sung adds an unnecessary 不, which altogether changes the meaning of the context Ālambālambva, 241, 能終所終, mutual dependence, subject and object; Ālambavigata, 144,遠離(一切)所終, fiee from all conditions

Ālayavijāāna, 3, 38, 67, 81, 97, 99, 103, 108, 167, 171 ff, 125 ff, 178 ff, 180, 182 ff, 186 ff, 192, 195 ff, 208, 281, 299, 阿賴耶識, or 級識.阿梨耶識(W), the all-conserving mind, Ālayavijāānodadhi, 67, 歲識大祚, Ālayaugha, 171, 歲識海

Avarana, 348, 原文 or 硬, that which hinders the lealisation of the truth, Avaranadvava, 132 The two hindrances are constive and intellectual, kleśāvaiana (知情景) and jūcyāvaiaņa (所知录) The latter is easier to destroy than the former, for the will to live or the egoistic impulses are the last thing a man can bring under complete control

Āśraya, 158, 183, 所依, that which constitutes the basis of the various Vijnānas, that is, the Ālayavijnāna, Āśrayaparlvritti, 184, 轉依, ievulsion or turning-over which takes place at the basis of consciousness, whereby we are enabled to grasp the immost truth of all existence, liberating us from the fetters of discrimination. All the Buddhist discipline aims at this catastrophe without which there is no permanent conversion. svacittadrisyabāhyārthapaijnānād vikalpasyāsrayaparāvrittir moksho na nāśah (233—15, 16), 了知外超自心所現分別轉依名為解脫非城瓊也(T);自心現知外義,妄想身轉,解脫不滅(S);如實能知唯自心見,外所分別心廻轉故,是故我說名為解脫,言解脫者非是滅法(W) As is seen here, Wei is generally clumsy and not quite to the point, while Sing is too brief tending to obscurity. T'ang agrees with the Sanskrit text. "When it is thoroughly comprehended that the external world is no more than the manifestation of one's own mind, there is a revulsion at the basis of discrimination, which is emancipation and not destruction" Parāvrittam hi tathatā vihārah kalpavarjitah ("Sagāthakam," verse 151). 所住離分別, 轉依即其如 (T); 轉彼即其如, 離分別是行(W). "The revulsion is Suchness; the abode is free from discrimination"

Āśrasya parāvrītīm anutpādam vadāmyaham (202—3), 296 The first line of this gāthā reads· Cittam driśyavinirmuktam svabhāvadvayavarjītam 唯心無所見,亦離於 二性,如是轉所依,我說是無生(T);心離於見法及離二法 體,轉身依正相,我說名無生(W); 唯有徵(?)心住,想所 想俱離,其身隨轉變,我說是無生(S).

Aśaya, 355, 意樂, desire

Asrava, 276n, 284, 漏, impure outflows of the mind, which are also known as Kleśa (煩惱). The three impurities are kāma (欲, desire to possess), bhava (有, will to live), and avidyā (無明, ignorance). When drishti (見, wrong view) is added, we have the four impurities. See also under Anāsrava

Icchantika, 219n, 一闡提迦, 無佛性, those who are destitute of the Buddha-nature

Itaretara, 288, 彼彼空, reciprocity, one of the seven kinds of Emptiness.

Indra, 354, 因陀羅.

Uccheda, 73, 123n, 斷, cutting off, destruction; Ucchedaśāśvata, 128, 斷常. See also Śāsvata.

Ucchedadarsana, or Ucchedavada, 120, 215, 断見, negativism or nihilism opposed to eternalism; the philosophical school which teaches that the world is destined to come to a total extinction when the law of causation works no more.

Uttrāsīta, 284, 赞, alarmed Bodhısattvā mahāsattvā ımam nīdeśam śrutvā nottrasishyantı na samtrasishyantı na samtrasishyantı na samtrāsam āpatsyante." (Ashtasāhasrīkā, p 17, etc) This is one of the sentences most frequently met with in the Prajāāpāramītā Sūtra, 菩薩摩訶薩剛是武無梵怖退沒(Kumārajīva). In the Lankāvatāra this is referred to on p 64—15-17...acintyavishayadešyamāne nottrasati na samtrasati na samtrāsam āpadyate veditavyamayam tathāgatayānābhisamayagotraka iti, 若有問說 不思議瓊不愁不怖不退,當知此是如來性(T) "He who is not frightened, alarmed, betrays no sense of fear even when this realm beyond comprehension is shown to him—he is to be known as belonging to the family of the Tathāgatayāna"

Utpāda, 127, 183, 307, 生, 起, birth, Utpādanirodha, 116, 生波, birth and extinction, Utpādapadam anutpādapadam, etc, 41, 生句手生句, "what is termed birth is not birth" Utpādavikalpa, 111 f, 生分別, discrimination regarding birth, one of the twelve wrong judgments arising from imagination (parilalpitasvabhāva, 妄計自性)

Udakacandra, 96, 110, 水月 or 水中月, moon in water This comparison is used to illustrate the illusive nature of existence which is beyond all predicates. The moon in water is not the real one as it is a reflection, but its appearance there is not to be denied. So we have also the following Tad yathā mahāmate jalāntargatā vrikshacchāyā khyāyate sā ca na echāyā hācchāyā vrikshasamsthānāsamsthānatah (93—13 f), 大慧, 譬如水中, 有樹影現, 彼非影非非影, 非樹形非非樹形(T) More similes such as a mirror-image, an echo, a mirage are given in the same vein of thought

Udadhitarangālayavijñānagocaram tathāgatānugītam dharmakāyam prabhāśasva, 188, 說如來所數海浪藏職境界法身(S) "Pray tell us concerning the nature of the Ālayavijñāna compared to the ocean and its waves [and also] concerning the Dharmakāya praised by the Tathagatas"

Upaklishta, 186, (客座)所染, contaminated (by external dirt)

Upalakshana, 200, seeing clearly, 善知(T), 视(S), 普解(W) Bāhyabhāvabhāvopalakshanatayā, 善知外法無性故(T), 親外性非性(S), 善解外(法)有無故(W); "by well understanding the unreal nature of the external objects" (80—1)

Upāya, 34, 88, 91, 97, 99, 132, 138, 314, 365, 方便 means, expediency, method, contrivance; Upāyakauśalya, 19, 346, 367, 善巧方便, skilful means, Upāyajñāna, 335, 方便智. The idea of "skilful means" is an important one in Mahayana Buddhism and inseparable from that of a great compassionate heart moving the whole being of Buddhahood. It is not enough for the Bodhisattva to have Āryajñāna or Prajñā fully awakèned, for he must also be supplied with Upāyajñāna whereby he is enabled to put the whole salvation machinery in practice according to the needs of beings

Ubhaya-anubhaya, 112, or Ubhaya-nobhaya, 116, 俱不俱, bothness and not-bothness

Riddhipāda, 39, 如意足 or 神足, miraculous psychie powers attained by means of Samādhi There are four ways of realising the Samādhi through (1) the will-power (chanda, 欲), (2) thought-power (citta, 心), (3) strenuous efforts (vīrya, 精進), and (4) deep thinking (mīmāmsā. 觀).
Rashi, 354, 仙, hermit-philosopher

Ekacıttam, 269, -.C., one mind.

١

Ekatva-anyatva, 112, 一異, oneness and otherness

Ekam apı aksharam nodāhrıtam na pravyāhrıtam, 213, 不說 一字, "not a word has been said nor declared." The Zen masters' favourite utterance, 四十九年一字不說, comes from this statement

Ekayāna, 52, 148, 328, 351, 358 ff, 一乘, One Vehicle or

Vehicle of Oneness This is identified with Mahāyāna Ekayānāvabodha, 361, realisation of the One Vehicle Yathābhūtāvasthānād apravritter vikalpasya (138—16) 如質處不生妄想,是名一乘變(S),離(能取所取)分別如質而佳(T) "[The realisation means] the extinction of wrong discrimination by abiding in Suchness"

Ekāgra, 85, 121, 一終, oneness

Kara, 292, 353, 手, the hand

Karunā, 101, 339, 狱, love, a compassionate heart

Kartri, 130, 139, 作者, creator

Karma, 182, 186, 菜, act Nakarmaprabhava, 145n, 325, 不從菜生, not karma-created Sarve in nirmitabuddhā na karmaprabhavāh (242—12), 一切化佛不從業生 (T), Karmabīja, 197, 業種子, karma-seed, Karmāvarana, 212, 業際, hindrance to the attainment of Bodhi, which rises from the past karma, Karmavijāna, 187, 業識

Kalapah pratyayanam (ca pravartate nivartate, 202—9), 297, 因緣共集會是故有生成(T) "Because of a concatenation of causal chains there is birth, there is disappearance"

Kāmadhātu, 79, 欲界, world of Desire, one of the triple world (triloka, 三界), the other two being the world of Form (色界) and the world of No-form (無色界)

Kāma-bhava-drishti-avidyā, 276n, 欲·有·見·無明, which make up the contents of Asrava (漏, evil outflow)

Kāya, 308, 身, system, body, Kāyasamatā, 318, 352, 身平等, [All the Tathāgatas are] the same as regards the body, [because aham ca tathāgatā dharmakāyena ca rūpalakshanānuvyañjanakāyena ca samā nirvisishtāh (142—6f)], 我與諸佛, 法身, 色相, 及隨形好等, 無差別(T)

Kārana, 122, 146, 188, 302, 作者, creator, deity

Kāshtha, 360, a piece of wood Yathā hi kāshtham udadhau . (135—8), 譬如海中木(T)

Kuśalānāsrava, 198, 253, 善無漏法, good virtues free from evil flowings, enjoyed by the wise when they are deeply drunk in the bliss of the Samādhi and abiding in the bliss of existence as it is.

Kuśalamūla, 72, 93 f, 善根, stock of merit.

Kritaka-akritaka, 116, 作非作, made and not-made, or done and not-done.

Kripā, 339, 態, pity, compassion; Kripātma, 369, pitying thought Māmsam sarvam abhakshyam kripātmano bodhisattvasya (245—8), 菩薩當生悲愍不應敬一切肉 (T'ang). "The Bodhisattva with a pitying heart ought not to eat any meat whatever"

Kriyā, 198, 行, action; Kriyābhivyaktı, 307, 所作明了 (轉變), manifested work.

Klishtamanas, 178, 染污意, Manas contaminated.

Kleśa, 186, 224, 256, 348, 煩惱, Kleśakshaya, 130, 煩惱斷, the extinction of the evil desires: Kleśadvaya, 132, 二煩惱, two kinds of evil passions, primary and secondary, Kleśajñeya, 35, 36, 37, that is kleśavajana and jñeyavarana, hindrances caused by the evil passions and by intellection. 煩惱隱及所知隱。Kleśakhyāvīvarjīta, 360, 離諸煩惱, liberated from the evil passions so called, Kleśavarana, 177, 煩惱酸, hindrance of the Kleśa Kleśa is generally divided into two groups, primary and secondary primary comprise such evil impulses that he at the foundation of every tormenting thought and desire. They are 1 rāga 黄 (desire to have), 2 pratigha 瞬 six in number (anger), 3 mūdhaya 璇 (folly or ignorance), 4 māna 慢 (self-concert), 5 drishit 見(false views), and 6. vicikitsā 疑 (doubt). Sometimes, 1 atmadrishti (我見, the belief in the existence of an ego-substance), 2 ātmamoha (我抵 ignorance about the ego), 3 ātmamāna(我慢, conceit about the ego), and 4. atmasukha (我爱, self-love)—these four are regarded as the fundamental evil passions originating from the view that there is really an eternal substance known as ego-soul The secondary Klesa are sometimes twenty, sometimes twenty-four, sometimes only nineteen. according to the different schools Vasubandhu's Trimstla gives twenty-four 1 impatience (念. krodha), 2 hatred (恨, upanāha), 3 hypocrisy (砭. mraksha). 4 stinging talk (楷, pradāsa), 5 envy (嫉, īrshyā). 6 stinginess (怪, mālsarya), 7 decert (武, māyā), 8 duplicity (餡, śāthya), 9 arrogance (稿, mada), 10 hurting others (告, whimsa), 11 shamelessness (無惭, ahrī), 12 recklessness (無愧, airapā), 13 torpidity (情忧, styānam), 14 restlessness (苹果, uddhava), 15 unbelief (不信, asraddha), 16 in-(僻意 Lausidya), 17 thoughtlessness (放逸, pramāda), 18 senselessness (失念, mushitasmrititā), 19 uncollected state (or unsteadiness) of mind (散亂, vikshepa), 20 maccuracy of knowledge (不正見, asamprajanya), 21 evil doing (惡作, kaukritya), 22 drowsiness (睡眠, middha), 23 investigation (季, vitarka), 24 reflection (伺, vicāra).

Kshanikam, 194, 刹那, momentariness

Kshānti, 126, 忍, generally translated "patience," or "resignation," or "humility," when it is one of the six or ten But "acceptance," or "recognition," or "submission" will be better when it occurs in connection with the dharma that is unborn In the Abhidharmakośa, Chapter VII, Kshāntı ıs used ın a way contrasted to Jñāna According to it, Kshānti is not knowledge of certainty which Jñāna is, for in Kshānti doubt has not yet been entirely uprooted Its characteristic is to enquire, to investigate, to examine so that an intellectual understanding may turn into intuitive certainty whereby errors are totally destroyed, never to assert themselves again In this case, jñāna=parijñā=prajñā=adhigama=abhisamaya= svasiddhānta=pratyātmāryajūāna, while Kshānti is an intelligent recognition of a theory or doctrine For the ten kinds of Kshānti, see p 126 f

Kshitigarbha, 332, 地藏算

Kha, 353, 虛空, sky.

Khacitavigraha, 84, 壁上彩畫, a painted figure on the wall (bhitte).

Khañjagardabha, 340, a lame donkey . iva cittaprajñājñānalakshanam hitvā (50—1), 捨跛驗智慧心相 (T'ang), "throwing away such thought, wisdom, knowledge as resembles the character of a lame donkey."

Khyātīvījūāna, 189 ff, 現識, which almost corresponds to perception

Gagana, 353, 遗空, sky

Gata, 340, 去, gone, departed; Gataghrina, 371, 無慈愍, unsympathetic

Garbha, 177, 藏, or 胎, womb

Garbhakośadhātu, 177, 胎數界 The dualism of the Garbhakośa and the Vajra is the attempt by Shingon philosophers to describe the constitution and development of the spiritual world The Garbhakośa conceives the world as a stage on which Vairocanabuddha residing in the immost heart of every being develops his inherent possibilities, whereas the Vajra depicts the Buddha in his own manifestations The pictures illustrating the scheme and process of these developments are called Mandala (曼陀羅).

Guna, 74, 130, 求那, 德, virtues or attributes.

Gocara, 104, 340, 选择, 所行, experience, mental attitude. Gocara, literally meaning "range for cattle," or "pasturage," is a field for action and an object of sense. In the Lankāvatāra it is frequently more than that, for it points to a general mental attitude one assumes towards the external world, or better a spiritual atmosphere in which one's being is enveloped. Artha which is also translated as 選 is an object of sense, while Vishaya also meaning 選 has a more general connotation since it designates a world of particulars as objects of mental activity. (Tārkikānām avishayam śrāvakānām na caiva hi,) yam deśayanti vai nāthāh pratyātmagatigocaram (49—4,5), 174 世間依怙 老, 瞪智所行處, 外道非理界, 聲聞亦復然(T) "The world-leaders teach the state of consciousness realised by their inner perception, which is beyond the realm of the philosophers and the Śrāvakas"

Grāhaka, 195, 淮汉, seizing, one who seizes or perceives,
Grāhana, 127, 294, 淮汉, seizing, perceiving, Grāhya, 195,
所汉, seized, that which is perceived, Grāhyagrāhaka,
97, 116, 201, 所以淮汉, that which is perceived or apprehended, and that which perceives or apprehends

Ghoshānugakshānti, 126n, 香港忍, Kshāntr in sounds This is understood to mean the ready, willing response which is made characteristically by the devout follower to the verbal instruction of his teacher

Cakshurvijfiāna, 178, 188, 眼識, the sense of vision Catushkotika. 116, 122, 132, 134, 135, 165, 四句(有句,無句, 非有非無句,亦有亦無句), the four propositions

Citta, defined, 176, as the whole system of vijnanas, 180 ff, originally pure, 174, ic, mind Citta is generally translated as "thought," but in the Lankavatara as in other Mahayana sutras may better be rendered "mind" When it is defined as "accumulation" or as a "store-house" where karma-seeds are deposited, it is not mere thought, it has an ontological signification Cittam vikalpo vijñaptır mano vıjñānam eva ca, ālayam tribhavasceshtā ete cittasya paryapāh("Sag"459), 252 心意及與識. 分別與 表示, 本藏作三有, 皆心之異名 (T), 心分別及識, 意及於 意識,阿梨耶三有,思惟心異名(W); Tad hetukam tad ālambya manogatisamāśrayam, hetum dadāti cittasya vijfiānam ca samāśritam (127—10,11), 250 意識爲心因, 心爲意境界,因及所緣故,賭觀依止生(T),彼因彼攀緣。 意趣等成身,(—?), 爲識之所依(S), 依彼因及念, 意趣諸 取境界,依於融種子,能作於心因(Win "Sagāthakam")

Cinam avyākņinai nilvam 219. 心常無配 (T,:心常無配 在(W): nind eternally guiescent co neutral, co todivided. The whole verse ("Sagāthakam" 193) rums thus: Cintamavyākņinain nilvain mano hychhayasainamam vartamānain hi vijūānain kušalāhtsalam hi tat. 心常是無証意具一種行,現在認定具一需果不善等(T): 心常知至這意二些取得。「以現法是職,被是善不善(W) "The Mini remains eternally neutral: Manus mores in two ways: the Vijūāna taking in what is presented is either good or not-good."

Cittar vishayeserihandham (jillrari tarke pravartate, ISO —7). 179. 心無限時 聖念在漢字(T). "The mind is bound up by an external world, speculation purs Jillrarin coperation." Jillra in this case is the reasoning faculty and stands contrasted to Prajill which is the intuitive faculty meant for grasping the transcendental truth.

Citati hi traidhātulayenih 144. 三界自心生(T). "Tre mind is the origin of the triple world."

Citam hi sarvar (sarvatra sarvadelesia: vartate vicinai gridyate 'sabdhis citamitrar by alaistana. 182—7.5°.
243. 心是一句意 一句意皆心 以心不善强,心性重症年(W): 心是一句意 一句意及身,心性重矩严 無管犯征 種(T). "All is mind mind pervades in all places, in all the bodies. The ignorant perceive multiplicity, but there is nothing predicable in Mind-only."

Citan uipidayitavyan ua kvacii pratishibin 55. 随無所 在而生其心 (Kulitajiva). "[A Bochisativa] should have his thoughts awakened without abiding in anything whatever "

Cittakalāpa, 192, 心聚 (T,S), mentation-system Cittakalāpah pravartate 'nyonyahetukah (127—3,4), 生種種心, 猶如東竹迭共爲因(W), 心聚生起展轉爲因(T) "The whole mental system is evolved mutually conditioning [like a bundle of bamboo-sticks]"

Cittanirābhāsa, 346, 心無相, the mind that has no form Cittabāhyādarśana (42—10, 11), 243, 離心無得 (T), 心外 無所見 (S), 自心见外线界故 (W) W was evidently a different text

Cittamanādimatisamcitam, 176n The complete line reads
Avidyāhetukam cittam anādimatisamcitam (368—15) 無始所提集,無明為心因 (T) "Ignorance accumulated over and over again owing to imperfect intellection since the infinite past is the origin of the mind"

Cittamanomanovijñāna, or cittam manaš ca vijñānam, 73, 98, 119, 182, 150, 168, 172, 211, 221, 226, 246, 心, 意, 意識

Cittamātra, 唯心, Mind-only, or Mind-itself, Cittamātram lokam, 243, 世間唯是心, the world is Mind-only Bahyabhāvānabhyupagamāt tribhavacittamātropadeśād vicitralakshanānupadeśāt (208—13, 14), (何以故), 不取外法故, 三界唯心故,不說諸相故 (T), (所以者何) 謂外法不决定 故, 唯說三有微心, 不說種種相 (S), (何以故) 我不說外 投界有故,我說三界但是自心,不說種種諧相是有(₩) "Why? Because I do not admit the existence of an external world, but I teach that the triple world is Mind-only and do not teach about signs of multiplicity " Cıttamātram yadā lokam prapašyantı jinātmajāh, tadā nairmānikam kāyam kriyāsamskāravarjitam (73-8,9)佛子能觀見,世間唯是心,示現種種身,所作無障礙 (T),心量世間,佛子觀察種類之身,離所作行 (S), 佛子見世間,惟心無豁法,種類非身作 . (₩) the world is seen by those born of the Buddha as no more than mind, they assume a variety of bodies which are free from [constrained] activities and conditionalities."

Cittamātradriśya, 123, etc, 唯心所現, or sımply, cittamātra, 唯心, is one of the principal phrases recurring in the Lankāvatāra Ye grāhyagrāhakābhinivishṭāḥ svacittadri-śyamātram nāvabudhyante ...(104—8, 9). 若不了諸法唯心所現, 計有能取及以所取....(T) "Those who are attached to the notion of duality (object and subject) fail to understand that there is only what is seen of the Mind." Cittamātravinirmuktam nopalabhyate, 180, 離心不可得.

"Apart from mind nothing is attainable, that is, comprehensible"; in other words, Drisyacitaparijnanad vikalpo na pravartate (343—17), 了我唯是心。分别则不起 (T). "When what is seen [or an external world] is penetratingly understood as Mind [-itself], discrimination never takes place" "Unattainability" or "incomprehensibility" means that the thing is altogether beyond the reach of analytical, relative knowledge See also under Anupalabdhua Cittavikalpalakshana, 179, 心分別相. Svacittavaicitryavikalpakalpitatvāt .vaicitryabhāvalakshanābhiniveśāt... (152—2,3). 分別自心種種諸法 著種種相.....(T). "Since one's own mind is discriminated under various forms of discrimination and since one gets attached to a variety of signs of existence".

Cittasvabhāva, 68, 心首性, the self-nature of mind, mind as it is, mind in itself

Cittena cīyate karma, 176n, 249, 採集業為心 (T, S) (觀察法為智, T; 不採集為智, S); 誠能集諧業... (智能了分別W) The whole line runs... jñānena ca vidhīyate (158—3). "Karma is accumulated by mind, and arranged in order by Jñāna, [analytical knowledge in contradistinction to Prajñā, which is transcendental, intuitive knowledge]." Sung evidently had a different text as it reads不採集 instead of 觀察 or 分別; 不採集 is perhaps for uncīyate as in the "Sagāthakam," verse 285, where this line is repeated.

- Cittodadh, 188, 心海, mind-ocean Vishayapavanacittodadhitarangā acyucchinna (44—11),心海亦爾, 瓊界風 吹, 起醋融浪, 相積不絕(T), "the waves of the mind-ocean are uninterruptedly [stirred by] the wind of objectivity" Citra, manifold, Vaicitrya, citratā manifoldness, 129, 161
- Citra, manifold, Vaicitrya, citratā, manifoldness; 133, 161, 242, 種種
- Cintāmani, 98, 如意實珠, 摩尼寶珠, wish-gem Viśvarūpacintāmanisadrisā (72—15), 如摩尼簡心現色 (T), "it is like mani-gem which takes all colours as wished"
- Civate, 190, 街集, accumulated, from 🗸 ca meaning "to accumulate"
- Cyuti, 211 f, 348, 死, death There are two kinds of death, one of the physical body and the other of the superphysical, which is a sort of sūkshmaśarīra 後期身, assumed by a Bodhisattva See also Acintyaparināmacyuti
- Chindati, 250, 了 or 分别, to discriminate or distinguish, from ched, "to split," "to separate" This word appears in the following connection Cittena dhāryate kāyo mano mayati vai sadā, vijāānam cittavishayam vijāānam saha chindati (323—4,5) 心住持於身,意常是諸法, 融自心境界, 洪於識分別 (W); 心能持於身,意恒審思定,意識諧戰傷, 了自心境界 (T) "Mind (citta) sustains the body, Manas always reflects, the [Mano-]vijāāna together with the [sense-]vijāānas discriminates a world of particulars created by Citta"
- Janmahetu, 267, 生因, birth-cause. Animittadarsanam eva sreyo, na nimittadarsanam, nimittam punar janmahetutväd asreyah (200—3,3) 無相見勝, 非相見, 相考受生因, 故不勝(S); 無相見勝, 非是相見, 相是生動(T), 見寂靜者名爲勝相, 非見諧相名爲勝相, 以不能斷生因相故(W), 生因 means that when the reality of a phenomenal world is asserted and adhered to as such, one is led to accept the doctrine of birth, i.e. of causation even beyond the realm of relativity.

Jalacandra, 110, 水中月 water-moon. Sa (tathāgatabhū-mim) pratilabhya sattvaparipācanatayā vicitrair nirmāṇa-kiranair virājate jalacandravat (227—3,4). 得如來地已,種種變化,圓照示現,成熟衆生,如水中月(S);入如來地已,爲数化衆生,現種種光明,應莊嚴身,如水中月(W);成如來地已,爲衆生故,如水中月,普現其身(T). "Attaining Tathagatahood, he manifests himself, in order to bring beings into maturity, in various transformations shinning like the moon in water"

Jalpo hi traidhātukaduhkhayanih, 269, 言說三界(苦)因(T); 言語三(界)苦本(S) To complete the line·....tattvam hi duhkhasya vināśahetuh (186—9) 真實滅苦因(T). "The truth is the destructive cause of pain"

Jāti, 186, is generally rendered as 生, but here means the genume state of a thing as it is in itself, 真.

Jambunada, 93, 縣部捺陀金, gold from the Jambu river.

Jina, 354, 勝者, victor, an epithet of the Buddha; Jinadhātu, 261, 佛舍利, Buddha's relics, hard substance left after the cremation of the body, same as śarīra which see; Jinaputra, 38n, 勝者子, 佛子, sons of the Victorious One, meaning Bodhisattvas

Jiva, 130, 壽, life, or vitality regarded as a principle

Jūāna, 84, 139, 160, 272, 智. Jūāna is a very flexible term, as it means sometimes ordinary worldly knowledge, knowledge of relativity, which does not penetrate into the truth of existence, and also sometimes transcendental knowledge in which case being synonymous with Prajūā or Āryajūāna See the Lankāvatāra, pp. 157-8, where the distinction between Jūāna as transcendental knowledge and Vijūāna as relative knowledge is fully distinguished Asangalakshaṇam jūānam vishayavaicitryasangalakshaṇam ca vijūānam (157—14, 15), 272, 著境界相是識,不著境界是智 (T); 智者無障礙相,識者識彼諸境界相 (W); 無礙

相是智, 塊界種種礙相是識 (S). "Jñāna is non-attachment, Vijñāna is attached to an external world of particulars" Jñānakāya, 338, 智身, knowledge-body, =Dharmakāya, =Tathāgatakāya

Jñānam lokottaram, 139, 出世間智, super-worldly knowledge, Jñānam lokottaratam, 139, 出世間上上智, supreme supra-worldly knowledge, Jñānam laukokam, 139, 世間智, worldly knowledge, Jñānam śubham , śānte kshāntīvi-śeshe vai jñānam tāthāgatam śubham, samjāyate viśeshārtham samudācāravarjītam (158—9, 10), 277 寂滅殊勝忍。如來清淨智, 生於菩勝義, 遠離諸所行 (S, W, T) "The immaculate Tathāgata-knowledge is obtained in the Kshāntī [acknowledgment or assertion], tranquil and most excellent, and it gives birth to the most excellent meaning which transcends all doings", Jñānam anāsrava, 225, 258, 無滿智, pure knowledge, which is free from the taint of egotism

Jñeyāvarana, 117, 212, 361, 所知障, hindrance of knowledge, generally coupled with Kleśāvarana, hindrance of passions, 煩惱障.

Tattvam, 106, 109, 114, 126, 131, 146, 150, 173, 195, 278, 真實, truth Tathā hi aksharasamsaktās tattvam na vetti māmakam (224—1) 對著文字者,不見吾真實(T) "Inkewise, my truth is not known to those who are tied to letters" Tattvam aksharavarjitam (48—12), 異實離文字(T) "The truth is detached from letters" Tattvam pratyātmagatikam (kalpyakalpena varjitam, 48—14), 174, 異實自證處,能所分別離(T). Tattvam duhkhasya vināšahetuh, 133, 如實智減苦, truth is the destroyer of sorrow See also under Jalpa

Tattvajñāna, 335, 莫實智, knowledge of absolute truth which is contrasted to Upāyajñāna, 方便智, knowledge of means, or of particulars

Tathatā, 26, 38, 99, 107, 114, 118, 120, 127, 146, 155 f, 161,

173n, 212, 275, 278, 334, 341, 342 f, 346, 355, 367, 如如 (五法者所謂相·名·分別·如如·正智·丁), 與如 (名相·分別·二自性相, 正智·真如, 是国成性, T), 與理, Tathatājñāna, 106, 310, 與如智慧, 'buddha, 38, 與如智慧佛, Tathatālambanam, 367, 緣與如禪 This is the third of the four Dhyānas described in the Lankāvatāra, p. 97. The object of the discipline is to realise the suchness of truth by keeping thoughts above the dualism of being and nonbeing and also above the twofold notion of egolessness. It is the Dhyāna ''depending upon suchness.'' Tathatāvastu, 有事悉如如(8), 如與如本有(W), 有異如妙物(T). See under Vastu. Tathatāvasthāna, 306n, 住異如(W), 住如如(T), abode of suchness.

Tathā, 340, 如, thus, Tathātva, or tathatva, 278, 如如, thusness, or suchness

Tathāgata, 339 ff, 如承 This term may be divided into either of the following formulas tathā+gata, or + thā+āgata In the former case, it is 如去, and in the latter 如來

Tathāgatapūrvapramhītatva, 150, 如來本願(T), Tathagata's original vow "āt sarvasukhasamāpattīparīpūryā sattvānām na kalpayantī na vikalpayantī (231—13) 如來本願以三昧樂安衆生故無有惱亂(S); . . 無有愛情, 無有分別(T).

Tathāgatasvapratyātmāryajñānādhigamam nirvānam (200—7,8), 295, 獲如來內證聖智, 我說此是寂滅涅槃 (T). See also under Nuvāņa

Tathāgatakāya, 97 f, 141, 317, 如來身, 佛身, Buddha-body. Tathāgatagarbha, 3, 73, 85, 103, 105, 121, 137 ff, 176, 177, 179 f, 182, 185, 193, 194, 198, 201, 如來藏, the womb where the Tathagata is conceived and nourished and matured; = the Ālayavijāāna fully purified of its habit-energy 習氣 (vāsanā) and evil tendencies (daushthulya), Tathāgatagarbho mahāmate kuśalākuśalahetukah (sarvajanmagatikartā, 220—9,10), 180n, 大謎, 如來藏是善不善因, 能編與 起一切趣生 (T); 能與(與?) 六道作生死因緣 (W).

"The Tathagatagarbha which is the cause of goods as well as evils creates the various paths of existence". Tathagatagarbhahridayam, esha mahāmate parinishpannasvabhāvah (68-1), 159 大點, 此是四成自性, 如來嚴心 (T)

Tathāgatācintyagatīvishayagocara, 359. 如來不可思議智慧 思证完包证界(S) Vishaya is gocara, and gocara vishaya, both being properly rendered as 垫界 In the present work I have generally "realm" or "subjective attitude," for gocara, and for vishaya "objectivity" or "the objective world "

Tathāgatayāna, 148, 360, 如來采, the Tathagata-vehicle Tathāgatasvapratyātmāryajñānādhīgama, 277, 如來所獲自 設整智. See Pratyātmān yanñāna Tanu. 353, $, body.

Taranga, 193. 放浪, waves

Tarka, 38, 102, 132, 計度, speculation, or imagination

Tāthāgatam (dhyāna), 367, 如來禪, one of the four Dhyānas This is the highest kind of Dhyana practised by the Mahayana believers of Buddhism The yogin has realised the inner truth deeply hidden in the consciousness, yet he does not remain intoxicated with the bliss thereby attained, he goes out into the world performing wonderful deeds of salvation for the sake of his fellow-beings

Tımıra, 161, 👺, cataract of the eye Bālā grıhnantı jāyanatam tımıram taımırā yathā (95—13) 如醫者所見, 愚夫生 "The ignorant grasp the created as a person 執着 (T) with bedimmed eyes grasps his own darkness "

Tirthakara, 34, etc , 外道, the philosophers not belonging to Buddhism Tirthakara is generally found in combination with Śrāvakas (hearers) and Pratyekabuddhas (solitary Buddhas), to all of whom the ideals of Bodhisattvahood are not known

Tīrthya, same as tīrthakara, 102

Trishņā, 168, 362, 👺, ht , thirst, will-to-live Together with avidyā (ignorance, 無明) and karma (deeds, 葉), triskņā is the inner agent of the world-creation. Triskņā hi mātā ity uktā avidyā ca pitā tathā (140—5), 364, 貪交名為母, 無明則是父(T). "The will-to-live is mother and ignorance is father." Trisknāyā hy uditāh skandhāh(149—11), 250, 從安生諸蘊(T). "The Aggregates are produced by the will-to-live."

Tair ācitāni karmāni (358—14), 176n. 依所積集業(T). "All kinds of harma are accumulated by them (i.e. the Alayz and Manas)."

Trikāya. 142 ff, 308 ff. 355. 三身, the triple body of the Buddha.

Tribhavasvacittamātram, 243. 273. 三界電心(T): 三界電是自心(W); 三有微(電:)心(S).

Triyāna. 148, 328. 358 ff. 三乘; the triple vehicle is the Śrāvaka. the Pratyeliabuddha. and the Bodhisattva.

Trisantati, 73, 三相類, the triple continuation. What these three are I have not so far been able to find out. The Pali Dictionary (by Rhys Davids and Stede) gives cittasantati (心相類), dhamma* (法), rūpa*(色), and sankhāra* (行).

Traidhātuka, 245.三界; the triple world is Kāma* (飲界), Rūpa* (色界), and Arūpa* (無色界).

Darpana, 84, 鏡, mirror.

Daśanishthāpāda. 23In, 十無句(S, W), or 十二類(T); sometimes simply, (daśa-)nishṭhāpāda, 十章句. The reference is to the Ten Inexhaustible Vows (daśanishṭha-praṇidhāna) to be made by the Bodhisattva at the stage of Joy (pramuditā), which is the first of the ten stages (daśa-bhūmi) of Bodhisattvahood. The Vows are called "inexhaustible" because their objectives are of such nature. The ten objects towards which the Bodhisattva's vows are directed are: 1. Sattvadhātu (元年子, world of beings); 2. Lokadhātu (元子, this world); 3. Ākēśadhētu (虚空界、space), 4 Dharmadhātu (法界, the world where the Dharma prevails), 5 Nuvānadhātu (涅槃界, Nirvanaworld), 6 Buddhotpādadhātu (佛出現界, the world where the Buddha is born); 7 Tathāgatanānadhātu (如來智果. the world of Tathagata-knowledge), 8 Crttālambanadhātu (心所緣界, the world as the object of thought), 9 Buddhavishayagñānadhātu (佛智所入境界界, the world as the object of Buddha-knowledge); and 10 Lokavartanidharmavartani-snānavartani-dhātu (世間轉法轉智轉界 the world where this worldly life, the Dharma, and the Buddha-knowledge are evolved) All these ten worlds will never come to an end, and as long as they continue to exist, the Bodhisattva will ever put forward his great vows with energy and determination See Rahder, Daśabliūmika, p 17, and Śikshānanda's Avatamsaka, Vol. XXXIV.

Dāna, 366 f, 布施, one of the six virtues of perfection (六波羅蜜).

Dīpapradīpa, 85, 登火, lamplight

Düramgamā, 223, 遠行地, the far-going, the seventh stage Driśya, 251, 所現, what is presented to one's view

Drishta, 165, 所見, seen, drishti, 307, 見, generally 妄見 a wrong view held by the Tirthakara

Drishtānta, 40, 常, illustration, example, a logical term The hill is fiery (宗, pratiyñā, proposition) Because it has smoke (因, hetu, reason). All that has smoke is fiery like a kitchen, and whatever is not fiery has no smoke like a lake (常, drishtānta, example)

Drishtivikalpa, 111 f, 見分利, views based on the dualistic discrimination of existence such as held by the philosophers; one of the twelve Parikalpita notions (127 f)

Devayāna, 360, 天乘, Devayānam brahmayānam śrāvakiyam tathaiva ca, tāthāgatam ca pratyekam yānān etān vadāmy aham (134, 135). 天乘及梵乘, 聲聞綠登乘, 賭佛如來乘, 路乘吾所說 (T)

Deśanā (-nayalakshana), 109, 349, 350, 言說法相, word-teaching contrasted with self-realisation (siddhānta, 宗趣, or pratyātmadharma, 自證法), Siddhāntaś ca nayaś cāpi pratyātmaśāsanam ca vai, ye paśyanti vibhāgajñā na te tarkavaśam gatāh (149—2,3) 宗趣與言說, 自證及教法, 若能善知見, 不隨他妄解(T) "Those who well understand the distinction between realisation and teaching, between inner knowledge and instruction, are kept away from the control of mere speculation"

Deśanāpātha, 77, 80, 149, 語言文字 Avalokya deśanāpāthābhiratānām sattvānām cittavibhramo bhavishyatīti (14—2). 觀察一切衆生心皆樂於名字說法,心迷生疑(W) Deśanāpāṭhakathām, 76, 名字章句(W), teaching, recitation, and story This stands here (12—16, 17) against Tathāgatapratyātmagatigocarakathām (說於內身修行境界, W) as elsewhere, showing that the whole purport of the Lankāvatāra is to emphasise the inner attainment of the truth realised by all the Tathagatas of the past, present, and future

Deśanārutapāthābhiveśatam, na, 110, 莫執着文字, do not cling to words! Tathāgatagarbha ālayavijūānavishayas ... bodhisattvānām mahāsattvānām arthapratisaranānām no tu yathārutadeśanāpāthābhinivishtānām (223—6-9) 如來 藏藏證(是佛) 境界, 菩薩摩訶薩, 隨順義者所行之處, 非是一切執着文字(外道二乘)之所行處(T) "The realm of the Tathāgatagarbha which is the Ālayavijūāna belongs to those Bodhisattva-mahāsattvas who follow the course of truth, and not to those philosophers who cling to the letter, learning, and mere discourse"

Deha, 353, 身, the body

Dehabhogapratishthāna, 97, 172, 175, 180, 242, 244, 247, 322 f, 363, 身套所住 This combination occurs quite frequently in the Lankāvatāra and refers to the material side of life Deha is the physical body, bhoga is property belonging to the body and enjoyed by it, and pratishthāna is the material environment in which the body is found moving. They are however manifestations of the Ālaya Dehabhogapratishthānam ālayam khyāyate nrinām (54—10) 自受用安立、識數現衆生(8),內職衆生見,身資生住處(W),身資所住影(?)衆生藏識現(T).

Daushthulya, 178, 200, 過惡, evil tendency, or error. Anādikālaprapañcadaushthulyavāsītam vikalpavijāānam (94—12) 無始越論惡習所意 (T);無始虛偽習氣所意妄想計著 (S), 因無始來煩惱心蒸習越論分別 (W). "The discriminating consciousness that is found infested since beginningless time by the evil tendency or habit-energy inherent in the delusion" Na mahāmate māyā bhrāntikāranam adaushthulyadoshāvahatvāt (109—4,5) 非諸幻事為妄惑因,以幻不生諸過惡故(T),大慧非迷惑法生煩惱過(W),大點非幻惑因,不起過故(S) "Mahāmati, māyā is not the cause of confusion, for it does not produce errors, [as errors come from wrong discrimination]"

Dravya, 74, 物, 陀羅縣 (S), substance Bhūtagunānudravyasamsthānasamnivešavišesham drishtvā .. (51—13). 見大種·求那·塵等諧物, 形量·分位·各差別(T). "Seeing that the elements, qualifies, atoms, and substances are all different as regards their form and position"

Dvaya, 195, I, duality.

Dvayanairātmya, 175, 211, 二無我, the twofold egolessness, 1 e of dharma and pudgala

Dvātrīmsadvaralakshana, 75, 三十二相, the thirty-two marks of excellence as revealed in the body of the Buddha

Dviyāna(?), 358 f, 二乘 (聲聞乘與緣覺乘), the two vehicles of Śrāvakahood and Pratyekabuddhahood.

Dvesha, 259,) iii, anger, one of the three evil passions (三春) known as poison (visha), the other two are rāga (貪, the desire to have) and moha (海, stupidity)

Dharma, 173, 法, the truth, the law, for various shades of meaning attached to the term, see pp. 154f, Dharma, aksharapatita-, 109, 法監於文字, the truth in the bondage of letters Rutam mahāmate aksharapatitam, artho 'naksharapatitah' (194—1) 一切言說監於文字, 義則不監(T) Dharmo naiva ca deśito bhagavatā pratyātmavedyo yatah, 110, 自證不可說. (引物說法性, Prabhākaramitra). Dharmādharma, 80, 120, 121, 155, 法非法, truth and untruth, any object and that which is not that object, A and not-A, a dualistic conception in any form such as sat and asat, being and non-being, Samsāra and Nirvāna, etc

Dharmapañcakam, 39, 66, 五法, the "Five Categories," which is one of the important topics treated in the Lantavatāra

Dharmakāya, 36, 127, 141, 142 ff, 151, 154, 188, 212, 308 f, 352, 353, 355, 369, 法身, often translated as the Law-body, or Truth-body 1 The truth conceived in the fashion of the physical body and standing in contrast to it, ie Rūpakāya (色身), 2 One of the Triple Body of the Buddha when he is identified with the Absolute, 3 = the Tathāgatakāya, Buddhakāya, Jūānakāya Dharmakāyo hi sambuddho dharmadhātus tathāgatah, 315, 法身是正覺, 法界即如來 (I-tsing)

Dharmakshānti, 127n, 法忍, same as 無生法忍, acceptance of the statement that all things are as they are, not being subject to the law of birth and death, which prevails only in the phenomenal world created by our wrong discrimination

Dharmacakra, 154, 233, 法輪, the Wheel of the Law

Dharmatā, 72, 83, 142, 185, 275, 320, 法性, 體性, the ultimate essence of things existing Cittasya dharmatā śuddhā (298—9) 心性本清淨(T). Dharmatānishyanda, 321, 法性 所流: buddha, 144, 法性所流佛, the Buddha conceived as flowing out of the ultimate essence of things, that is, a manifested form of the Absolute; Dharmatābuddha, 142 ff, 208 f, 316, 法性佛, the Buddha as Essence itself, i.e. the Dharmakāya in its absolute aspect.

Dharmadvaya, 80, 二法, duality

Dharmadhātu, 152, 242, 275, 354, 法界 It may be rendered properly as "realm of ideas," as the term expresses the most comprehensive view of the universe, including not only this visible sense-world but all possibly conceivable ideal worlds

Dharmaniyāmatā, 212, 275, 法位, orderliness or fixedness of things each in its own position, or gesetzmassigkeit

Dharmanairātmya, 78, 138, 154, 194, 263, 360, 法無我 idea that there is no self-substance or Atman (ego) constituting the individuality of each object is insisted on by the followers of Mahayana Buddhism to be their exclusive property not shared by the Hinayana: but how far this is historically true may be contested. As the idea of Dharmanairātmya is closely connected with that of Śūnvatā and as the latter is one of the most distinguishing marks of the Mahayana it was natural for its scholars to give to the former a prominent position in their philosophy Dharmanairātmyajñāna, 167f, 167n, 法無我智, the power of cognisance whereby the truth of Dharmanairātmya is accepted Cittamanomanovijnānapancadharmasyabhavarahitan mahamate sarvadharman vibhavayan bodhisattvo mahäsattvo dharmanairātmyakuśalo bhavati (69--11, 18) 觀察--切諸法, 離心・意・意識・五法・自性, 是名菩薩摩訶法無我智(T) "When a Bodhısattva-mahāsattva recognises that all dharmas are free from Citta, Manas, and Manovijūāna, the Five Dharmas, and the Threefold Svabhava, he is said to understand well the signification of Dharmanairatinya "

Dharmaparyāya, 154, 法門, doctrine, or system of teaching.

Another name of the Lankāvatāra is "Cittamanomanovijnānapancadharmasvabhāvalakshanadharmaparyāya"(43 —14, 15), 心意意識五法自性相衆妙法門(T), and still another is "Āryajnānavastupravicayam" (50—14, 15) 建 李專自性法門 When the first one is shortened, it runs thus

"Pañcadharmasvalakshanapravicayam" (68—6), 觀察五 法自性相法門 Sung has 經 instead of 法門 for dharmaparyāya

Dharmapūjā, 230, 232, 法供發, moral offerings

Dharmabuddha, 23, 法佛, evidently same as Dharmatābuddha.

Dharmameghā, 78, 204, 法宴地, literally, dharma-cloud, the last of the ten Bodhisattva stages

Dharmavaram, 68, 最勝法, the highest truth

Dharmavasavartın,於法自在者, one who has control over all things, or one who is perfectly acquainted with all truths. It depends upon how we understand dharma in this connection. Sarvadharmānābhogavasavartitā dharma ityucyate (181—1),於一切法悉得自在,是名法利(T),於一切法無開發(無功用,T)自在,是名為法(S) Sarvadharma,諸法, or 一切法, means "all things," "existence generally," or "the world"; and the whole passage is to be understood thus "to have full control over things worldly without any reference to egotistic purpose." To be master of oneself as well as the whole world—this is indeed the Dharma Bhagavantam sarvayogavasavartinam (11—16), 世事於觀自在(F), "[I wish to see] the Blessed One who is perfect master of all disciplinary practices."

Dharmaviraja, 69, 清淨法, truth immaculate

r

Dharmas cāsarīrah, 151,法身無有身(T), the Dharma (-body) is without the body

Dharmasamatā, 351, 法平等, the sameness of the truth taught by the Tathagatas, one of the fourfold sameness Dharmasthittā, 212, 275. 法住. continuity of existence

Dharmasvabhāvānabodhamanomayakāya, 210, 曼法自性意 成身, the will-body assumed when the self-nature of things is understood as having no self-nature.

Dharmāhāra, 369, 法食, food of truth Dharmāhāra hi mahāmate mama śrāvakāh pratyekabuddhā bodhısattvāśca nāmishāhārāh prāg eva tathāgatāh (255—13, 14) 我諸聲聞緣亞菩薩唯法食 (不食肉),豈況如來 (T) "Mahāmati, my Śrāvakas, Pratyekabuddhas, and Bodhisattvas feed themselves on truth, not on meat, how much more the Tathagatas!"

Dharmātmyalakshana, 111, 法無我相, the belief that there is something substantial behind what is presented to one's view

Dharmānām dharmatā 137, 誘法性, that which constitutes the reason of things

Dhyāna, 38, 河那, or shortly 禪, a concentrated state of mind The classification of Dhyāna into four heads, 367 f, is characteristically Mahayanistic, and the Lankāvatāra's intimate relation to the teaching of Zen Buddhism may be gleaned from it Na shaddhyānādidhyāyinā (10—11), 73, 不近住六定等中 (T) The author has not been able to ascertain what these are

Nata, 195, 工技兒, dancer

Nāyaka, 354, 導着, leader

Nagakanya, 66 ff, 能女, Naga-maidens

Nāma, 26, 155 f, 名, name, one of the Five Dharmas; Nāmamātra, 281, 唯名, name-only Vijnaptir nāmamātreyam lakshanena na vidyate (96—4), 唯假施設名, 求相不可得 (T)

Nāstyastı, 291, 有無, being and non-being

Nihsvabhāva, 96, 166, 168, 287, 無首性, without self-nature  lakshana, 134n, 無首性相, signs indicating the absence of self-nature

Nikāyasahajāsamskārakriyāmanomayakāya, 210, 種類俱生無作行意成身, the will-body acquired by penetrating into the inner realisation of the Buddha

Nitya, 119, 146, 354, 常, eternal, "tā, 120, eternity, Nityam acintyam, 302, 常不思議, eternity unthinkable Nityam acintyam pratyātmāryagatigocaram paramārthagocaram

ca (59—11, 12) 常不思議. 自聖證智第一義獎 (T). Nityānitya, 116, 常無常, eternal and not-eternal. Nītyācintaiveyaṁ tathāgatānāṁ pratyātmāryajñānādhigamatathatā (60—11, 12), 此常不思議, 是諸如來自證聖智所行 真理 (T).

Nimitta, 26, 127, 155 ff, 相, appearance, one of the "Five Dharmss"

Numittalakshanā bhedatvāt, (106—16), 119, 相相不壞故(S), 相不異故, (T), 以想差別故(W).

Nirābhāsa, 40, 98, 138, 140, 141, 148, 160, 208, 247, 340, 360. 無影像 generally, or 無相, imageless, shadowless Cittain hı bhūmayah sapta nirābhāsā tvihāshṭamī (215—11), 七蛇 是有心, 八地無影像 (T); 七地爲心地, 無所有八地 (W); 心量地第七,無所有第八(S). "Up to the seventh stage there is still a trace of mindfulness, but at the eighth the state of imagelessness [i.e. no conscious strivings] obtams " Prajňayā ca nirābhāsam prabhāvam cādhigacchati (158-4). 禁能得無相, 及妙莊嚴堪 (W); 業能器 無相及自在威光(T); (觀察—切法), 通達無所有, 及得自 在力, 是則名慧 (S). "It is by means of Prajfia that the Imageless and the supernatural glory are realised." Nirābhāsagocara, 97, 278, 無照現境, realm of no-shadows Tathatāvyavasthītas ca bodhisattvo mahāsattvo nirābhāsagocarapratilābhitvāt pramuditām bodhısattvabhūmim pratilabhate (226—12 f). 菩薩摩訶薩住如如老, 得無所有電界 故, 得菩薩歌喜地 (S); 菩薩住與如法者, 得入無相寂靜境 界入已,得入菩薩摩訶薩初歡喜地 (W); 菩薩摩訶薩住 如如已,得無照現境,昇歡喜地(T). "The Bodhisattvamahāsattva who abides in the suchness of things, enters into the realm of no-shadows, and thereby reaches the stage of Bodhısattvahood known as Joy", Nirābhāsabuddhi, 278, 無相智 (T), 無所有智 (S), 真實智 (W), shadowless knowledge.

Nirālamba, 144, 非所攀緣, unsupported; Dharmatābuddhaḥ nırālambaḥ (57—13), 法性佛非所攀緣 (T).

P

Nırukti, 134, 辭句, termınologıcal explanation

Nirodha, 39, 127, 148, 183, 290, 303, 滅, cessation, Nirodhasamāpatti, 245, 滅盡定, mental tranquillity, Nirodhasukha, 356, 寂滅樂, the bliss of cessation Bodhisattvena. nirodhasukham samāpattisukham ca sattvakriyāpekshayā pūrvasvapranidhānābhinirhritatayā ca na sākshātkaranīyam (58—13-15), 菩薩不取寂滅空門樂, 不取三摩設提樂, 此憐愍衆生故, 起本願力行故(W), 菩薩非滅門樂, 正受樂, 顧愍衆生及本願, 不作體(S), 以憐愍衆生故, 本顧所持故, 不體寂滅門及三昧樂(T). "Because of his compassion with which he regards all beings and because of his desire to fulfil his original vows, the Bodhisattva does not personally realise the bliss of cessation and that of tranquillity"

Nirgatam, 110, 不出, not out of (water) See Apravishtam Nirmāna, or Nirmānika, 142, 311, 應化; Nirmānakāya, 212, 308 ff, 347, 化身, the transformation-body, Nirmāṇabuddha, 23, 38, 142 ff, 208 f, 316, 化佛, the transformation-buddha, Nirmitādhishthāna, 363 f, 變化加持, being sustained by the power of the transformed one, Nirmitanirmāna, 80, 隱化化佛, Nirmitabuddha, 328, 化佛

Nirvāna, 35 f, 41, 97, 100, 108, 127 ff, 168, 192, 193, 202, 218 ff, 293, 303, 312, 314 ff, 354 涅槃, 減度; Nirvānam āryajñānapratyātmagatīgocaram (99—1), 涅槃者自證書智所行境界 This is one definition of Nirvāna m the Lankāvatāra which is significant in many ways Nirvānam manavarjītam (149—8), 350, 涅槃雜心意 Na buddhah parinirvātī na dharmah parihīyate, sattvānām paripākāya parinirvānam nidaršayet Acintyo bhagavān buddho nityakāyas tathāgatah, dešetī vividhān vyūhān sattvānām hitakāranāt P 315 佛不般涅槃, 正法亦不減。為利森生故、示現有滅盡, 世尊不思議, 妙體無異相, 為利森生故、現種莊嚴 (I-tsing) Nirvānam iti yathābhūtārthasthānadaršanam (200—6), 296, 涅槃者見如實處 (T), "By Nirvāna is meant to see into the abode of reality as it is",

Nirvānadhātu, 264, 涅槃界, the abode of Nirvana, one of the three Asamskritas (三無為法).

Nirvikalpa, 106, 138, 無分別, non-discrimination. Nirvikalpanirābhāsagocaram tathāgatagocaram (78—10), 無分別, 無於像處, 是如來歲門 (T). Nirvikalpācāra, 75. 無分別行, deeds of non-discrimination. Nirvikalpajūāna, 201, 無分別智, non-discriminative knowledge. Nirvikalpalokottarajūānam, 185, 無分別出世間智, non-discriminative transcendental knowledge.

Nirvritti, 185, ik, disappearance.

Nishyanda, 322 f, 所流, 等流, flowing-out or -down; Nish-yandabuddha, 23, 142 ff, 208 f, 所法佛, 等法佛.

Nemina, 354. 阿利吒尼蒲(W).

Nairātmyam, 39, 189, 無我, egoless; Nairātmyadvaya, 29 f, 35, 37, 66, 154, 166 ff. 二無我, the twofold egolessness, pudgalanairātmya (人無我) and dharmanairātmya (法無我).

Nairmānika, 142, 化, transformed; Nairmānikabuddha, 23, 化佛, Buddhas of transformation.

Padmavimāna, 332, 達華(微妙) 宮殿 (T), the lotus-palace. Pañcadharma, 26, 29 f, 141, 154 ff, 161, 162, 175, 194, 211, 316, 五法, the "five categories"

Pancanirmitabuddha. 328, 五化佛. the five transformation—Buddhas, not yet identified.

Pañcaphala, 330, 五果, the five fruits (or effects); see Phala.
Pañcavijñānakāya. 189, 五数身. the system of the Vijñānas.
Paratantra, 158 ff, 161, 163 ff, 322, 依他起任. 綠起相, the knowledge of relativity.

Paramārtha, or paramārthasatya, 148, 160. 163 ff. 244, 273, 277, 288, 311, 第一義語, sometimes distinguished from Samvritisatya, relative knowledge or worldly truth.

Parahita, 214, 利他, benefitting others. Bodhisattvāh.... parahitahetor anekarūpavešadhāriņo bhavanti (72—12-14). 菩薩為未生故,作種種身(T); 為安(穩) 未生故,作 種類像 (S, W) "In order to benefit other people the Bodhısattvas assume various forms"

Parāvrītti, 40, 72, 74, 98, 100, 105, 108, 118, 119, 128, 141, 152, 179, 183n, 184, 185, 195, 197, 211, 247, 299, 360, 362n, 365, 轉依, tuɪning-up, turning-over, 1svulsion

Parikalpa, 105, 115, 122, 200, generally translated as 分別, no special distinction being made between kalpa, pratikalpa, parikalpa, and vikalpa Sometimes we meet with another derivative of kalpa, samkalpa, which is also rendered 分别. But in the "Sagāthakam" (verses 686 and 687) these are distinguished: parikalpa is 獨分別, samkalpa, 總分別, and vikalpa, 別分別. Samkalpa is, according to this, the general function of Citta, parikalpa is the work of Manas, while vikalpa is carried on by Manovijnāna

Parikalpıta, 107, 158 ff, 161, 163 ff, 269, 287, 289, 322, 346, 妄計, false discrimination as one of the three Svabhāvas or Lakshanas It is generally translated as 福計所執性.

Parikalpitābhidhāna. 346 妄心所取名義 (T), phraseologv belonging to erroneous imagination

Pariccheda, (vishaya-), 189, 差別, differentiation

Parijñā or parijñāna, 193, 273, 了知, accurate knowledge

Parmāma, 190, 306, 轉變, evolution, transformation Parkalpam upādāyaivam sarvaparmāmabhedo drashtavyo... (159—12) 但分別故,一切轉變如是 (T) "All the transformations are to be regarded as due to erroneous discrimination"

Parināmanā, 357, 通问, transference, especially of one's merit to another or towards the realisation of supreme wisdom This is one of the most characteristic ideas of Mahayana Buddhism

Parmāyaka, 354, 普導者, the guiding one, one of the Buddha's epithets

Parinirvāna, 361, 殼涅槃

Parınıshpanna, 159 ff, 'lakshana, 31, 固成性, perfect knowledge, one of the Three Svabhavas (三自性), corresponding to Right Knowledge (samyagyāāna, 正智), of the Five Dharmas

Parisuddhi, 253, 清淨, pure

Pām, 353, 手, hand

Pāramitā, 39, 41, 126, 141, 143, 199, 365 ff, 波羅蜜 (palomi), perfection, or reaching the other shore There are six (sometimes ten) Virtues of Perfection, which are regularly practised by the Bodhisattva See also Praniā

Pıśāca, 117, 毘舍閣, a goblin

Punvāpunya, 130, 福非福, merit-demerit Anye punyāpunyaparikshayāt (183—17) 或計福非福盡(是涅槃, T) "Others [think Nirvana consists] in the extinction of both merit and demerit"

Pudgala, 130, 139, 256, 人, the individual soul, Pudgala-dharmanairātmya, 140, 人法無我, the egolessness of both the individual soul and external objects, Pudgalanairātmyajñāna, 167, 人無我智, the knowledge that there is no ego-soul

Puramdara, 353, 不蘭陀羅 (W), city-destroyer, epithet of Indra

Purusha, 130, 人, 士夫, supreme spirit

Purushakāra, 323, 土用果, one of the five "fruits" (phala, 果), literally, man-working It is the effect produced by a human agent at work

Pūnjān, 367, something heaped up (?)

Pūrvadharmasthititā, or Paurānasthitidharmatā, 212, 213, 274, 277, 352, 本住法, originally-abiding truth or reality

Pūrvapranidhāna, 332, 本願, an original vow made by a Bodhisattva when he begins his career as a Mahayana follower of the Buddha

Prithagiana, 143, 異生, generally coupled with bāla, 為夫, meaning a man not yet illumined, i e ignorant

Prithivī, 353, 大地, earth

Posha, 130, 壽者, 蹇者, growth, nourishing or growing one;

found in combination (183—13, 1) with Ātma (我), Satta (衆生), Jīva (命), Posha (壽者), Purusha (土夫), Pudgala (人)

Prakriti, 130, 自性, nature, or original nature, contrasted to Purusha, supreme spirit, Prakritiprabhāsvaram, 255 f, 258 f, 268, 自性清淨, pure in its original essence cittam upakleśair manādibhih, ātmanā saha samyuktam (358—11) 本性清淨心, 隨煩惱意等, 及與我相應 (T) "The Citta, pure in its original essence, gives itself up to the influence of the secondary evil passions, Manas, etc., and the ego"

Pracārīta (-śūnyatā), 288, 行空, emptiness of action, one of the seven Śūnyatās

Prajūapti, 181, 假設, =vijūapti, representation, ideation, mental construction, Prajūaptināmamātreyam, 181, 唯假 設名. This is the form in the "Sagāthakam" 23, but on p 96, vijūapti Evidently, prajūapti and vijūapti are convertible terms as far as the Lankāvatāra is concerned Prajūaptimātra, 181, 281 f, 唯假設; Prajūaptimātram katham (26—17), 181, 281n, 云何唯假設, Prajūaptimātram tribhavam (nāsti vastusvabhāvatah, 168—7), 181, 281n, 三有唯假名, 無有實法體(T), Prajūaptisatya, 242, 假名(T), 世講(S, W), worldly way of thinking Prajūaptisatyato hy ātmā dravyasan na hi vidyate (153—10), 假名世辭我, (施設世辭我), 後則無實事(S, W), 施設假名我, 而實不可得(T) "In accordance with the worldly way of thinking, there is an ego-substance, which, however, has really no existence"

Plajñā, 34, 35 f, 43, 52, 83, 101, 108, 127, 138, 160, 177, 200, 229, 272, 279, 283 ff, 306n, 366, 般若, 智慧, transcendental knowledge, Prajñācakshus, 115, 305, 慧眼, wisdom-eye, Prajñāpāramitā, 206, 般若波羅蜜多, one of the Pāramitās The six or ten Virtues of Perfection (pāramitā) are enumerated, when they are ten, the following four are added to the six 7 Upōya, 方便, means, 8. Pranidhāna, 例。 vows, 9 Bala, 力, power, and 10 Jñāna, 智, knowledge. The last two are more or less repetitions of Virya and Prajñā According to the Yogācāra philosophers all the four are regarded as the amplification of the sixth Pāramita, Prajñā Prajňopāya, 227, 智慧方便, knowledge and means Pratītyasamutpāda, 121, 緣起, the theory of causation Pratibimba. 84. 97. 164. 影像. image.

Prativikalpa, 81, 分别, discrimination Kalpa (20—3), whalpa, samhalpa (總分別, 350—7), parikalpa (福分別, 350—7), pratikalpa—they are more or less synonymous. See also under Parikalpa

Pratiśrut, 85, 響, echo.

Pratishthāpikabuddhi, 165, 建立智, the intelligence whereby a proposition is set up

Pratisankhyanirodha, 264n, 擇減, the annihilation of evil desires by means of the intellect and will, which is Nirvana attained by the Buddhists One of the three Asamskritas (三無為法)

Pratyaksha, 201, 273, 286, 現證, 現量, immediate perception. A good definition of pratyaksha is given in the Mahāvyutpatti, CCII, 1. Satsamprayoge purushasyendriyānām buddhijanma pratyaksham 遇有則人之諸根生覺, 謂之現前. "When an object appears before a sense-organ the latter perceives it and recognises it as something external" This is immediate knowledge forming the basis of all other forms of knowledge —pratyātmāryaiñāna

Pratyava, 139, 354, 緣, causation

Pratyayābhīvyakti, 307, 黎明了轉變, one of the nine Pailnāmas, but what it means is not explained.

Pratyātmāryajñāna, 67, 68, 74, 85, 98, 100 f, 103, 109, 114, 127, 132, 140, 150, 153, 184, 193, 253, 273, 277, 307, 339, 自證(登)聖智 Pratyātma (自證), āryajñāna (聖智), gatigama (所行), adhīgama (所證), gocara (受界), dharma with its synonyms, and some other terms appear in the

Lankāvatāra in almost every possible combination is natural seeing that the object of the sutra is to elucidate the doctrine of Pratyātmajñāna The following gives all the chief combinations to be found in it grouped under I Those containing āryajñāna as principal ideas, though they also frequently include such words as gocara, lakshana, gati, gatigama, or adhigama, yet the main stress of the combination may be regarded as placed on jāāna; 2 Those phrases purporting to emphasise the experience-aspect of the realisation, i.e., those made up with such terms as gocara, gotra, gati, gatigama, or adhigama, and without any special reference to its intellectual significance, and 3 Those combinations more expressive of the metaphysical sense which is conveyed in terms such as dharma. dharmatā, vastu, tathatā, tattvam, or bhūtakoti

- 1 Pratyātmajāāna (with or without sva), 2—7, 98—2, 228—4, 231—10, (with gocara), 13—13, 21—4, 35—7, 50—10, 231—1, (with gatigocara), 99—1, 67—17, 68—6, 62—12, (with gatilakshaṇa), 49—17, 50—6, 133—2, 13, (with gatigama), 89—3, 87—12, (with adhigama), 61—12, 75—8, 80—2, 93—1, 12, 194—18, (with tathāgatabhūmi and gata), 93—4, (with vastumukha), 94—14, which is variously translated in the Chinese showing discrepancies in the original texts 整智自證法性門 (T), 整人內身證智門 (W), 自住事門 (S) In one case buddhis used for jāāna, 133—10, sometimes āryajāāna is not prefixed by pratyātma, for instance, 125—12, 77—10, 75—9, 165—10; sometimes we have vedyā substituted for jāāna, 88—13, 215—13, sometimes vedyagata, 3—12, 16
- 2 Pratyātmagati (with or without sva, and sometimes with tathāgata, ārya, or lakshana), 5—14, 6—2,8—12, 11—6, 18—12, 58—10, 11, 16, 17, 62—1, 123—8, 127—17, 155—12, 224—18, 238—6, 7, (with gatigocara), 4—16,

5—5, 7—8, 7—11, 11—16, 13—13, 23—16, 39—16, 49—5, 55—1, 57—9, 59—11, 155—2, 172—12, 242—15; (with gatigama), 43—8, 222—3; (with adhigama), 58—3, 4. 12, 60—4, 61—8, 148—11; (with abhisamayagotra), 64—12; (with tathāgatabhūmi), 224—10, 214—4, 10—15.

3 Pratyātmadharma (or dharmatā), 6—11, 8—1, 143—5, 144—12, 185—3, 226—18; (qualified with vedyagatı), 3—12, 3—16, (with nayalakshana), 15—3; (with tattvam), 48—14; (with vastu), 95—4; (with tathatā), 132—3, (with bhūtakoji), 88—13.

In the "Sagāthakam" we have the following combinations Pratyātma-vedyayāna, 163, "dharmatā, 350, "vedya, 421, "tathatā, 545, "gatigama, 746, "drishṭigatīka, 781, "drishṭadharma, 881

Pratyekabuddha, 獨是. 終覺, a solitary Buddha who has no desire to announce his truth to the world; Pratyekabuddhayāna, 360, 終覺乘.

Pradhāna, 264, 勝者, Pradhānam īśvarah kartā cittamātram vikalpyate (79—12), 勝自在作者, 此但心分別 (T).

Prandhāna, 203, 205, 209 f, 340, 355 f, 357, 頤, vow, prayer, earnest wish

Prapanca, 137, 200, 201n, 戲論, vain talk, diffusive trivial reasoning; 'darśana, 345, 虚妄見; 'daushthulya, 190, 戲論 過惡; Anādikālaprapancadaushthulyavikalpavāsanāhetukam (43—7), 無始虛偽過惡妄想習氣因(S). "Owing to the habit-energy accumulated since beginningless time by trivial erroneous discrimination."

Prabandha, 183, 相續, continuation

Prabhāva, 203, 356, 威力, 威神力, sovereign power, = anubhāva and adhishthāna.

Prabhedapracāra (m vyavasthānayati, 57—12), 143, 分別號 祭建立(S), 建立差別行(W).

Prabhedanayalakshana (127—14), 110, (妄計自性) 差別相, the aspect of individuation arising from false imagination. Pramāna, 134, 137, 量, logical survey. Naikatvānyatvobhayatvānubhayatvasambaddham tat sarvapramāṇavnnvrītam (189—16) 非一非異,非俱非不俱,以是義故,超一 切量(T). "That which is not bound by [such opposites as] oneness and otherness, bothness and not-bothness, is beyond all logical survey"

Pramudītā, 222, 歡喜地, the stage of Joy, the first of the ten Bodhīsatvabhūmi

Pravicayabuddhi, 165, 概禁智, the intellect that sees into the self-nature of existence which is beyond the fourfold proposition (catushkotika, 四句)

Pravritti, 182, 185, 生起, 轉, rising, appearance, *vijñāna, 186 ff, 198, 210, 336, 轉識, the Vijñāna in its dynamic aspect, ie as evolving in conjunction with the sense-organs

Prasama, 85, 液滅, tranquility

Präyogikacaryā, 224, 加行, 有功用行, effortful life, opposed to anābhoga. 無功用.

Preta, 118, 饿鬼, hungry ghost

Phala, 323 f, 果 There are five "fruits" or effects (pañcaphalāni) 1 Vipākaphala, 異熟果 when an evil deed 18 committed, the doer suffers pain, when a good is done, he enjoys pleasure Pleasure and pain in themselves are unmoral and neutral as far as their karmaic character is concerned Hence the name "differently ripening" 2 Nishuanda。 等流果 when an evil (or a good) deed is done, this tends to make the doer more easily disposed towards evils (or goods) As cause and effect are of the same nature, this phala is called "flowing in the same course '' 3 Purusha° 土用果 vegetables or cereals grow abundantly from the earth owing to the will, intelligence, and labour of the farmer, as the harvest is the fruit brought about by a human agency, the name purusha 18 given to this form of effect 4 Adhipati. 增上果 that anything at all exists is due to the cooperation positive or negative of all other things; for if the latter interfere in any way, the former will cease to exist. When thus the co-existence of things is regarded as the result of universal mutuality, it is called "the helping" 5 Visainyoga" 陰聚果 Nirvana is the fruit of spiritual discipline, and as it enables one to be released from the bondage of birth-and-death, it is called "freeing from bondage"

Bandhanam cittasambhavam, 179, (彼相卽是過·皆從心轉生(T), the bondage is mind-made, that is, this world of faulty appearances is the construction of the mind

Bandhābandhavikalpa, 111f, 轉解分別, discrimination as to bondage and release, one of the twelve Vikalpas

Bala, 39, 66, 97, 142, 150, 209, 力. The ten powers of the Bodhisattva according to the Avatamsaka (Sikshananda. LVI) are 1 Aśayabala, 深心力, having a mind strongly turned away from worldliness. 2 Adhyāśaya". 增生深心 力, having a belief growing ever stronger in Buddhism; 3 Prayoga*, 加行 or 方便力 the power of discipling himself in all the exercises of Bodhisattvahood; 4. Pranā. 智力, the intuitive power to understand the mentalities of all beings, 5. Pranidhana, 顯力, the power of making every prayer fulfilled, 6. Caryā°, 行力, the power of working till the end of time; 7 Yāna°, 乘力, the power of creating all kinds of conveyance (yana) without ever giving up the Mahāyāna; 8 Vikurvana°. 神變力, the power of making a world of immaculate purity in every pore of the skin, 9 Bodhe, 客提力, the power of awakening every being in enlightenment: 10. Dharmacakrapravartana° 轉法輸力, the power of uttering one phrase which appeals uniformly to the hearts of all beings

Bala-abhijñā-vasīta, 346, 327, 力, 神通, 自在, the powerssupernatural-faculties-self-mastery, generally found in triplet as the endowments of the Bodhisattva

Balin, 354, 大力者, the strong one, an epithet of the Buddha

Bālopacārikam, 367, 為夫所行禪, one of the four Dhyānas mentioned in the Lankāvatāra, p 97. Though he is regarded as ignorant or dull-witted (bāla) who practises this kind of Dhyāna, this is the ordinary form of meditation callied on by most people, some of whom are quite intelligent and sharp-witted But the Mahayana goes beyond these meditations which are more or less relative and artificial and not of the highest sort, for meditating on impurities, the impermanence of things, sufferings of life, etc., is the first lesson for the beginners of Buddhism Bāhyamadhyātmaka, 116, 內外表, external and internal

Bāhyabhāva, 132, 272,外法, an external world ——abhāvānabhinivesāt (184—16), 不取外线 (T), 不著外性 (S), 不取著外路线界 (W), "By not clinging to the existence or non-existence of an external world"

Buddha, 35 f, 354, 佛, 佛陀, 登者, the enlightened one Deśanādharmanishyando yac ca nishyandanirmitam, buddhā hy ete bhavet paurāh śeshā nirmānavigrahāh (320—1,2), 329 依法身有報, 從報起化身, 此為根本佛, 餘皆化所現 (T), 說是真法智, 所有某作化, 是諧佛根本, 餘者應化佛 (W)

Buddhatā, 137, 277, 佛性, 佛體也, that which constitutes Buddhahood . kleśadvayaprahānāc ca mahāmate buddhānām bhagavatām buddhatā bhavatı (140—12, 13),
. 斯二煩惱是佛體性 (T) "The reason of Buddhahood consists in the destruction of the twofold Kleśa (evil passions), etc"

Buddhadharma, 152, 155, 360, 佛法, Aparapraneyā bhavishyanti buddhadharmeshu (133—5), 於佛法中不由他悟 (T), "In the teachings of the Buddha they establish themselves not depending upon anybody else" Buddhabuddhatā sarvapramānendriyavinivrittā, 137, 正等查者, 永離一切諸根境界(T), Buddhasya buddhatā, 153,319, 佛體性 Vāhānukūlā nityāśca tathā buddhasya buddhatā (234—8), (譬如恒河沙, 悉雕一切過), 而恒路順流, 佛體亦如是(T)

"As the sands of the Ganger which always arrange themselves along the stream, so does the essence of Buddhahood [conform itself to the stream of Nirvana].

Buddhahetūpadeša 354. 佛性----- 敬惡(T). one who teaches the reason of Buddhahetd.

Buddhi 27r. 152. 162. 164 f. (two kinds of). 202. 答. The difference between buddhi and jrāno is sometimes differ it to point out definitively. for they both signify worldly relative knowledge as well as transperdental knowledge. Projūž is distinctly the latter.

Buddhiboddhavya 116 曼. 所受. krowing and knowakle.
— rekitań sańyakszóbuddhatvan (190—7). 正等受管
(T). 離憂所受.

Bodhi or saihodhi 38. 菩提 on 正安. enlightenment: Bodhieitotpäda. 103. 206, 魯書提心. awakening the thoughi of enlightenment.

Bodhipakshya the thirty-seven. 352 三十七章道品。which is fully stated scaptatrimicabodhipakshing dharmah, the thirty-seven items leading to enlighterment. They are:

I. The Four Serrity upasthara 四全度, the four objects of meditation: L kāya", 身, the bady; 2. redand". 受. seasetions: 3. cetto". . it. thought: 4. dharma". E. the Doctrine. II The Four Samyakprākaņa. EEE, the four right ways of outting down evil desires and thoughts: L to keep down evils that have not yet been done: 2 to uproct evils that have already been put in action; I to do goods that have not yet been done: 4. to make goods already done grow ever stronger. III. The Four Riddlipāda. 匹拉蓋 A. four strong determinations to attain supernatural powers by means of executivation on: I chande, & desire; 2. cittc. 心, thought; 3. rivys. 特達. exergy; 1. numanisa. 親. reflection. IV. The Five Indriva. 正長, five controlling principles: L freddhe". 信. faith; L rivys". 釋 是. erergy: 3. smritt. 左. windfulters: 4. samādnī . 定. concentration; 5. prajita. E. wisdom. V. The Five Bala. 五力, the five powers which are the same as the five Indriyas, the one is conceived as a sort of principle by which the other is manifested VI The Seven Bodhyanga, 七登支, the seven factors leading to enlightenment 1 smrite, 念, mindfulness, 2 dharmapravicaya, 禄法, a discerning judgment for the right doctrine, 3 vīrya, 精选, energy, 4 prīte, 喜, joyfulness, 5 praśrabdhe, 輕安 repose, 6 samādhe, 定 concentration, 7. upekshā, 拾, equanimity VII The Eight Angikamārga, 八正道, the eight noble paths of righteousness 1 samyagdrishte, 正見, right view, 2 *kalpa, 正思惟, right thinking, 3 *vāg, 正語, right speech, 4 *karmānta, 正菜, right conduct, 5. *jīva, 正命, right livelihood, 6 *vyāyāma, 正動, right effort, 7 *smrīte, 正念, right mindfulness, 8 *samādhe, 正定, mind hightly collected

Bodhisattva, the meaning of, 345, 菩提薩埵, 菩薩. 聲有情, one who seeks enlightenment not only for himself but for others, another name for the Mahayana follower, Bodhisattvecchantiko 'tra mahāmate ādiparinirvritān sarvadharmān viditvātyantato na parinirvāti (66—11), 220, 大慧. 彼菩薩一闡提, 知一切法本來涅槃, 畢竟不入 (T) "Mahāmati, the Bodhisattva-icchantika knowing that all things are in Nirvana from the beginning refrains for ever from entering into Nirvana"

Bodhyangas, 39, 菩提支, factors of enlightenment Brahma, 352, 梵

Brahmayāna, 360, 梵乘

Bhāva, 131, 193, 307, 法, 有, existence, being, sometimes = dharma, sometimes = lakshana In the following instances = dharma Astitvam sarvabhāvānām (156—7), 見諸法實有(W), Abhāvāt sarvadharmānām (156—9), 一切法若無(W); Sarvabhāvā anutpannāniruddhāh (198—1), 一切諸法不生不減(T) Bhāva is lakshana in these examples Bhūtāvināśac ca svalakshanam notpadyate na

mirudhyate (198—2), 大種不壞, 以其自相不生不滅 (T); Bhūto bhūtasvabhāvam na vijahāti (198—3), 大種不捨其自性(T). Bhāvābhāva, 128, 有無, being and non-being. Bhāvasvabhāva, 43, 124,性自性(S), 自性(T), 諸法自性(T), 法性(T), reason, being, self-nature, that which constitutes the essential nature of a thing Na mahāmate yathā bāla-prithagjanair bhāvasvabhāvo vikalpyate tathā bhavati (163—16), 一切凡悉。分別諸法,而諸法性非如是有(T). "The nature of existence is not, Mahāmati, as it is discriminated by the ignorant." Tatra vitatham iti mahāmate na tathā yathā bhāvasvabhāvaḥ kalpyate (199—16f), 言 藏妄者不如法性起顛倒見(T). "By being 'false' it is meant not to discriminate things as they are in themselves." Bhāvasvabhāva (-śūnyatā), 288, 自性本, emptiness of selfnature, one of the seven Śūnyatās Bhāskara, 354, 火, an epithet of the Buddha.

Bhūta, 74, 實, reality, element (mahābhūta)

Bhūtakoti, 164, 259, 262, 287, 354 實際, the limit of reality.

Bhūtatā, 213, 275, 354, 法性(?T), reality Yanmayā.... adhigatam sthitaivaishā dharmatā . tathatā bhūtatā ... (144—4 f), 我所証其如常住法性(T) "What has been realised by me, that is the ever-abiding nature of things, suchness, reality, etc."

Bhūmi, 97, 抢, stage; 353, 大抢, earth. Bodhisattvabhūmi, 菩薩地, of which there are ten, grading the upward course of the Bodhisattva's spiritual development, which culminates in the realisation of Buddhahood. The Daśabhūmika-sūtra is specifically devoted to the treatment of the ten stages of Bodhisattvahood. See J. Rahder's edition, in which, however, the gātha portions are mostly omitted. In the Laṅkāvatāra (chapter on "Abhisamaya"), the distinction between the Bodhisattva and the two Vehicles is emphasised, as the latter are unable to go up further than the sixth stage where they enter into Nirvana. At the seventh stage, the Bodhisattva goes through an altogether new spiritual experience known as anabhogacarya, which may be rendered "a purpo-eles- life" But, supported by the majestic power of the Buddhas, which enters into the great yous first made by the Bodhisattva as he started in his career, the latter now devises various methods of salvation for the sake of his ignorant and confused fellowbeing. But, continues the Lanl avalara from the absolute point of view of the ultimate truth (paramartha) attained by the Bodhisativa, there is no such graded course of spirituality in his life, for here is really no gradation (Lrama), no continuous ascension (Lramanusandhi 相類), but the truth (dharma, 法) alone which is imageless (nirablaca. 年以後, and detached altogether from discrimination (vilalpayiril tadharma). The names of the ten stages are.] Pramuditā (柱容地), 2 Vimalā (陸垢), 3. Prabhākarī(受光), 4 Areishmati, 能打, 5 Sudurjayā, 極疑踪, 6 Abhimukhī, 现前, 7. Dūramgamā, 遵行, 8 Acalā, 不動, 9. Sidhumati. 空下, and 10 Dharmameghā 往至 tabular description of each stage, see Sylvain Lévi's French translation of the Mahavana-sutralamkara by Asanga

Bhrānti. 38, 40, 118, 200 274 妄法 roaming, error: Bhrāntis
tatīvam (107—3), 119, 妄法是真質(T), 迷惑法名之為質
(W); 空制真質(S). Bhrāntīh śāśvatā. (106—16), 119, 妄法是常相(T), 迷惑法常(W); 惡亂常(S).

Mattapurusha 360, 皆醉人, drunken man Yathā hi mattapurusho madyābhāvād vibudhyate (135—14), 管如香醉 人, 酒消然後悟(T). "Lake unto a drunken man who grows conscious when the effect of liquor wears off"

Madhyamā. 163, 242. 中道, the middle way. Vimvrittir vikalpasya pratipatsye ca madhyamā (311—2). 亦輕妄分別, 此行契中道(T) "When discrimination is done away with, the middle way is reached"

Manas 84 99, 171 ff, 177, 190, 195 ff, 282, 意, consciousness as the will-to-be

Manomayakāya, 145, 208 ff, 331, 354, 意生(成)身, the will-body

Manomayadharmakāya, 318, 如來意成法身, the Tathagata's Dharmakāya as a will-body

Manovijñāna, 38, 84, 171 f, 177 f, 191 意識, consciousness more intellectually conceived; the world of particulars

Mano hyubhayasamcaram, 250, 意具二種行 (T), Manas walks m two ways.

Manyatı, 250, 思慮, to reflect

Mahā-augha. 193, 暴流, great flood Yathā kshīne mahā-aughe tarangānām asambhavah (127—12). 如大暴流盡 波浪則不起(T) "It is like a great flood whose force being exhausted waves are no more stirred in it"

Mahākarunā, 34, 97, 152, 177, 223, 357, 大悲, 大悲心, great love, great compassionate heart Bodhisattvāh pūrva-pranidhānakripākarunopetāḥ. (214—2, 3), 菩薩便憶念本願大悲(T) "Recalling their original vows growing out of a great compassionate heart, the Bodhisattvas"."

Mahāpranidhāna, 230, 大願, great vows made by the Bodhisattva in the beginning of his spiritual career

Mahābhūta, 246, 大種, primary elements.

Mahāmatı, 大慧, the principal interlocutor in the Lankāvatāra

Mahāyāna, 358 f, 大乘, the great vehicle

Mahāvānaprabhāna, 203, 大乘光明定, a samādhı.

Mahāvogayogun, 103n, 大修行者, he who exerts himself in the great discipline leading up to Buddhahood

Mahāśūnyatā, 288, 大空, emptiness of the highest degree, that 18, pai amārthāryajñāna,第一義整智大空.

Māmsacakshus, 114, 肉眼, human eye Buddhyā na māmsacakshā (13—3), 以禁眼觀, 非肉眼觀(T).

Māmsabhakshana, 368 ff 肉食, meat-eating

Māyā, 幻, magic, Māyāvishava, 141, 317, 幻境, realm of māyā

Māyopama, 97, 100, 168, etc, 如幻, māyā-like; Māyopama-

samādhi, 209, 如幻三昧, the highest samādhi in the Lan-Lāvatāra, Māyopamasamādhikāya, 140, 如幻三昧身, the body in which this samādhi is realised

Mārga, 39, 道. path, Mārgam ashtāngīkam, 358, 八支道, the eightfold path See under Bodhīpakshya, Mārgasatya, 354, 道論.

Muni, 36 f, 牟尼

Mülatathāgata, 146, 316, 根本如來, the original Tathagata, =Dharmakāya, =Dharmatābuddha

Mrigatrishnā, 112, 陽炎, 鹿谒, deer-thirst, fata morgana Mritpaiamānu, 187, 泥微座, clay-atom, bhyo mritpindo na cānyo nānanyah (38—9), 泥團與微塵, 非異不非異(T), "A lump of clay is neither different nor not-different from its atoms"

Maitrīvihāri, 370, 安住慈心, those who abide in compassion. Moksha, 38, 132 f, 解脫, emancipation

Moha, 259, 海, folly, one of the three poisonous desires

Maunatathāgata, 80, the Tathāgata in silence, =mūlatathāgata Nothing corresponding to this in the Chinese translations

Maulatathāgata, 145n, 根本如來, the original Tathāgata Yathātathyadarśana, 73, 如實見, seeing into the truth as it is Yathātathyamudrā. 302, 如實印, the seal of suchness Vimokshatrayādhigatayāthātathyamudrāsumudriā bhāvasvabhāveshu pratyātmādhigatayā buddhyā pratyakshavihārino bhavishyanti nāstyastitvavastudrishtivivarjitāh (166—3,5) 得三解脫,如實印所印,於性自性,得終自臺觀察住,離有無事見相(S),得三解脫門,得已以如實印善門諸法,自身內證智慧觀察,離有無見(W),悟三解脫門,聽如實印,見法自性,了聖境界,遠離有無一切諸著(T) "Let all beings realise the triple emancipation, be well stamped with the seal of suchness, abide in the intuitive understanding of the self—nature of things, which is to be gained by the inner faculty of realisation, and cease from viewing things in their relative aspect"

- Yathābhūtam, 105, 114, 115, 118, 119, 121, 122, 128, 132, 195, 197, 215, 268, 278, 274, 282, 285, 294, 335, 339, 341, 如實, truly, as it is.
- Yathābhūtasvalakshanāvasthānāvasthītam, 123n, 如實相自 相分齊住(S); 住如實處(T); 住於自相如實法中(W); "abiding in the place where reality remains in its original identity"
- Yathābhūtārthasthānadarśana, Tatra nırvānam iti mahāmate (200—6), 123; 大慧言涅槃者, 見如實處(T);....如具實義見(S);....謂見諸法如實住處(W). "Mahāmatı, Nırvana means seeing into the abode of reality in its true signification" The abode of reality is where a thing stands by itself, and we have in the Lankāvatāra the following (178—15) avasthāne 'vatishthata iti na pravartata ity artho . 自處住者, 是不起義(T) "To abide in one's self-station means not to be astir, [i e to be eternally quiescent]."
- Yathābhūtāvasthānadarśana, 123, 123n, 127, 278 °m sarvadharmānām yaduta svacuttadriśyamātrāvatārah (112—6), 如實處是一切法者, 謂起(超)自心現量(S); 云何住如實是, 謂入自身見諸法故(W); 是一切如實處者, 謂能了達唯心所現(T) "By 'seeing into the abode of reality as it is' is meant 'to get into the understanding that there is only what is seen of one's own mind, [and no external world as such]'"
- Yathārutārthābhmivishta, 77, 随言取義(T); 如設而取著(W), "to cling to the letter as fully in accordance with the sense"
- Yathārutārthābhmvešasamdhau na prapatata (164—14), 110, 不墮如言取義深密執着 (T); 不墮如所說義計著相續 (S); 不墮執著諧法相懷不相續相 (W) The Wei text seems to differ very much from both Sung and T'ang. But Wei and Sung agree in reading samdhi as 相續 (combination or continuation) while T'ang has 深密 (hidden meaning) for it. I follow the T'ang reading.

- Yathālabdham (at the end of the Tibetan Lankāvatāra), 23, as far as accessible or available
- Yāna, 360, 乘, vehicle The Buddhist doctrine that carries one from this side of birth-and-death to the other side of Nirvana has been compared to a vehicle of conveyance since the early days of Buddhism
- Yugāntāgni, 257, 劫火, fire at the end of the world
- Yukti, 132, 如實, truth, 307, 相應 (轉變), combination, concordance, transformation, Yuktivikalpa, 111 f, 理分別, reasoning as to the existence of the ego, one of the twelve false discriminations
- Yoga, 103, 瑜伽, 修行, discipline, Yogin, 修行者, devotee
- Ranga, 195, 親传衆(S,T), 传兒(W), the stage, theatre.

 Natavan nrityate cittam mano vidūshasādriśam, vijnānam pañcabhih sārdham driśyam kalpeti rangavat (224—2,3).

 心如工伎兒, 意如和伎者, 五識爲伴侶, 妄心親伎衆(S,T), 心如工伎兒, 意如狡猾者, 意識及五識, 虛妄取境界, 如伎兒和合, 許惑於凡夫(W) For the English, see p 125
- Rākshasa, 34, 羅刹, a class of demons living in Lankā under the leadership of Rāvana
- Rāga, 194, 259, 貧, greed, desire to have
- Rāgadveshamoha, 269, 貪瞋痴, known as the three poisons (三毒).
- Rāma, 354, 羅摩, name of a hero
- Ruta, 108 ff, 文字, 語, word Katham ca bhagavan bodhsattvo mahāsattvo yathārutārthagrāhī na bhavatı (154-9, 10), 世常, 菩薩摩訶薩, 何故不應依語取義(T) "O Blessed One, how is it that a Bodhisattva-mahāsattva is not to grasp meaning according to words?"
- Rutārtha, 113, 語與義, word and meaning Rutārthakuśalo bodhisattvo mahāsattvo rutam arthād anyannānyad iti samanupašyati, artham ca rutāt (155—5, 6), 菩薩摩訶薩 審於語義, 知語與義, 不一不異, 義之與語, 亦復如是(T). "The Bodhisattva-mahāsattva who is well acquainted with word and meaning, recognises at once that word is neither different nor not-different from meaning, and vice versa."

Rūpa, 175, 292, 292n, 色, form, material existence; Rūpa-kāya, 315, 318, 色身, the physical body; Rūpadhātu, 346, 色界, world of form, material world; Rūpalakshana, 352, 色相, corporeal features; Rūpaloka 331, 色界, world of form, Rūpasvabhāva, 188, 色自相, the self-nature of the external world.

Lakshana, 165, 182, 183, 186, 193, 288, 307. 料, aspect. sign, appearance Ābhāsa and Nimitta are also translated 料, and it is often confusing in the Chinese sutras to distinguish one from another. Lakshana generally means individual "signs" by which one object is marked off from another object; nimitia is "appearance" or "tangible form"; while ābhāsa is not used by itself in the Lankāvatāra but in its negative form, anābhāsa or nirābhāsa, meaning "imageless," or "shadowless," i.e. "beyond the reach of the senses" Lakshyalakshana, 97, 116, 133, 所相能相, predicating and predicated. This kind of antithesis appears throughout the Lankāvatāra; Lakshanavikalpa, 111 f, 相分别, one of the twelve false discriminations; Lakshanašūnyatā. 288, 相类, emptiness of appearance, one of the Sūnyatās

Lokam vijnaptimātram (ca drishtyaugham dharmapudgalam, 270—1), 181, 如是諧世間, 唯有假施設, 諸見如暴流, 行於人法中(T), 但心如是見。我法如暴水(W). "The world is no more than subjective construction; various views concerning it rage like a torrent, [assuming the reality of] an ego-soul and of an external world."

Vajragarbha, 226 f, 金剛藏, the chief speaker in the Daśa-bhūmika-sūtra, who, inspired by the Buddha, discourses with Vimukticandra (解脫月). That Vajragarbha is the only Bodhisattva referred to in the Lankāvatāra besides its chief interlocutor, Mahāmati, points to this sutra's connection in some way with the Daśabhūmika or the Kegon (Avatamsaka) sutra

Vajradhātu, 177, 全剛界, the universe viewed as the manifestation of Vairocana Buddha whose image is reflected in the heart of every being See also Garbhakośadhātu

Vajrapāni, 145n, 金剛手, literally, thunderbolt-handed, a Buddhist god who accompanies the Buddha and protects him all the time

Vajravimbopama, 97, 金剛喻定 or 三昧 a samadhi It is the highest samādhi attainable by the Buddhist yogin who by this destroys the subtilest form of the Kleśa as if he wielded a thunderbolt (Cf. the Abhidharmakośa, Louis de la Vallée Poussin, Chapter VI, pp 228 f)

Vajrasanhatanakāyo nirmitakāyam daršayet, 315, 世尊金剛 體, 權現於化身 (I-tsing)

Varuna, 354, 如水者 (T), or 水神, river-god, one of the immunerable epithets of the Buddha whereby he is made accessible to immunerable classes of beings

Vasumdharā, 353, 大地, the earth as wealth-contamer

Vaśavartin, 317, 自在, holding command over things The Buddha is regarded as sarvayogavaśavartin (11—16), 於觀自在, acintyadharmakāyavaśavartin, (154—14), 不思議自在法身; sarvadharmānābhogavaśavartin (181—1), 於一切法悉得自在(T, in which 無功用 is omitted), etc

Vasita, 39, 66, 98, 150, 209, 自在, self-control The tenfold mastery or self-control as described in the Avatamsaka (Sikshānanda, XXXVIII and LV) is as follows 1 Âyurvasita, 命自在, mastery over the duration of life, 2 Cutta, 心自在, mastery over the mind which can enter into every possible form of self-concentration, 3 Parishkāra, 黃具 (or 財) 自在, power over an infinite variety of embellishment whereby the Bodhisattva enriches the worlds, 4 Karma, 業自在, submitting himself to the working of karma as the case requires; 4 Upapatti, 受生 (or 生)

自在, mastery over birth so that he can be born in any world; 6. Adhamukti, 解自在, the power of seeing the Buddhas filling up the entire universe; 7. Prandhāna, 頤自在, the power of attaining enlightenment at any moment and in any place as he wills; 8 Riddhi, 神力 (or 如意)自在, the power of exhibiting all kinds of miraculous works; 9 Dharma, 法自在, the ability of teaching Buddhism in all its possible aspects; and 10 Jūāna, 智自在, the power of understanding whereby he reveals in every thought of his the Tathagata's wonderful powers and perfect serenity (abhaya) leading to the realisation of the Bodhi

Vastu, 119, 274, 305 f, 306, 本有, 妙物, 事, 事物, fact, event, reality. Vastu is a flexible term, generally having 事 for it, but its variations are frequently met with For example, for vidyate tathatāvastu (147—6), T'ang has 有真如妙物, Wei 如其本有, and Sung 有事悉如如. Citravastutva(108—8) is rendered 種種事物 in T'ang and 種證法體 in Wei; and na vastu nāvastu (108—9) is 非即是物, 亦非非物(T) Broadly speaking, however, vastu (事) means a particular object discriminated by the mind, but it may also designate ultimate reality conceived as an object of transcendental intuition

Vastuprativikalpajñāna, 189 ff, 336, 事分別離, i.e empirical mind or consciousness as the faculty of discriminating particular objects

Vāksamatā, 351, 語平等, the sameness of all the Tathagatas at regards their power of commanding sounds and languages

Vāgaksharasanyogavikalpa, 108, (云何為語), 謂言字妄想和合(S), "false discrimination in union with [i.e. as expressed in] words and syllables."

Vägyikalpabuddhigocara, 163n, 言語分別智捷, Paramārthas tu mahāmate āryajñānapratyātmagatigamyo na vāgvikalpabuddhigocaraḥ tena vikalpo nodbhāvayatı para-mārtham (87—12, 13). 第一義者是聖智自內證境, 非言語分別不能顯示 (T). Sung mainly agrees with T'ang, but Wei as in other cases widely diverges 第一義者, 聖智內證, 非言語法是投界, 以言語能了彼 投界(W). "The ultimate truth points to the realisation of supreme wisdom in the immost consciousness, and does not belong to the realm of words and discriminative intellect, thus discrimination fails to reveal the ultimate truth" But the lamp of words is useful to illuminate the passage to final enlightenment Vāgvikalparutapradīpena bodhisattvā vāgvikalparahitāh svapratyātmāryagatim anupravišanti (155—11), 109, 菩薩因語言證入雜言說自證投界(T).

Väsanä, 98, 108, 119, 121, 128, 133, 152, 167, 176, 178 f, 183 ff, 199, 201, 206, 208, 習氣, 蒸習, perfuming impression, memory, habit-energy, Väsanävija, 189, 蒸習種子, memory-seed Every act, mental and physical, leaves its seeds behind, which is planted in the Ālaya for future germination under favourable conditions. In the Vijnaptimätra school of Asanga and Vasubandhu, this notion plays an important rôle

Vikalpa, 26, 72, 96, 108n, 155 ff. 200, 201n, 274, 分别, (false) discrimination In the Lankavatara discrimination stands contrasted to intuitive understanding which goes beyond discrimination (avikalya) In ordinary worldly life, Vikalpa, if properly dealt with, works to produce good effects, but it is unable to penetrate into the depths of consciousness, where the ultimate truth lies hidden awaken this from a deep slumber Vikalpa must be aban-Hence the Lanka's strong arguments against it. doned The following are regarded as synonyms of Vikalpa, by which it is meant that they are all productions of dis-Ävur ushmätha vijnänam älayo jivitencrimination drīvam, manaš ca manovijnānam vikalpasya višeshanam (323-2,3),252 蓉(命W) 及於煖識,阿賴(梨,W) 耶命

根, 意及與意識, 皆分別異名(T).

Vikalpapratyaya, 346, 分別縣, conditions of discrimination, 'prapañca, 84, 分別戲論, discrimination and futile reasoning; 'mātra, 281, 唯分別; 'mātram tribhavam (bāhyam ārtham na vidyate, 186—16), 281n, 三有唯分別(外境恐無有), 'the triple world is no more than [the product of] discrimination, there is no such thing as an external world', 'lakshanagrāhābhinivesaprashthāpikā (-buddhi), 27n, 取相分別執着智, which makes one cling to signs of individuality and work out false discrimination. This Buddhi is contrasted to the Pravicaya (觀察智). (Nirābhāsa-) vikalpaviviktadharma, 277, 無所有妄想衰滅法, truth which is imageless and detached from discrimination. See also Viviktadharma, 寂滅之法, the solitary, the eternally serene.

Vikrīdita, 66, 遊戲, literally, sportive. This is an important conception describing the life of a Bodhisattva, which is free from every form of constraint and restraint. It is like that of the fowls of the air and the lilies of the field, and yet there is in him a great compassionate heart functioning all the time freely and self-sufficiently. =Lalita

Vicārāparapraņeya, svapratyātmabuddhyā (133—11), 273, (自覺)觀察不由於他(S), to examine with one's own intelligence, not depending upon another

Vicikitsā, 359, 疑, doubt

Vicitratva, or vicitratā, 160, 272, 種種, multiplicity, manifoldness, multitudinousness

Viciyate, 190, 250, to divide, to put in order; but the Chinese translators read "to accumulate extensively" Manasā ca vicīyate (46—17). 意能廣積集(T); 意名廣採集(S); 意能觀集境(W) On p 302 we have "jñānena ca vicīyate," 智於中分別(W); and on p. 158 "jñānena vidhīyate," 不採集為智(S); 智能了分別(W); 觀察法為智(T). See also Vidhīyate and Cittena cīyate karma

Vijānāti. 251, to distinguish, to recognise Vijhānena vijānāti driśyam kalpeti pancabhih (46—18), 了別故名意. 對現境說五 (T); 諸觀觀所識. 現等境說五(S); 藏能了所識. 五藏現分別(W). "Cognition goes on by the Vijnāna, whereas the discrimination of what is presented [as an external world] is done by the five [Vijnānas]."

Vijnapti, 181, 279, 280, 282, representation translated in the Chinese texts: 1 說 or 語, na svabhāvo na vijnaptir na vastu na ca ālayaḥ (167—16), 無自性無 說,無事無依處(T); —— 無相綴(S); 無自體無驗, 無阿 2. 假名, 設言教, 施設名, nimittam vastu 数耶融 (W) vijuaptim manovispanditam ca tat (168-9)。 相事設言數, 貯亂極壓掉(S): 相事及假名,心意所受用(W): 假名諸事 相,動亂於心識(T) Vijnaptimātravyavasthānam (169—5), 是施設量建立(S); 境界唯是假名(T), 善知唯是內心 (? W deviates greatly and is hard to get at the original). 3. 表示. (T). Cittam vikalpo viinaptir mano viinanam eva ca (323-17), 心意及與證, 分別與表示(T); 心分別及證, 意及於意識 (W). 4. 假施設, lokam vijnaptimātram ("Sagāthakam" 44), 如是諧世間, 唯有假施設(T), 但心 如是見(W suggests a different text). 5 Vinaple appears in other connections where the Chinese point to ceratin discrepancies Vijnaptimātram tribhavam ("Sagāthakam" 77), 三界唯是心 (T, W) Param ālayavijnānam vinnaptır ālayam punah ("Sagāthakam" 59), 顯示阿賴 耶, 殊勝之歳證 (T); 阿賴耶本證, 意及於意證(W) Tarkavijnaptivarjitam (Sagā 28), 離於妄計度 (T), 離於諸覺觀 (W). Dehah pratishthā bhogas ca grāhyavijnaptayas trayah, manodgrahavıjnaptıvıkalpo grāhakās trayah (Sa v. 72). 身套及所住, 此三爲所取、 意取及分別, 此三爲能取 (T) W has nothing corresponding to this, while T omits vijnapti; but the body, property, and abode, Manas, holding-on, and discrimination—these are evidently vijfiapiss, i e ideas or representations Vijnaptimātra, 181, 239n, 278 ff, 唯識 or 假施設, ideas only 'vyavasthānam (164 —5), 181, 281n, 境界唯是假名(T). Vijnaptidvavavar-

- 倒非頭倒覺(T). "To the wise, [what is to be ordinarily regarded as] an error. [that is, this world of particulars] appears neither perverted nor unperverted."
- Vipāka.
 206.
 208,
 251,
 314.
 322 f.
 成於.
 異然, maturing,

 ripening.
 Vipākaja(-buddha).
 142.
 325.
 報生傳;
 Vipākabbuddha,
 16, 324,
 334,
 (異熟傳?)
 報傳; Vipākasthabbuddha,
 142,
 324.
 報(住) 傳。(異熟住傳?).
- Vibhāvana, 200,觀察(T),善分別(S),善知(W). penetrating comprehension. Svacittadriśyavibhāvanatayā (79—18), 觀察自心所現故(T), "by thoroughly comprehending that the world is the manifestation of one's own mind."
- Vimoksha, 39, 143, 354, 解說, emancipation; "mukha, 解說門, emancipation-entrance; "traya, 138. 166n, 362. 363, 三解說, the three emancipations, which are: 1. Śūnyatā (空, emptiness), 2. Animitta (無相, having no-signs), and 3. Apraņihita (無額. desirelessness); they are also called the three Samādhis
- Vivarjana, 200, 遠離, free from. Utpādasthitibhaigadrishtīvivarjanatayā (80—1), 遠離生性減見故"by freeing oneself from the view [that is based upon the reality] of birth. abiding, and disappearance."
- Vivikta, 245, 260, 266, 激減(T), 寂静(S. W). disjoined, solitary, alone, eternally serene; dharma, 221, 226, 海域之法, that which is alone, the truth solitary. Na... paramārthe kramo na kramānusændhir nirābhāsavikalpaviviktadharmopadeśāt (215—7.8). 第一卷中亦無來第, 無來第行, 諸法寂静亦如證空(W); 於第一卷無來第和類說。 無所有妄思,說被法(S); 第一卷中, 無有來第, 亦相類, 遠一切境界分別, 此則名寂滅之法(T). Viviktadharmamatibuddhi. 221, 寂滅整(T), 寂滅智慧覺(S); 知覺諸法寂静(W).
- Vivecya, 162, 観察 (reality) discerned (from falsehood). Visuddhi. 38,清净, purity, or purification.
- Vishaya, 171, 174, 180, 196, 264. 272. 282. 支界, individuation. external world, world of particulars; generally distinguishable from artha. which means each particular sense-

Tatra vitatham iti mahāmate na tathā yathā bhāvasvabhāvah kalpyate nāpyanyathā (199—17). 頻倒者如心分別,此法如是如是,而彼法不如是如是 (W);不如實者不爾如性自性,妄想亦不異 (S); 虚妄者不如法性起頭倒見 (T).

Vitarka, 201n, 計度, 腔度, speculation, supposition In the Abhidharmakośa, it is generally translated as 摹 (reflection) and found coupled with vicāra (investigation) Tathāgatā na vitarkayanti na vyavacāravanti (240—7). 如來無恐無觀 (T.W): 如來 (常定故) 亦無虚亦無容(S). Vitarkadarsana, 186 Ayam tathagatagarbhalayavijnanagocarah sarvaśrāvakapratyekabuddhatīrthyavitarkadarśanānām prakritiparisuddho 'pi sannasuddha ivāgantukleśopaklishtatayā....(222—14f) 此如來發藏證. 一切整閉 緣覺心想所見,雖自性淨,客庭所發故豬見不淨(S),此如 來心阿梨耶證如來整諸境界,一切整閉辟支佛器外道皆不 能分別,何以故,以如來廢是清淨相,客塵煩惱,垢染不淨 (W); 此如來藏戏識, 本性清淨, 客廛所染, 而爲不淨, 一 切二乘及諸外道臆度起見,不能現證(T). "This realm of the Tathagatagarbha which is [another name for] the Alayavijnana, is beyond the views based on the imagination of the Śrāvakas and Pratyekabuddhas and philosophers, although its original nature is pure, it loses this purity by being contaminated as it were by external dirt "

Vidūsha, 195, jester; Mano vidūshasādriśam (224—2), 意如和伎者(T)

Vidhīyate, 250, 觀察 (? T). 了分別 (W), 不採集 (? S), to arrange

Vināyaka, 354, 勝導者 (T), 廣導者 (S), 將者 (W), remover of obstacles

Viparyāsa, 118, 274, 頭倒, confusion, perversion Bhrāntir āryānām viparyāsāviparyāsavarjitā (106—14, 15) 諸肇於 此惡亂。不起頭倒覺,非不頭倒覺 (S); 諸聖人迷惑法中, 不生頭倒心,亦不生實心 (W); 諸聖者於妄法中,不起頭 mind upon a definite subject or proposition. When the mind is tranquillised by Samatha, it is ready for intellectual activity of the higher sort. The Lankāvatāra is not, however, quite explicit on this point as is The Awakening of Faith in the Mahāyāna

Śarīra, 92, 199, 319, 353, 舍利, 體, 身; Śarīravat, 319, 如舍利, Śarīra-like; solid, indestructible substance Ato jñānātmakās tathāgatā jñānaśrīrāh (20—2, 3) 是故如來以智為體, 以智為身(T), 如來爲智身智體(W). Śarīravatām hi mahāmate nāśo bhavati, nāśarīravatām dharmaś cāśarīrah (232—14-16) For this, Sung has·大慧,身法者有壞,如來法身非是身法; Wei.大慧,一切有身皆是無常磨滅之法,非無身故諸佛如來,唯法身故, T'ang 大慧, 以有身故. 而有滅壞, 法身無身故無滅壞 While all these three Chinese translations have "dharmakāya" (法身), the Sanskrit has only "dharma" "Those that have the [material] body are subject to annihilation, but not those that have no body, and the Dharma has no body"

Seśavishāna, 302n, 更角, hare's horns This generally goes in pair with kūrmaropa, 龜毛, the tortoise's hair One of the favourite comparisons used by Buddhist scholars who by this attempt to illustrate the nature of existence as both real and unreal

Santı, 121, 寂静, 寂滅. tranquillity.

Sāśvata, 119, 123n, 常, opposed to uccheda (斯); eternal, constant, Śāśvata-uccheda, 116, 常斯. Śāśvatocchedavar-jaś ca lokeh (22—10), 世間遠離於斷常(T). Śāśvatavāda, 120,常見, the philosophical school that upholds the eternity of existence as it is Šīla, 366 f, 戒, morahty, one of the sıx Pāramıtās.

Silavrataparāmarśa, 359, 液禁取, taking hold of the merit accruing from the observance of the rules of morality. One of the three knots (三結, samyoga) tying up the followers of the two Yānas See also Satkāyadrishṭi and Vicikitsā.

field or a particular sense-object, pavana, 67, 188, 190, 投界風, wind of objectivity, particular sense, 110, 差别线相, the aspect of individuation

Visamyoga, 323, 離緊果, release from bondage, one of the five "fruits" (phala), q.v

Vīrya, 366 f, 精進 energy, one of the six virtues of perfection (pāramītā)

Vritti, 174, 轉, evolution, differentiation

Vaipākika Buddha, 23, 325, 報佛.

Vyavasthānam, 175, 270, 建立, construction, 安立, a resting abode Cittamātram vyavasthānam kudrishtyā na prasīdati (54—16), 心量安立處。惡見所不樂(S), 唯心所安心,惡見者不信(T); 但心安住處。惡見不能淨(W),說但是於心,那見不能淨(W) in the "Sagāthakam", 439) See also under Vijāaptimātravyavasthānam

Vyavahāra, 163, 世俗, the worldly way of thinking Na cotpādyam na cotpannah pratyayo 'pi na kim ca na, samvidyante kvacit kecid vyavahāras tu kathyate (85—8,9). 無能生所生,亦復無因緣,但隨世俗故,而說有生滅(T); 非已生當生,亦復無因緣,一切無所有,斯皆無言說

(S), 如是等諸法,自體是空無,亦無有住處,爲世間說有

(W) "Nothing is produced, nothing is producing, and even causality is nowhere, there exists nothing whatever anywhere, but in conformity to our worldly experience, it is talked of [them as if things were really existent]"

Vyāsa, 854, 毗耶娑(W), a celebrated sage.

Vyāvrīttī, 253, 轉依, revulsion, turning-over. Manovijāānavyāvrīttam cittam kālushyavarjītam (296—11), 意識若轉 依心則難渴亂 (T)

Śakra, 358, 帝釋天.

Samathasukha, 78, 奢摩多樂, the bliss of tranquillisation Samatha is the practical art of keeping the mind serene and undisturbed by evil thoughts and passions, while Vipasyanā (記, or 里鉢合那) is meditation fixing one's vayanıḥsvabhāvalakshanāvabodhenāham cānye ca bodhisattvā mahāsattvā nāstyastīvikalpavarjitāh kshipram anuttarām samyaksambodhim abhīsambudhyeram (73—12-16). 顧為我說一切空無生無二無自性相,我及諧菩薩悟此相故,離有無分別,获得阿耨多羅三藐三菩提(T). "Pray tell us about the aspect of existence in which things are said to be empty, unborn, non-dual, and without self-substance; when I and other Bodhisattva-mahāsattvas have a thorough understanding as regards this aspect of existence we shall quickly come to the realisation of the supreme enlightenment"

Śrāvakayāna, 360, 聲聞乘, "class of hearers," generally referring to the Buddhists not belonging to the Mahayana. Śrīvatsa, 76, 德字(卐), that is, swastika. Śrotravijūāna, 178, 耳截, auditory sense

Samvriti(-kāya), 311, 應身(?) The body assumed by the Buddha for the benefit of the masses

Samvriti, or Samvritisatya, 160, 163 f, 311, 世俗, 世語(W). 俗語, relative, worldly knowledge, or truth Samvritih paramārthas ca tritīyam nāstihetukam, kalpitam samvritir hy uktā tac chedād āryagocaram (131—2, 3), 世俗第一義第三無因生, 妄計是世俗, 斷則聖境界(T). Sarvam vidyate samvrityām paramārthe na vidyate, dharmāṇām mihsvabhāvatvam paramārthe 'pi drisyate, upalabdhimipsvabhāve samvritis tena ucyate (280—8-10). 世語一切有,第一義則無,諸法無性性,說為第一義,於無自性中,而有物起者(?),是名為俗語(T). "According to relative truth all things exist, but in absolute truth nothing is; in absolute truth one sees that all things are devoid of self-nature, there is, however, a perception where there is no self-nature, hence relative truth"

Sainvrityā deśanā, 38, 160, 隨俗說, relative teaching—katham (25—4, 33—5). 云何隨俗說 (T). See also Vyavahāra

Suka, 354, 戌迦, one of the Buddha's epithets, nothing corresponding to this in Sung and Wei Also the name of Rāvana's minister, 歡迦, 68.

Śuddhisatyātman, 254, real immaculate ego

Sūnya, or śūnyatā, 38, 41, 43, 74, 94n, 101, 115, 116, 118, 123n, 126n, 128, 141, 166, 167n, 168, 170, 239, 259, 286, 354, 舜若多, 空, empty, emptiness void Mahayana Buddhism is popularly identified with Sunyata philosophy this is right as far as it concerns the denial of the substance theory as held by the realistic schools of Buddhism, but we must remember that the Mahayana has its positive side which always goes along with its doctrine of Emptiness The positive side is known as the doctrine of Suchness or The Lankavatāra is always careful Thusness (tathatā) to balance Sünyatā with Tathatā. or to insist that when the world is viewed as śūnya, empty, it is grasped in its Naturally, such a doctrine as this goes beyond the logical survey based on our discursive understanding as it belongs to the realm of intuition, which is, to use the Lankā terminology, the realisation of supreme wisdom in Iha śāriputra rūpam śūnyatā, the inmost consciousness śūnyatawa rūpam, rūpān na prithak śūnyatā, śūnyatāyā na prithag rūpam, yad rūpam sā śūnyatā, yā śūnyatā tad rūpam (Prajnāpāramstāhrudaya), 338n 舍利子,(色是空空 是色) 色不異空, 空不異色, 色卽是空, 空卽是色 putra, this phenomenal world (or form) is emptiness, and emptiness is truly the phenomenal world Emptiness is not different from the phenomenal world, the phenomenal What is the world is not different from emptiness phenomenal world that is emptiness, what is emptiness that is the phenomenal world

Sünyatānutpādamhsvabhāvādvaya, 291 f, 空, 無住, 無自性, 無二 (T), emptiness, no-birth, no-self-substance, no-duality Deśayatu bhagavāñ chūnyatānutpādādvayamhsvabhāvalakshanam sarvadharmānām yena śūnyatānutpādad-

- signs, Mahāmati, the ignorant allow their minds to wander away."
- Samgha, 364, 情傷, brotherhood, one of the three treasures (raina): Buddha, Dharma, and Samgha.
- Saincodana, 151, 令覺知 (W), inspiring, wakening. Apramānah sattvaparipākasaincodanam upādāya (232—6), 欲為成熟無量衆生(T); 爲化衆生令覺知故(W); Pūrvakuśalamūlasaincoditasya (9—12, 13). 往昔所禮善根力故 (T); 以過去世善根力故 (W). Both T and W here have no corresponding words for saincodana, 開發.
- Samjnānirodha, 368, 想滅, cessation of thought.
- Samdha, 213,答意, 答語, secret meaning; Samdhi(-artha), sarvadharma*, 349, 一切法深密義, the secret meaning of existence.
- Satkāyadrishti, 359, 身見, thought of an ego, one of the "Three Knots" (三結, trīṇi saṃyojanāni). There are two ways in which one comes to conceive the real existence of an ego: the one is subjective imagination and the other the objective conception of relativity.
- Sattva, 130,有情, 衆生, being, sentient being.
- Satya, 114, 163, 舒, truth; Satyatā, 212, 275, 354, 静性, truth, true-ness.
- Sadasat, 35, 112, 115, 117, 118, 121, 122, 133, 134, 139, 201, 215, 229, 有無, being and non-being.
- Saddharma, 154, 正法, true teaching, right doctrine. Saddharmaparigrahācca mahāmate buddhavamsasyānupacchedaḥ krito bhavati (195—13, 14). 岩能摄变正法则不断静 稙(T). "When the right doctrine is comprehended, Mahāmati, there will be no discontinuation of the Buddhafamily."
- Saintati, 139, 相數, continuity. Here (79—11) it is evidently one of the views held by the philosophers. In other places the "triple continuity" (frisaintati) is referred to, although its content is not known as far as the Lankavatāra is concerned. See pp. 9—18 and 146—17.

Samsakta, 160, 計著, tied Angulyagram yathā bālo na grihņanti mišākaram, tathā hy aksharasamsaktās tattvam na vetti māmakam (223—224) 如恐見指月, 觀指不觀月, 計著文字者, 不見我真實(T).

Samsāra, 34, 97, 100, 116, 128, 129, 290, 312, 346, 生死, birth-and-death. Samsāranirvānasamatā (42—7) 生死涅槃平等 "The sameness of birth-and-death and Nirvana" is one of the spiritual attainments of the Bodhisattva, who, however, practises "effortless" deeds and "skilful meins" born of a great compassionate heart

Samskrita, 260, 279 有為 distinguished from 無為, asamskrita. Dharmas are grouped under the two heads, and those belonging to the first (samskrita) are seventy-two and those of the second are three according to the Abhidharmakośa, whereas the Vijñaptimātra or Yogācāra school has ninety-four Samskrita-dharmas and six Asamskrita. It is not easy to give one English equivalent for samskrita; it means anything that does something and productive of some effect, anything that can be brought under the law of causation and mutual dependence 有為"doing something," (yu-wei) is a very good Chinese substitute for samskrita and 無為,"doing nothing," (yu-wei) for asamskrita

Samsthāna, 241, 307, 形, 處, form, position

Sakridāgāmin, 368, 斯陀含, 一來, one who comes back once more to this earthly life before he is fully enlightened, the second of the four ascetic fruits (phala) See also under Anā āmin

Sakridāgāmiphala, 148, 斯陀含果, 一來果, the state of coming back once more

Samketa 156, 269, 假名, sign, provisionary symbol Nāmasam; nāmāsamketābhinivešena mahāmate bālāšcittam anusaranti (225—6,7). 凡思不知名是假立,心隨流動(T); 思夫計著俗數名相,隨心流散(S); 一切凡夫計著名相,隨順生法(W). "As they are attached to names, images, and that is, as 建立 versus 誹謗. Samāropa and Apavāda on p 226—10 are however rendered by Śikshānanda (T'ang) as 損益 (loss and gain)—a unique instance in this translation Samāropāpavādāntadvayakudrishtivivarjītam.... 遠離損益二邊惡見 (T); 以離有無邪見故 (W); 捨離二見建立及誹謗 (S).

Samānārthatā, 365, 同事, engaging in the same work This is one of the four sympathetic deeds known as Catvārisamgrahavastūm (四摄法), which are. 1. dāna, 布施, charity; 2 priyavacana, 爱語, kindly talk, 3 arthacaryā, 利行 useful deeds, and 4 samānārthatā, 同事, engaging in the same work

Samāhita, 174, 定, collected state of mind

Sambandhavikalpa, 111 f, 相屬分別, discrimination as to dependence, one of the twelve Vikalpas

Sambodhi, 104, 127, 曼, 正登, enlightenment

Sambhāra, 227, 361, 資程, moral provisions, preparatory material

Sambhogakāya, 308 ff, 347, 142, 施身, Body of Recompense; Sambhogabuddha, 328, 報身, 受用身, Recompense-Buddha.

Samyagjñā, or Samyagjñāna, 26 ff, 155 ff, 278, 正智, right knowledge, one of the five Dharmas

Sarvakalpanāvīrahitam, 118, 遠離一切器分別, being free from all discrimination

Sarvajña, 354, 一切智, all-knowing.

Sarvadharma, 123n, 168, 一切法, 諸法, all things, existence in general, the world; "tathatā, 342, 諸法如, 一切法具如, the thusness of all things; "nirabhilāpya(-śūnyatā), 288, 一切法不可說之, emptiness as the unnamability of existence, one of the seven Emptinesses; "aparigrihīta. 283, 决一切法無疑受定 (Hsuan-chuang), a samādhi; "śūnyatā, 154,一切法全the emptiness of all things; Sarvadharmānām śūnyatā-anutpāda-advaya-nihsvabhāvalakshana, 215, 一切法条禁生, 舞二, 舞自性相, the aspect of existence in which

Samtrāsamāpta, 286, 蒸怖, terror-inspiring.

Samtrāsita, 284, 怖 terrified Bālānām nairātmyasamtrāsapadavivarjitārtham (78—9), 為合為夫難無我怖(T), 為斷 為夫型無我句故(S), 為諸一切恐癡凡夫, 聞說無我生於意 怖(W). "In order to dispel the feeling of fright which is cherished by the ignorant as they listen to the doctrine of non-ego"

Samatā, 99, 310, 346, 354, 平等, sameness, Samatājūāna, 273, 360, 平等智, the knowledge that grasps the principle of sameness.

Samatikram, 224,超過, going beyond.

Samādhi, 39, 66, 85, 121, 132, 140, 148, 三昧, 定. Cittam samādhīyate (58—8) 心得寂止 (S),心性一斑 (T); 得心三昧 (W), Samādhimada, 360, 三昧陋, liquor of samādhi, Samādhisukha, 75, 77, 78, 80, 三昧榮, the bliss arising from a concentrated state of mind. Those who have not yet been able to rise to the rank of Bodhisattvahood are too deeply drunk with the beatitude of a samādhi, forgetful of the outside world where so many unenlightened ones are waiting for emancipation. This class of self-complacent Buddhists is severely indicted by followers of the Mahayana, Samādhisukhasamāpattimanomayakāya, 210, 三昧樂正受定生身, one of the three will-bodies (manomayakāya).

Samāpatti, 39, 74, 75, 140, 150, 正受, 等持, 定, 三摩鉢底, 三摩鈸提. Samāpatti, Samādhi, and Dhyāna are synonymously used in all the sutras except that each has its own usage and shade of meaning. They designate a concentrated state of mind in which the subject is completely identified with the object of meditation. Psychologically, it is a state of consciousness in perfect equilibrium, ie "tranquillised"; Samāpattisukha, 356, 正受樂, 三味樂 — Samādhisukha

Samāropa, 157, 165, 180, 247, 建立, assertion, or theorymaking Samāropa stands against Apavāda (refutation),

between desanā (teaching) and siddhānta (realisation). pp 148, 172, for what comes through the letter and teaching does not in truth belong to one's self, and it is only that which comes out of one's own mind that destroys the fetters So we read Navo hi dvividho mahyam siddhanto deśanā ca vai, deśemi vā(?) bălānām siddhāntam voginām aham (172-17, 18)、 我說二種法, 言教及如實, 教法示凡 夫, 實盒修行者(T). "I teach the twofold truth realisation and teaching I teach the ignorant, realisation is for those who discipline themselves [in Buddhism]." dhāntas ca navas cāpi pratyātmasāsanam ca vai, ye pasyantı vibhāgajñā na te tarkavasam gatah (149-2,3). 宗趣與言說, 自證及敬法, 若能善知見, 不隨他妄解 (T). "Self-realisation and philosophy, inner perception and doctrinal teaching—those who see into their differences and understand well will not be influenced by mere speculation" Cf the Abhidharmakośa, Chapter VIII, Louis de la Vallée Poussin's French translation, p 218 f. where the Good Law of the Master is said to be of twofold nature agama, doctrinal teaching, and adhigama, realisation

Siddhi, 160, 成就, valid, perfected

Sugata, 68, 審逝, en epithet of the Buddha

Sumeru, 77, 須彌山. a mythical mountain

Sükshmamatı, 74, 妙慧(T), exquisite knowledge

Sthiti, 182, 住, abiding, generally in this combination, utpādasthitimirodha (or bangha), 生住滅, birth-abiding-disappearance

Srotaāpanna, 368, 須陀洹(預流), he who has entered the first of the four ascetic fruits See under Anāgāmin

Srotaāpattiphala, 148, 須陀洹果, the state of entering upon the stream

Skandha, 39, 139, 347, 350, 陰, 蘊, aggregate According to Buddhist philosophy, each individual existence is composed of the five elements or aggregates, which are. 1.

all things are to be regarded as empty, unborn, non-dual, and without self-substance, Sarvadharmānām anutpāda, 125, 286, 300. 一切法不生, all things are unborn, Sarvadhaimā nirātmānah, 135, 一切法無我, all things are egoless; Sarvadharmānupādāna 283, 於一切法無執取定(Hsuan-chuang), a samādhi, Sarvadharmā bhangotpādavarjitah (199—14, 15), 294. 一切諸法(亦爾), 雜於生滅(下), 二年以前法不生不滅(下), Sarvadharmavasavartin. 77, (世季)於法自在(下), master of all the world

Sarvabhūtītmabhūta (-sya kripātmanah sarvam māmsam abhakshyam bodhisattvasya 248—15 f), 367, 菩薩慈之一切永生預如已身 . 不應食肉(T) "The Bodhisattva who regards all beings as himself ought not to eat meat"

Sarvābhogavigata, 224, 捨一切功用行 (Šikshānanda), discarding all effortful works

Sarvarūpāvabhūsam hī yadā cittam pravartate (276—12), 244, 永色由心起 (T), 現蓋一切色、心法如是生 (W)

Sahāloka, 353, 娑婆世界, a world of endurance, that is, thus world

Sādhumatī. 78, 客誌地, one of the Daśabhūmi (十地, ten stages of Bodhisattvaship).

Sāmānyalakshana, 139, 共相, generality, or those marks that are common to all things conditioned, such as impermanence, pain, emptiness, and egolessness

Siddhānta, 40, 109, 349, 350, 宗, proposition, intuitive truth, self-relisation Drishtāntahetubhir yuktah siddhānto de-sanā katham (30—11) 云何因醫喻, 相應成悉檀(T), 譬喻因相應, 力說法云何(W), 譬因成悉檀(S) The Lankāvatāra takes special care to make a sharp distinction between ruta (letter) and artha (meaning), p 154, and 切唯是心意意識自分別起離我我所,不見外法種種諸相(T). "The Bodhisattva-mahāsattva sees that the triple world is no more than [the creation of] the citta, manas, and manovijūāna, that it is brought forth by falsely discriminating one's own mind, that there are no signs of an external world where the principle of multiplicity rules, and [finally] that it is just one's own mind "Svacittamātram traidhātukam, 243, 三界唯是自心. "The triple world is no more than one's own mind "Svacittadrisya, 180, 自心所現,manifestation of one's own mind Svacittadrisyadhārāvi-śuddhi, 179, 203 ff, 淨自心現流. Katham bhagavan svacittadrisyadhārā visudhyati yugapat kramavrittyā vā (55—4). 世事,云何淨諸衆生自心現流,為漸淨,為頓淨耶(T). Svacittadrisyamātra, 72, 179, 267, 唯自心所現,no other than the manifestation of one's own mind

Svaparmidhānādhishthāna, 140 Pūrvabuddhasvapranidhānādhishthānatah pravartate (50—6). 由醋佛自本顯力所加持故, 而得生起 (T)

Svabuddhabuddhatā, 134, 139, 自覺性, the essence of Buddhahood Deśayatu me bhagavāms tathāgato 'rhansamyaksambuddhah svabuddhabuddhatām yenāham cānye ca bodhisattvā mahāsattvās tathāgatasvakuśalā svamātmānam parāmś cāvabodhayeyuh (187—4-6). 世尊顧為我說. 如來應正等覺自覺性, 令我及諸菩薩摩訶薩, 而得善巧自悟悟他(T) "Blessed One, pray tell me about the nature of the inner enlightenment attained by the Tathagata, Arhat, Fully-enlightened One, whereby I and other Bodhisattvamahāsattvas may get properly enlightened not only for ourselves but for others"

Svabuddh, 108, 304, 自智. Svabuddhyā vāsanāśrayaparāvrittīpūrvakaḥ (155—2) 自智學界, 轉譜習氣(T). "By means of his own intelligence the Bodhisattva causes a revolution in his inmost abode where his former memory is stored"

Svabhāva, 73, 101, 111, and Ātman, 166, 268, 288, 自性,體性, rūpa, 色, material element: 2 vedanā. 受, sensation: 3 samjiiā, 福, perception or ideation, 4 samskāra, 行, formative principle; and 5 vijnāna. 證. consciousness. Skandhatā. 242. 验性, the substance of a Skandha, that which makes the Skandha what it is Skandhanam skandhata tadvat prajnaptyā na tu dravyateh (153—11) 諸滋雄假名, 亦行4頁 [74] (T) Skandha-dhātu-āyatana, 81, 98, 143, 167. 168, 194, 218, 259, 262, 321, 趋, 界, 處 The combination sums up the individual and his world The Skandbas are the constituents of an individual personality as mind and body, whereas the Dhātus and Ayatanas make up the objective world where the six Vijnanas take in each its own field of perception The eighteen Dhatus (fields or spheres) and the twelve Ayatanas (seats or abodes) are distinguished, but they are rather two different ways of classifying the same The twelve Ayatanas are mner and outer inner ones are 1 cakshuiāyatana, 眼處, 2 śiotra*, 耳處 2 śabda° 憨處. 3 gandha° 香處. 4 rasa° 味處. 5 sparshtavya°, 胸處, and 6 dharma° 法處. The eighteen Dhātus are the following six added to the twelve Ayatanas 1 calshurvijnānadhātu, 眼識界, 2 śrotravijnāna, 耳識界, 3. ghrāṇavijñāna° 身識界, 4 jihvavijñāna°, 舌酸 界, 5 kāyavijnāna°, 身識界, and 6 manovijnāna°, 意識界. Skandhebhyo nänyo nänanyas tathāgatah, (188-16), 136, 如來與蘊非異非不異 (T) "The Tathagata is neither different nor not-different from the Skandhas "

Svacitta, 272, 自心, self-mind (Cittamanomanovijāna-mātram traidhātukam samanupašyati, ātmātmīyavigatam svacittavikalpodbhavam) na ca bāhyabhāvalakshanavai-citryapatitam anyatra svacittam eva (212—7), 272, 菩薩摩訶薩, 見於三界但是自心, 心意意識離我我所法, 唯是自心分別, 不強外法種種諧相(W), 菩薩摩訶薩觀三界, 心意意識量, 離我我所, 自妄想修弦外性種種相(S), 觀察三界一 reality. Svabhāvavikalpa, 111 f, 自性分别 discrimination as regards self-nature; one of the twelve Vikalpas Svabhāvabuddha, 328, 自性佛, the Buddha as he is.

Svayam evādhīgatayāthātathyaviviktadharma, 277, 如實證 寂靜(T), 自得如實空法(S), 自身如實證法(W).

Svayambhuva, 354, 無師者 (T), 自覺者 (S), 自在者 (W), self-existing one as one of the Buddha's epithets.

Svalakshana (=svabhāva), 135, 139, 自相, individuality, or individual marks which distinguish one class of beings from another; for instance, matter has its own characteristics as distinguished from mind, and mind from matter, and so on The following combinations are quite frequent, Svalakshanasāmānyalakshana, 116, 自相與其相, Svasāmānyalakshana, 168, 304, 140, 143, 158 f, 自其相.

Svasiddhānta, 98, 100, 自悉檀, self-realisation Bodhisattvena mahāsattvena svasiddhāntakusalena bhavitavyam (43—12,13) 菩薩摩訶薩於自悉檀應善修學(T), 證菩薩 摩訶薩修行自內法故(W)

Svahetulakshana, 303, 因自性, self-cause-character, that is, reality Vägvikalpamätram hi mahāmate śaśavishānam svahetulakshanābhāvat (61—7) (外道常不思議) 唯是分别, 但有言說 何故, 彼因同於更角, 無自因相故(S). "It is no more than mere verbal discrimination, Mahāmati, it is the hare's horn, there are no real signs of selfhood"

Hasta, 292, 353, 手, hand.

Hetu, 40, 165, 192, 307, 323, 因, cause, antecedent, condition; reason, principle The combination, "hetupratyaya," meaning causation or causality, is frequently met with Hetu and Pratyaya are really synonymous, though they are differently enumerated, that is, six Hetus and four Pratyayas In this case, Hetu is regarded as a more intimate and efficient agency of causation than a Pratyaya. Other synonyms are kāraṇa, nidāna, and nimita The six causes (hetu) are 1. Kāraṇahetu, 常行因, the reason that makes

The term is used in the Lankavatara at least in two senses. When it means self-substance making up the substratum of the individual being, it is synonymous with Atman and Pudgala. This may be seen from such phrases as "svabhāvasūnyatā," 自性空, or "nihsvabhāvāh," 一切法無自 It also means the reason or suchness of existence, in 件 which case it is identical with Tathata Svabhavo 'nupalabdhih tathatālakshanam(228—13),自性不可得,是如如 "The self-nature unattainable is the mark of suchness " Further, svabhāva is used in the sense of "nature" or "what makes up the being of a thing" Butam evartha itı rutasvabhāvāparııñānāt (193—16). 是人不了言音自性, 謂言即卷 "It is owing to his not perfectly understanding the nature of words that he regards them as identical with the sense." Seven forms of Syabhāva are enumerated, but as no explanation is given of them, it is impossible to know what they really signify (39-9-12) · 1 samudayasvabhāva. 集自性, collection or aggregate; 2 bhāvasvabhāva, 性自性, being. existence: 3 lakshanasvabhāva, 相自性 sign, symbol, 4 mahābhūtasvabhāva, 大種自性, the elements, 5 hetusvabhāva. 因自性 cause, reason; 6. pratyayasvabhāva, 綠自性, condition, causation; and 7 nishpattisvobhāva, 成自性, perfection As regards the three Svabhāvas, see below. Svabhāvam ekam desemı tarkavijäaptivarjitam (. svabhāvadvayavarntam, 267— 13,14),277 我唯說一性,離於妄計度,自性無有二..(T). 我說一質法, 離於諸覺觀 離二法體相(W) Svabhāvatraya or svabhāvalakshanatraya, 29 f, 66, 154, 157, 161, 168, 194, 211, etc, 三自性(相) Svabhāvadvaya 18 also mentioned (pp 99 f) as regards our attachment to words (abhilāpa, 言說) and things (vastu, 諸法) when they are imagined as having the signs of self-nature or reality Generally, the two Syabhavas in the Lankavatara refer to the first two of the three Svabhāvas, which are 妄 計性, parikalpita, imagination, and 依他起性, paratantra,

INDEX

Akāsagarbha Bodhisattva, 直空設 善蹇, 311.

Akshobhya Buddha,阿尔佛, 309, 356 Akthobhya, Sutra of the Land of, M 斑佛圖框, 356.

Amalaka. 森(阿)穿勒果, 106, 263 Amitābha, 阿號陀佛, 28, 309, 332, 256.

Amra, 卷题果, 207

Angulumāla, or Angulumātika Sūtra, 指美經, 5, 368

Anu (atom). 餐座 or 極微, 139, 156, 187, 264, 270, 298

Āryamanjeirīmūlakalpa, the, 建文 森舞利根本藝軌, 23

Asanga, ##, 181, 289, 278, 308, 316

Ashtasahasrıka-prajflaparamıla Sütra, 八千项般若径, 3, 95, 215, quoted 842ff.

Asoka garden, 無憂阂, 69, 71.

Asura, 阿懿羅, 39.

Aśvaghosha, 寒咳, 10, 182, 282.

Atom, see Anu

Avalokitesvara, 数世音, 356, 365n Avatamsaka school, 華麗宗, 6n, 55 Avatamsaka Sidra, the, 華獻極, 4. 6n, 8, 89, 95 f, 103 181, 223n, 224, 357.

Awakening of Faith in the Mahayana, the, 大聚起信益, 182, 282, 334

Baby, 109 Barren woman's child, 石女之子

(bandhyāputra), 72, 117, 134, 306 Bendall, Cecil, 125n, 223n.

Bharshayya guruva rdurya prabhasatathāgata Sūtra,秦師琉璃光如來經。 356

Brographies of the High Priests. (唐 高信傳), 44, 45.

Bodhicitta, on the Awakening of. 發菩提心盤。126n.

Bodhidharma, 菩提達廳, 11, 44ff, 46. 48, 50, 52, 59, 64, 89, 90, 102, 104,

Bodhiruci, 菩提成支, 6, 6n, 7, 9n, 10,

Bodhisattva, and Nirvana, 218ff. Brahma, creator, 270, 342, 354

Bubble, 117, 268

Buddha-mind, 47.

Buddhapravacanahridaya, the, 🥵 弱心(経), 20.

Buffaloes (mahsha), 150.

Bull-king (orishabha), 4.E. 354.

Burnouf, M. E., 125n

Bulsugoshin Ron, the, 佛語心論 44n. 84.

Candle-light 167.

Catalogue of the Buddhist Literature of Great T'ang, 大意內臭錄, 5. Cataract, of the eye, B (timira), 72, 120.

Ceylon, 3

Champaka, 游遊花色, 204. Chang-an, 長安, 9, 11

Chang-shuo, 提致, 60

Chia-chih-li, 加持力, 203

the existence of anything possible, 2 Sahabhā'. 俱有因, the law of mutuality, that is, the state of being mutually conditioned: 3 Vināla". 黑熱因, the law of retribution, or fruition; 4. Samprayukta*, 和版因, the law of association, 5. Sarvairaga°. 獨行因, the law of generality, which is applicable to certain mental qualities making the common ground for others; and 6 Sabhāga*. 同類因, the law that like produces like The Lankavatara gives another group of six Hetus, pp 83 f· 1 Bhavishyaddhetu. 常有因. the possibility of anything becoming cause to others; 2 Sambandha", 相区因, mutual dependence: 3 Lakshana", 相因, uninterrupted continuity of signs. 4 Kārona*, 能作因, a causal agency that wields supreme power like a great king: 5 Vyaniana. 順了因, the condition in which things are manifested as if illumined by a light; and 6 Upekshā', 取待因, the law of discontinuation.

Hetuvikalpa, 111 f, 因分別, one of the twelve wrong discrim-

Hetupratyaya, 122, 因緣, causation, also one of the four secondary causes which are 1 Hetupratyaya, 因緣, the general law of causation, 2 Samanantara*, 次第緣, (or 等無問緣), condition governing the succession of events, 3 Alambana*, 所緣緣, condition of becoming an object of cognition, and 4. Adhipati*, 增上緣, =Kāranahetu, the "supreme" condition.

124, 134, 301, 302 n, 306. Hastrkalshya Sutra, 象脑輕, 368 Herb, medicinal, 256 Hgos, 12 History of Orthodox Buddhism, # 門正統、49 Honey, 171. Horse, 26, 136 Hridava-hsin. 鼓栗太心, 42 Hsi-chi (vāsanā), 習氣, 128, 178 See under väsanä in the Glossary Hau-ta Ssü, 经多带, 14 Hsuan-chuang, 玄奘, 6n, 8n, 55, 343 n Houan-s. the. 玄雜, 42, Hsun-hsu, 震智, 178 Hun-k'é, 禁可, 5, 11, 45, 47, 48, 50, 51, 52 ff, 90 Hui-kwan, 沙艇, 7, 7n, 52. Hui-neng, $18, 6 n, 46, 54, 61 f, 62 n. 63 Hur-yu, or Tao-yu, 禁育, 近常, 52, Hui-yuan, 类选, 10

Idzum, Hokei, 65, 230 n Indra, 医陀羅, 79, 292, 351 Ishihama, Juntaro, 13 n Iśvara, 自在天, 130, 139, 156, 187, 264, 270, 293, 354 I-tsing, 義淨, 15, 310, 314 n

Hung-jen, 资格山弘忍, 54, 59

Jan-ohiu, 再录, 58.
Jar, 26, 27, 81

Jātaka Ta'es, 本生函, 330

Jēn-t'ien Yen-mu, the, 人天殿目, 48, 50

Jīānagupta, 陽那頻多, 314 n.

Joy, stage of, 默章地 (pramudītā), 24

Ju-lai, 如來, 341.

Ju-lêng-chra hein heilan-1, 入榜伽心 玄奘, 6n, 7

Kar-huang Catalogue of the Tripitaka, the, 期皇餘. 42 Kar-yuan Lu, 寬元錄, 4, 5, 8n. Kāla (tɪme), 時, 156, 187, 270 Kalavınka bırd, 如陵街湖, 852 Kalinga, 剱陵迦, 93 Kanakamuni, 拗那合伞尼, 351 Kan-chou, 甘州, 14 Kanjur, 12, 14 Kapila, 海尾羅, 354 Kāsyapa, 迦菲佛, 351 Kegon-kyo, 華嚴經, 230 Kern, H., 125n, 310n Kettle-drum, 256, Kinnara, 緊那腦, 79 Kokwan Shiren, 虎腳師錄, 19n, 44 Krakucchanda, Buddha, 拘留孫係, 851 Kshitigarbha Bodhisattva, 地殼菩薩。 310, 356 Kehringarbha Sūtra, the. 地遊經, 310. 356 Kumārajīva, 地摩羅什 (童苺), 19 Kumbhakarna, 獎耳, 69 Ku-tsang, 姑被, 4

經), 3
Lamp, 260, 298
Land of Bliss, or of Happiness, 極 榮, 23, 24
Language, 106 ff
Lankā, 楞伽, 3, 66
Lankāhridaya, the, 楞伽松, 42.
Lantern, 120; word-lantern, (ruta-pradīpa), 109
Lēvi, Sylvain, 106 n, 125 n, 228, 278, 309n.
Lightning, 115, 268

Lalita-vistara, the,普曜經(大遊戲

Chiang Chih-chi, 蔣之奇, 56年, 57年, 1 61, 63, Ohi-fêng, 纸架, 10 Chih-huan Ssŭ. 武证会. 7 Chih-yuan Catalogue, the, 至元餘 15 Chin-ch'an Ssu, 清乘寺, 8 Chiu-shih, 久视, 8 Chos-grub, 12, 13, 14, Chuang-tzu. #FF. 333 Clay, 133 Cloud, 167, 268 Cocoon, 349 Conch-shell, 171, 256 Cow. 26, 136 Creator, It's (kārana), 193 Crocodiles, 150

Dašabhumela, 十地拉, 3, 106, 195, 223n, 224, 225, 228, 228
Deer, 165, 291, 246
Dhāranī, 於羅尼, 17
Dhavmākara, 法該菩薩, 205
Dharmālakshana school, 法相崇, 89
Dharmāraksha, 桑純激, 4, 311n
Diamond, 199
Diamond Sūtra, the, 金剛極 (『ajrac-chedekā], 19n, 341
Divākara, 地邊遊腦, 6n
Dream, (svapna), 34, 72, 96, 127, 178, 210, 267, 271, 290, 304, 306, 350

Eastern Buddhist, the, 92n Echo, 120, 127, 268, 117. Ekayāna school, 一乘数, 54 Elephants, 150, 351 Eternalism, 常見 (śāśvatadarśwna), 35 f. 123

Fa-chang, 法成, 13. Fa-ch'ung, 法神, 51 ff, 55, 61, 68 Fa-lan, 法藥, 10

Fa-tsang, 法藏, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 42, 63, 65, 217. Fang-yen, 方質, 9n Fata morgana, 72 Fên-tuan, 分段(生死), 212 Finger, or Finger-tip, 106 n, 109, 109 n. 195 Fire, 81, 129, 150 f. 167, 327, 367 Fire-wheel, or Fire-circle. (alătacakra), 72, 117, 268, Fishes, 150 Flower, 85 f, 171 Fly. 167. Fo Shou-chi Ssǔ, 佛授配寺, 8. Four Noble Truths, the, 四聖詩, 126 n Fruit, 171. Fuel, 256 Fu-li, 復職, 9

Gandavyüha, the, (入法界品), 3, 23, 96, 230 n Gandharva, 乾闥婆, 72, 79, 98, 124, 266, 267, 271, 294 Ganges, 恒何, 118, 148, 318; sands of the, 228 Garment, (vastra), 256 Gem (mans), 105 Genko Shalusho, the, 元字释香, 处, 64 Ghee, 151. Ghost, the walking, 167 Gold, 161, 199, 255 Gridhraktita, Mount, 经效率, 91 f. Gunabhadra, 求那跋陀羅, 4, 5, 7, 10, 11, 18, 48, 52, 142 Gunas, the six, 131

Harr-net, or harr-carcle, 毛拉 (keśondukam), 81, 117, 288, 271 Haneda, Toru, 13 n Hare's horns 史角 (śaśavshāņa), Porpoises, 150
Potter, 138, 145 n.
Pradhāna, 跨性 or 跨妙, 139, 156, 187, 270, 293, 354
Prajāpati, 滦生主, 284
Prajūā, 穀若三藏, 230
Prajūāpāramutā Sūtra, the, 94, 95, 103, 239, 283, 285, 296, 338 n, 357.
Precious stone, 131, 255.
Purandara, 能蔵物者 (Wei), 292
Purusha, 士夫 187.

Rajendralāla Mitra, 285
Ral-pa-can, 13
Rāmacandra, 16
Rāmāyana, 16.
Rat, 362
Rāvaņa, 孤葉那王, 3, 4, 66 ff
Records of the Transmission of the Lamp, 傳養錢, 45, 46, 47.
rGya, 12, 16, 37, 66 ff, 102, 267.
Rope, 158
Rouse, W. H. D., 125 n, 223 n
RyōgakyōKōyoku,the,褒伽輕疑翼,64

Saddharma-pundarile, the, 法律經 3, 89, 91, 125 n, 310, 314 f, 356, 365 n. Sakra, 帝釋, 66 ff, 292, 342 Sakrendra, 释提桓因, 370 Sakurabe, Bunkyō, 12 n. Šākyamuni, 释迦平尼, 92. Salt, 171. Samādharāja, the, 三昧王極, 3 Samantabhadra, Bodhisattva, 普及 善盛, 96, 107, 280. Samdhi-nirmosana Sutra, 無深密経, Sankhys, the, 對於, 44, 156 n, 357. Santideva, 宴天, 125 n San Yang palace, 三路宫, 10. Sarana, 空刺那, 68.

Sārīputra. 全利弗. 215 f Seed, (viya), 81, 129, 167, 176, 249, 258, 260 Seng-lang, 僧朗, 8n Sha-chou. 沙州、14. Shadow, 127, 350 Sheep. 26 Shen-hsiu, 耐秀, 6n, 60, 61 f. Shih-yuan, 密顧, 205 Shōtoku, prince, 聖總太子, 263 n Šikshānanda, 宿沙麓陀, 4, 6 n, 7, 8, 14, 48, 65, 126 n, 836 f Salshasamuccaya, the, 菩薩大乘學 纸輪, 125 n. 228 n. Silkworm, 113, 349 Bimbasandasa, 阿子奴王 (Wei), 即子 蘇陀婆王 (Sung), 870. Sky, 161, 290, 298, 367. Snake, 158 Soma, 蘇摩, 354 Šraddhutpāda, the, 据信論, 55 Srīmālā, queen, 勝鬘夫人, 283. Srimālā sūtra, 跨婁經, 5 Srīgālamātrī, 庭子母堂, 289 Sthuramatı, 安徽, 106 n, 278, 282. Stream, 167, 260 Subhuti, 須善提, 283, 341, 342 年. Sudbana, 善財宣子, 230 Sugar, 257 Suka, 縣塾, 68 Sukhāyatī, 極難, 28, 24 Sukhāvatīnyūha, the, (無量審理), 89. 92 f, 125 n, 126 n, 356, 357. Sumeru, Mount, 須彌山, 39, 92, 234. Sun, 171, 173. Sunetra, 德熙, 851. Suralamkāra, the, 莊嚴經論, 110. 125 n, 186 n, 228 n, 278, 280 Su Tung:per, 孫東坡, 6 n, 56, 63. Suramaprabhāsa Sūtra, the, 金光明 挺. 3, 15, 92, 240, 310, 311, 314f. Swedenborgians, 331, Lin-t6, 終稅, 5n.

Lions, 150
Lokáyata, the, 路邊耶稅, 44, 357, 369.
Lo-yang, 洛陽, 8.
Lunar reflection, 156, 210.
Lute, 256

Machine, 167. Madhyamika, the, 中观宗, 164, 170, 239, 285, 300, 353 Magic formulas, 121; Magical art, 320 , Magical creation, 267, 306; Magical figures, 294 . Magician, 144, 161 Mahāmegha Sūtra, the, 大氢铵, 868 Mahāparınırvāna Sutra, the, 大穀理 数輕, 4 Mahāwulpatts, the,終評名義集,218n. Mahäyana-parısamgraha-śāstra, the, 採大樂論, 53, 239 Mahāyānasūlraiamkāra, the, 大乘莊 股經論。309 n Mahoraga、 京康延伽 (大跛行), 79 Makara, ƣ, 68. Malaya, Mount, 建亚东, 66 f, 102. Man, 滋養師, 51 Mandhatri, king, 浸陀轉給王 (Sung), 顶生王 (Wer and T'ang), 351 Marici, mirage, 96 Ma-t'eng, 座脞. 10 Ma-tsu, 鸟椒, 46, 47, 60. Max Muller, 125 n. Maya, XJ, 72, 96, 97, 100, 114, 115, 116, 118, 121, 122, 123, 124, 127, 132, 156, 160, 210, 225, 271, 290, 350 Milk, 171. Mirage, 100, 117, 127, 156, 271, 291

See also Marici

Mirror, 190, 195, 210.

Murror-image, 117, 133, 173, 268,

Mi-t'o-shan, MFEili, 9, 42. Mitsut, Shoshi, 65 Monkey, 167 Moon, 108 n, 109, 120, 195, 204, 205, 222, 243, 327, 355

Na. 泖潭部. 51 Naga, Mills. 79 Nagahvaya, Muy. 24 Nāgārjuna, 旅街, 23, 42, 168, 239, 316, 320 Nakano, Gisho, 64 Nakano, Tatsuye, 63 Nan-che-chu-p'an, 南述伊數區, 42 Nanjo, Bunyū, 3, 13, 90 Nāraka, 姿落點, 243 Nihilism, 斯見 (ucchedavāda), 34, 35 f 123 Nihon Darcokyo, Explanatory Notes to the. 日本大藏經解題, 64 Mirvāna Sutra, the, 理槃挺, 218n, 368

Ocean, 171, 188, 190, 192, 198, 200, 247, 360 Oil, 151. Omura, Seigai, 64

Painter, 174.
Painting, 268
Pal-lha-bisan-po, 18
Pao-lin Chuan, the, 安林傳, 45, 48
Pao-yun, 安宏, 7, 7 n
Paramartha, 武餘三藏, 810, 836 f.
Parrot, 351
Peacock, 181
Pelliot P, 13 n
Phantom creation, 167
Physician, 174
Picture, 116, 174, 367
Plantain tree, 350
Plaything, 164

Tan-fu-henen Seŭ, 大福先告, 10 Tax-t'ang Ner-tren Lu, 大唐內典錄, 5 Takakusu, Junjiro, 278, Ta-kuan Tan-ying, 注款委員, 48ff. Tālānga tree, 多疑樹, 79. Tao-an 五安, 10 Tan Yang, 丹码, 7 Tao-chan, 点拱, 8 n Tao-hsuan, 遊업, 5, 44, 51, 56 Taoists. 331. Tao-yuan. A.K. 45 Tathāgataguhya Sūtra, the, 如來秘 密枢, 3, 110 n. Theatre, 251 Theosophists, 331 Thorn. 131 Then-tal philosophy, 49 ff Tokugan, Yoson, 德殿美存, 64 Tortoise, 124, 150 Tree, reflected in water, 117, 268 Trimsilavijnaptikārika, the, 吼說 三十項, 106n, 108n, 279n, 280, Tse T'ien, the Empress, 則天武局, 6n, 7, 8, 10, 48 Tu-hua-lo, 吐火糍, 9, 42. Tun-huang, 承热, 14 Tushita, 都率天, 141 Twelvefold Chain of Origination. + 二因株, 126 n Tzű-lu, 子路, 58

Udumbara, 在吴華, 149 f Ummon, 委門, 57 Upendra, 79

Vaiseshika, the, 衛性節題 (膀論), 44 Vajracchedikā, the, 金剛松若經, 56, 59, 60 ff, 95 Vajragarbha, 金剛巌, 204, 226 f Vasubandhu, 世親, 106 n, 126, 181, 278 任.

Vedalı, 吠陀利, 24

Vijnaptimātratasiddhi, the, 成唯職 論, 278

Vimalakīrti Sūtra, the, 推摩極, 89

Vishnu, 巴和, 854

Vulture, Mount, Holy, 愛養山, 814

Vyāsa, 晚耶娑, 351

Water, 161.
Water-drawing wheel (ghatiyantra), 156
Waves, 171, 190, 192, 200, 201 247.
Wên hui, 文章, 13, 14
Wheel, 167
Wind, 167, 171, 188, 196
Wogihara, Unrai, 219 n, 278
Womb, and its contents, 256
Wood, piece of, 360
Wooden man, or mechanical man, 未入 (yantrapurusha), 117
Word-lamp, 語音器 (rutapradīpa), 349

Yakusan, 泰山, 57
Yamakamı, Sögen, 65
Yang-shan Chı, 仰山家, 48 f
Yen-chang, 延昌, 10
Yogācāra school, 瑜伽宗, 54, 89, 94, 103, 170, 179, 181, 182, 239, 278, 280, 281, 309, 353, 316
Yıan-chia, 元素, 7, 10
Yüeh-shan, see Yakusan
Yun-men, see Ummon
Yung-nêng Ssü, 永寧寺, 8
Yung-t'ang Ssü, 永唐寺, 14
Yu-t'nen, 干閒, 8, 42, 48

Zen Buddinsm, Essays in, 17 n